WASHINGTON WINS, 4 TO 3, AND TAKES LEAD IN SERIES

With Bases Full and Three Balls on Batter, Relief Pitcher Marberry Checks Pittsburg in Ninth.

APPARENT HOME RUN CAUGHT IN STANDS

Outfielder Rice of the Senators Grabs Ball Out of Laps of Spectators—Coolidge Attends.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Washington, in a sensational finish, won the third game of the world's series from Pittsburg today, 4 to 3, before President Coolidge and a crowd of 36,500 that shivered in a frigid gale. The victory gave the Senators a lead of two games to one.

The Senators won the game with a batting rally in the seventh inning, in which Joe Harris drove home Stanley Harris with what proved to be the deciding tally, but only the most marvelous sort of defensive work saved the game for the Senators in the eighth and ninth innings, both of which were packed with thrills that almost brought warmth to the shivering but thrilled thousands.

Sam Rice a Hero.

Sam Rice was the hero in the eighth with a spectacular one-handed catch of Earl Smith's smashing drive, plucking the ball out of the laps of spectators in the right-center field stands and cutting off what seemed a certain home run.

Fred Marberry, relief pitcher, then added the finishing thrill to the picture in the ninth by forcing "Pie" Traynor to hit a long fly to McNeely after filling the bases with two out and first giving Traynor three straight balls.

Manager McKechnie of the Pirates planned to protest today's victory of Washington, contending that Rice dropped Smith's fly after falling into the stands, but abandoned the plan after a conference with Commissioner Landis. The Commissioner held that since a question of fact was involved no protest could be considered, since the umpire's decision—in this case that of Charles Rigler—could not be reversed off the field. The Pirate manager was prepared to submit affidavits by several fans to support his contention.

No pitcher ever faced a tougher situation than Marberry in that hectic inning. Singles by Moore and Carey and a wild toss that hit Cuyler quickly filled the bases with only one out, but with a Pirate onslaught imminent, the big relief moundsman forced Barnhart to lift a high one to Ruel. This brought up Traynor and there was a groan from the crowd as Marberry failed to locate the plate on three straight throws. One more ball would have forced in the tying run, but Marberry pulled himself together, shot two perfect strikes across the plate as Traynor's bat rested on his shoulder, then put another in the groove, which the Pirate star drove to center. McNeely came in fast, got the ball neatly and the victory was won.

This was the climax of the most exciting game of the series and puts the Senators in a commanding position, with their big ace, Walter Johnson slated to go back for the fourth game tomorrow.

The Senators played without the services of their star third baseman, Ossie Bluege, but they came through brilliantly toward the end after a shaky start.

Victory for Ferguson.

Alex Ferguson was credited with the pitching victory, although he gave way to a pinch hitter in the seventh, when the Senators staged their decisive rally and yielded the mound to Marberry.

Ray Kremer pitched the entire game for the Pirates but weakened toward the end, particularly in the sixth when Goose Goslin rammed out his first home run of the series and again in the seventh.

The Pirates scored in the second on Traynor's triple and Wright's sacrifice fly, increased their lead in the fourth when Cuyler, after doubling, scored on Barnhart's single, and again in the sixth when an error by Peckinpaugh paved the way for Wright to tally on hits by Smith and Kremer.

MORGAN'S DINNER AND BED PREPARED DAILY IN LONDON

His House Operates at Full Tilt Even When He Is in America.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—J. P. Morgan is in London again, and, as is usual whenever the newspapers announce that the American financier is visiting the city, hundreds of inquiries have been made for him at the downtown hotels, beginning several days before he was due to arrive.

These inquiries for the most part are made by cranks and the curious or by persons who desire a small advance to see a talented son or daughter through school of art or music or something of the sort. Many letters also arrive for Mr. Morgan at the larger hotels, usually labeled "personal," and these are forwarded to the proper address, where they are looked over by one of Morgan's numerous secretaries. Few of these letters are seen by the financier himself, as he has a code system by which letters from persons from whom he really wants to hear are marked.

As a matter of fact, Morgan, who arrived here a few days ago, is never seen in London hotel lobbies and only seldom in cafes and restaurants, as he has a residence at 12 Grosvenor Square, which runs full tilt whether he is here or in New York. The Morgan residence has a full staff of servants the year around. Every evening the dining table is made ready for dinner and every night the covers of Mr. Morgan's bed are turned back, the curtains drawn, then lights turned on and an ash tray and book placed beside the bed, although the owner may be 3000 miles away.

TWO DRAKE HOTEL ROBBERS SENTENCED TO HANG DEC. 11

One Makes Move at Prosecutor as They Are Led From Chicago Courtroom.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Judge Jacob M. Hopkins in the Criminal Court, today sentenced Jack Woods, alias Wilson, and Joseph W. Holmes, alias Jack Hill, to be hanged for the sensational Drake Hotel robbery and the murder of Frank B. Rodkey, July 29.

Unless the Supreme Court, the Governor or an "insanity jury" interferes, the hangman's noose, on Dec. 11, will end the career of the two rovers who staged the most daring robbery in the history of Chicago.

Woods and Holmes were shackled together in court because of remarks they made that "they would get even." Extra bailiffs guarded them.

GREAT WELCOME FOR WALES

Many Persons Gather in London to Greet Prince.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1925.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—When the Prince of Wales arrives next week, he will find awaiting him a national tribute which in many ways will be the most remarkable reception ever offered him upon his return to his native shores. His family and friends, and many others are already thronging into London to greet the hero of a thousand adventures in strange climes.

In society gossip was furious on the subject of the Prince's possible marriage. In some quarters it is stated categorically that the Prince will announce his engagement before Christmas, while others declare that he has no intention of making a match within the next year.

FLEEING ROBBER DROPS $8000

South Dakota Pioneer With Rifle Routs Five Men Looting Bank.

By the Associated Press.

FORT PIERRE, S. D., Oct. 10.—Discovered while looting the Fort Pierre National Bank in broad daylight here today, five robbers were forced to flee under gunfire of a pioneer, dropping $8000 of their loot and escaping with about $3000.

Joe Depner, in company with a dozen citizens, hurried to his store for his rifle and opened fire. Two robbers returned the fire. Other citizens fled, but Depner stood his ground. The bearer of the loot came within range of the flying bullets and was wounded, dropping all but $3000 of the money. The robbers attempted to recover the dropped money and valuables but were forced to retire under the fire of Depner.

GRAND JURY ACTS ON RUMOR OF FIRE APPARATUS BRIBE

Subpenas Issued for Two Aldermen and Public Safety Head to Appear for Questioning Tuesday.

BROD AMPLIFIES PREVIOUS REMARK

Says Young Man Approached Him Regarding Exchange of Old Auto for New One.

Coincident with the announcement yesterday of issuance of subpenas for a grand jury investigation Tuesday of the rumors of bribe offers in connection with the purchase by the city of fire fighting equipment, Director of Public Safety Brod elaborated, in a public statement, on his recent remark that he had been offered a costly automobile in connection with the awarding of the contract.

One of the subpenas was for Director Brod and others were for Aldermen Udell and Wander, the former having repeated statements Director Brod made to him and the latter having merely expressed his opinion that there "was a lot of graft" in the deal.

Although naming the concern from which he said the bribe offer came indirectly, Director Brod did not reveal the name of the man who he said conveyed it to him, describing him as "a young man I have known a long time."

Contract Awarded.

Shortly after the issuance of the subpenas and the statement by Director Brod, President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service and Supply Commissioner Dietz, two of the three members of the Board of Standardization, awarded the contract to the American LaFrance Co. of New York. In doing so they obeyed orders issued Friday by Mayor Miller, who directed that that concern be given the contract. Comptroller Nolte, the third member of the Board, was not present, having previously announced he would have nothing to do with the letting of the award.

Director Brod's statement on the supposed bribe offer was:

"About two weeks before the Board of Standardization passed on the specifications a young man I had known a long time came to see me, saying he had been sent by Mr. Huthsing, an officer of the General Manufacturing Co., Eighteenth and Pine streets, to tell me that if his company, which represents the Pierce Arrow fire fighting equipment, could get an order from the city for one pumper, it would be glad to exchange my old Cadillac car for a Cadillac sedan.

"This young man talked to me about 9:30 o'clock in the morning and told me that Huthsing would be in to see me between 11 and 12 o'clock. I told my friend I would have nothing to do with the matter and that he should have nothing to do with it.

"Mr. Huthsing came into my office between 11 and 12 o'clock, but there was no mention of the matter my young friend had broached. We discussed the contract for the pumpers and I told him that if the specifications were drawn so that he could bid, he could bid like anybody else.

Bids Were Rejected.

"His company made bids, but they were rejected because the Pierce Arrow equipment could not meet a requirement of the specifications that the successful bidder must have had equipment in successful operation for two years. The Pierce Arrow equipment has just come onto the market."

Charles K. Huthsing is secretary treasurer of the General Manufacturing Co., 1801 Pine street. In a statement to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday afternoon, he declared he never requested any one to intercede with Brod in behalf of himself or his company.

Referring to a statement attributed to the young man mentioned by Director Brod, Huthsing said: "I know the man but casually and never authorized him or anyone else to make any offer to Mr. Brod, either of an automobile or anything else. Our bid, $54,000 for five apparatus, was submitted by an officer of our concern other than myself and I had very little to do with the transaction. I met Mr. Brod after the bids were submitted but we did not discuss fire apparatus."

Under the award yesterday, the contract for five pumpers went to the second lowest bidder. The bids were: Stutz, $51,450; American La France, $53,500 and Ahrens-Fox, $64,250.

The Ahrens-Fox equipment has

$683,000 WOOLWORTH GEMS MAY BE RETURNED TODAY

New York Police Offered a Proposition "If There Are No Questions Asked."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The two strings of pearls and other jewelry, in all valued at $683,000, which was stolen from Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue at the Hotel Plaza Sept. 30, may be returned tomorrow.

Although the police were silent on the subject, it was learned tonight that information had reached them that the robbers would be willing to return the jewels if nothing further would be done to solve the mystery of their disappearance.

It was understood that insurance interests had made overtures. The gem thieves balked at disposing of the pearls, because of their unusual size. They are believed to be in another state, probably New Jersey, from which place the "feeler" was put out.

A private detective agency, which has figured before in the return of stolen jewels, acting in the interest of insurance companies, was mentioned in connection with the reported offer to return the pearls.

SHIP STANDING BY VESSEL DISABLED ON HIGH SEAS

Cameronia Picked Up Distress Signals—Coast Guard Officials Say Craft Is Not CG-238.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A radio call from the steamship Cameronia, saying she was standing by an unidentified vessel disabled on the high seas about 200 miles east of Nantucket lightship, was received here tonight by the wireless station of the Radio Corporation of America.

The message stated the craft was sending distress signals. The Cameronia gave her latitude as 40.18 north, longitude 71.07 west.

Coast Guard officials here said they did not think the vessel in distress was CG-238, reported to be adrift in a gale 100 miles off the Massachusetts coast. They said the Coast Guard patrol boat was to the north of the other ship. Two destroyers and two cutters have reported that they are on the way to the assistance of the CG-238.

PLANE PASSENGER KILLED IN CRASH AT LAMBERT FIELD

Lieut. Clarence Bohm Was Unable to Free Himself When Controls Jammed in Attempted Landing.

PILOT ESCAPED BY PARACHUTE LEAP

Lieut. Nelson Unhurt by 150-Foot Jump, Thought Companion Had Saved Himself by Same Means.

First Lieut. Clarence Boehm, a National Guard flying officer, was instantly killed when the controls of an army airplane in which he was riding as observer became jammed and the ship crashed at Lambert-St. Louis Field shortly after noon yesterday.

The pilot of the ship, First Lieut. Fred C. Nelson of the regulars, leaped from the disabled craft and made a safe landing with his parachute. Lieut. Boehm did not use his parachute, although the pilot had called to him to leave the ship. His body was badly burned in the fire following the crash.

Lieut. Boehm met his death in a test flight of Lieut. Nelson's DH-4 which had recently been re-rigged. Lieut. Nelson expressed the opinion last night that the jamming of the controls was caused by the collapse of a rear strut, or wooden brace, on the extreme left side of the ship, extending from the lower to the upper wing.

Strut Fouls Aileron.

"We were at 1000 feet altitude and I was preparing to land the ship when the plane became unmanageable," Lieut. Nelson said. "We had come across the field from the south and I had intended to turn back into the south wind to set the ship down.

"I banked the plane at a right angle to the ground just north of the field to swing into the wind. It failed to respond when I tried to set it back on an even keel. The controls had jammed. I looked out to the left wing, then pointing toward the ground, and saw that the rear strut in the left outer bay had broken and fouled the aileron.

"I knew then that there was no hope of setting the ship down safely, but I was not worried for our lives because both of us had new type parachutes and they are absolutely reliable.

Told Companion to Jump.

"I cut the motor and stood up in the front cockpit. We were sailing with one wing down rapidly losing altitude. I turned around to Boehm who was also rising from his seat.

"'Let's get out of this,' I called to him. 'This is just what parachutes are made for.' He stood up then in the cockpit and I could see him reaching for the ring on the end of his parachute rip cord.

"I made sure that I had a grip on my rip cord ring and swung one leg over the edge of the cockpit. The ship had settled then to less than 200 feet altitude. I jumped and when I was clear of the ship, I pulled the rip cord.

Body Burned in Wreck.

"The chute opened at once but I was so close to the ground that I did not have time to flex my knees and I landed stiff-legged, getting a pretty good jolt. My first thought was to look up and see if Boehm was coming down. When I did not see him in the air I looked around, thinking he had jumped ahead of me. It never occurred to me that he had failed to go over the side.

"I had landed about 100 yards north of the National Guard hangar and the ship crashed down a short distance from me. A bunch of men came running toward the plane.

"'Where's Boehm?' I shouted. 'He landed somewhere around here.' Someone called out that he was in the wreck and then for the first time I realized that he had not jumped. Several of the men made an effort to pull him from the wreck, but fire burst out as soon as the ship crashed and it was impossible to reach him."

One of the enlisted men reported that Boehm was apparently dead before the fire burst out. His body was still in the cockpit of the ship when it crashed.

Both Licensed Pilots.

Lieut. Nelson said last night that the DH-4, now an obsolescent type of military aircraft, may have been weakened by a severe storm which it weathered this summer at Minneapolis. He said the ship was inspected after the storm and found in good flying shape, but expressed

James B. Duke, Tobacco Man, Who Gave $40,000,000 to Southern School, Dies at 69

Retired Manufacturer Succumbs at Home, Victim of Nervous Breakdown; Huge Interests Not Affected.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—James B. Duke, tobacco maufacturer, died at 6 o'clock tonight, at his home, after an illness of several weeks that followed a nervous and physical breakdown. He was 69 years old.

In one of his statements before death, he said his passing would have no effect on the future of his varied interests, as all were in good hands.

Duke died in the presence of his family and Dr. Robert H. Wylie, who has attended him through his long illness. The physician said that the end came as a direct result of bronchial pneumonia contracted after the breakdown.

He had fallen into a state of coma after several days of fighting for life. At times he showed such improvement it was thought he would recover.

Leaves Widow and Daughter.

He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Nanaline Holt, a daughter, Miss Doris Duke; a brother, Benjamin Newton Duke, and a niece, Mrs. Anthony P. Drexel Biddle Duke, who before her marriage was Miss Mary Duke.

Funeral services will be held at the New York home Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The body will be taken by special train to Durham, N. C., where interment will take place Tuesday afternoon in the family mausoleum.

For several years he had not taken an active part in the conduct of the many enterprises in which he was interested. Actual management was entrusted to men he had trained, although he frequently went to his New York offices and kept in close touch with business matters.

Close to Farmers.

Duke always maintained close relations with the farmers whose products he purchased. In his early years as a tobacco manufacturer, he instructed his buyers to pay the farmers enough for their crops to assure them a living, notwithstanding market conditions.

He became extensively interested in the development of hydro-electric power and established large plants in sections of his native state of North Carolina. Recently he spent large sums in an effort to discover a method of producing cheap fertilizer for the benefit of the farmer.

Last year he established the Duke Foundation, setting aside $40,000,000. Under its terms Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., changed its name to Duke University, and an active program of expansion was begun.

Crystallization of Ideals.

This was the crystallization of ideas which Mr. Duke had had in mind for many years. The trustees were empowered to expend $6,000,000 in acquiring lands, erecting buildings and otherwise extending the activities of Trinity College.

Thirty-two per cent of the income from the trust fund was given to the university and a like portion was set aside for maintaining and securing hospitals primarily in the states of North and South Carolina, and other sums for the benefit of white and negro orphans in the two states, for aiding in the construction of Methodist Episcopal churches in rural sections of North Carolina, for pensioning superannuated preachers, for the use of Davidson College at Davidson, N. C., a Presbyterian institution; for Furman University, a Baptist institution at Greenville, S. C., and for the Johnson C. Smith University for negroes at Charlotte, N. C.

New Jersey Home a Show Place.

For many years he made his home at Somerville, N. J., where he maintained an estate of some 3000 acres, which until recently was open to the public. The estate was adorned with massive bridges, more than 40 fountains and numerous statues. The trees and shrubbery were brought from all parts of the world and placed about the grounds. He also had a residence in New York City, one at Newport, R. I., known as "Rough Point," and still another at Charlotte, N. C., where he often spent the winters.

Always an ardent Republican and a believer in high tariff, Mr. Duke was a great admirer of President McKinley. A mammoth bronze statue of McKinley stands in a conspicuous position on Duke Farms, the Somerville, N. J., estate.

Born in North Carolina.

James Buchanan Duke was born in 1856 near Durham, N. C., and received his education in the county schools. His first connection with the tobacco industry began a few years after the Civil War, when his father, Washington Duke, established the plant which proved to be the nucleus of what

U. S. AGENT SUMMONED INTO FAMILY FIGHT

One of Ford Magneto Co. Owners Accused of Evading Immigration Laws.

A bitter family fight, involving possession of the Ford Magneto Co., 2610 Locust street, has reached the point where a complaint has been lodged with Immigration Inspector Nash that Carl Ford, of the firm, entered this country via Mexico, to evade formalities of Ellis Island.

Proceedings to deport Ford to Germany have been asked. Inspector Nash has taken no action in that direction, but is investigating the charges, brought by a relative.

The emigration of the Ford family from Munster, Germany, to St. Louis began in 1910, when Frank Ford came here and founded the company. His sister, Mary, and brother, John, followed, John bringing his wife, his tools and $150 capital, in 1913.

Business Expanded.

Under the management of the brothers, the business thrived and became the biggest of its kind in St. Louis, it is said.

Frank Ford died last October, and his widow, Martha, took charge of the business. John Ford sued, last July, for a receiver for and an accounting from the company, claiming his sister-in-law was denying his claim to a half partnership in it. According to his attorney, Taylor R. Young, the process of "freezing" him out of the business began before his brother's death, when another brother, Carl, was induced to come here to displace John.

Say Carl Came Over Border.

Carl was wanted here in a hurry, and it appeared there might be a year's delay if he waited for his chance to enter via Ellis Isle. It is alleged that Carl, acting on advice from relatives here, and perhaps unaware of any illegality, slipped over the Mexican border, accompanied by his wife and daughter. This was in 1920.

Carl Ford now stands in the position of an innocent bystander, who may get hit by a stone. On one side of the family fence is his brother, John, and his sister, now Mrs. Mary Artz, 3850 Washington boulevard. On the other is his sister-in-law, Mrs. Martha Ford. The latter denies that John Ford is entitled to any interest in the business.

RABBI GRODSKY AND SON FOUND GUILTY OF DRY LAW VIOLATION

Convicted by Jury on One Count With Respect to Sale of "Wine" to Federal Informer.

SENTENCE DEFERRED UNTIL TOMORROW

Maximum Punishment Is Six Months in Jail or $500 Fine—Defense Charged Frameup.

Rabbi Jacob J. Grodsky and his son, Solomon, were found guilty in Federal Judge Davis' court, yesterday, on one count of violation of the dry law with respect to the sale of "sacramental wine." After three and a half hours' deliberation, a jury adjudged them guilty of selling two cases of champagne for $110, as alleged in one count. Sentence, which carries maximum punishment of six months in jail or $500 fine, was deferred until Monday.

The Rabbi and his son were charged with selling the wine from their home at 1508 Wash street to J. H. Koplunovitch, "stool pigeon" for the Federal dry agents, as his salesman. They were released on their bonds of $2500 each.

Rabbi Last Witness.

The defense testimony was presented yesterday forenoon and Friday afternoon. Rabbi Grodsky was the last witness. He denied categorically the counts in the indictment. It was true that on the dates named in the counts he turned over to Koplunovitch certain quantities of wine, to be delivered to members of his congregation for sacramental purposes. Koplunovitch had come to him for help, and the Rabbi had told him that if he would come around every day he would let him deliver wine to the members and in that way make a little money. The Rabbi insisted he did not sell wine to Koplunocitch and never received money from him. Koplunovitch was only a messenger.

Assistant District Attorney Harlan, cross-examining, wanted to know how Koplunovitch got anything out of being a messenger. The Rabbi said the messenger's compensation was in "tips" if any. If none, then Koplunovitch was "out of luck."

Harry Karrell and Julius Pankowitz were thinking of going into partnership in junk, it developed. They went to get the Rabbi's advice about it. While they were there they heard the Rabbi tell Koplunovitch to deliver a gallon of wine to Max Wells, a member of the congregation. Cross-examination revealed that the partnership proposition fell through because Karrell wanted a bigger percentage than Pankowitz.

Karrell met Koplunovitch after the Rabbi had been arrested and chided him for causing the arrest of the good man who had been his friend.

"Did anybody hear that conversation?" asked Harlan. "Sure they did."

"Who?" "Why, he did."

"Anybody else?" "Of course."

"Who?" "Why, me."

Demurrer Sustained.

Max Wells testified that he did not receive the wine that he had ordered.

A demurrer was sustained as to one of the five counts because neither Grodsky nor his son, Solomon, jointly charged with him, were present at the time of the alleged transaction. The jury was instructed to find Solomon not guilty on two other counts because it had not been shown that he was present.

In his argument Harlan painted Grodsky as a "sacramental bootlegger," who had betrayed the Government's trust. He characterized the witnesses for the defense as friends of the Rabbi who had come to his rescue.

James Carroll, attorney for Grodsky, denounced the case as a frameup, conceived and carried out by Koplunovitch to get even with the Rabbi for refusing to help him get his brother from Russia to Canada.

Both Lee Yuen Chung and his wife have been questioned and she admitted using the name of Mrs. Sue Gum. He voluntarily went to police headquarters and submitted to being photographed, a picture being mailed to Kansas City police.

Lee Chung has a restaurant on Delmar boulevard, another in the downtown district, and a grocery-cafe at 20 South Eighth street, on the edge of Chinatown. A year ago he employed George Lee as chauffeur of his automobiles. The chauffeur was treated as a member of the family and resided at the Delmar boulevard home. Lee Chung is 57 years old and his wife is 45. George Lee was 30.

Three weeks before he was murdered, George Lee told his employer he was quitting to go to San Francisco. It now appears most of the three weeks was spent in Kansas City, where he also was known as Lee Wing of Chicago.

A building housing the Mong Chong Kee Co., Kansas City importers, was the scene of the assassination. George Lee entered the place alone and in a few minutes was shot mortally through the neck by thre other Chinese who had been playing mah jongg.

Police found in his clothing $309 and a vanity case containing a pound of jewelry, including bracelets, brooches, rings and gold pieces, and a bill-fold bearing the name of George Lee, 25 South Eighth street, St. Louis.

In his room at the Marquette Hotel, Kansas City, were found women's apparel, three telegrams from Mrs. Sue Gum of St. Louis and a certificate stating Mrs. Sue Gum was born in San Francisco in 1880.

Three Telegrams Sent.

The first telegram said: "Will be in Kansas City Friday a. m. If not there, you come to St. Louis. Lee won't give me the money."

The second telegram said the money still was lacking, and asked him to come back to St. Louis. The third message said she expected the money the next day.

The St. Louis detectives established that Mrs. Sue Gum was Lee Chung's wife and questioned her at length. She said she decided to visit a sister, Mrs. Lillie Lee, in Salt Lake City, about the time George Lee quit as chauffeur, and her husband promised her $1000 to make the trip. She did not wish to ride alone, and asked George Lee to wait for her at Kansas City and be her traveling companion to Salt Lake City, George Lee then continuing on to San Francisco. For security's sake, she said, she gave George Lee her case of jewelry and also her birth certificate.

However, her husband failed to deliver the $1000 promptly, hence the three telegrams to George Lee at Kansas City.

INDIAN LAUGHS AS HE GOES TO DEATH ON GALLOWS

By the Associated Press.

PRESCOTT, Ariz., Oct. 10.—Stepping to the gallows in a jocular mood, George Dixon Sujynamie, 26-year-old Walapai Indian, today paid the penalty for the murder of Arthur M. Cavell, taxicab driver.

The man mounted the scaffold and laughed and joked with several acquaintances. He then made a 10-minute speech, telling of the causes for his killing of Cavell. He blamed the whole affair on members of the Apache tribe and said that love for a maiden of that tribe was the cause for the crime.

COURT REFUSES WRIT IN BISHOP BROWN CASE

Denies Restraint of Heresy Sentence, but Orders Presiding Bishop to Answer Complaint.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 10.—Ordered by the Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church to appear before him Monday morning to receive sentence after conviction on charges of heresy, Bishop William Montgomery Brown today sought, through his attorneys, intervention from the United States courts.

The effort was only partially successful. Judge Louis H. Burns, United States Court of Eastern Louisiana, declined to issue a restraining order against the House of Bishops, but signed an order requiring the Presiding Bishop, the Right Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, Bishop of Bethlehem, and the House of Bishops to appear before him Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock to answer the complaint of the plaintiff. This is two days after Bishop Brown will have been deposed, if the program of the House of Bishops is carried out.

"The court is chary about interfering in matters of the internal administration or ecclesiastical bodies," Judge Burns told Joseph W. Sharts, attorney for Bishop Brown.

Involves Fundamental Law.

"Your petition obviously involves a principle laid down in the fundamental law of this country—that of complete separation of the Church and State. It is generally recognized that ecclesiastical bodies are autonomous.

"This court cannot inquire into the merits of your ecclesiastical controversy; if the court has jurisdiction, it can only inquire if the body which acted had authority under the constitution and canons of the Church to take action. I can only cite the parties against whom you are proceeding, to show cause why I may not grant the injunction prayed for. You do not show irreparable loss, so the court cannot issue a restraining order before a hearing is had. It is rather a grave thing for a secular court to attempt to say 'stop' in this matter. That might amount to abuse of authority."

Copies of the order of the court were served on Bishop Talbot at the conclusion of the day's session of the House of Bishops.

"Shall See What We Shall See."

Chancellor George Zabriskie of New York, a member of the House of Deputies, was designated to represent the presiding Bishop. He would make no comment other than to say, "we shall see what we shall see," nor would he permit Bishop Talbot to reply to questions as to plans for carrying out the deposition of Bishop Brown.

There was no indication that the presiding Bishop had made any change in the plan to pass sentence of Bishop Brown Monday morning in St. Paul's church. Bishop Brown said during the day that he did not plan to appear for sentence. Should he fail to appear, members of the House of Bishops suggested that the sentence would be passed in his absence.

George W. Wickersham, former Attorney-General of the United States, and a deputy from the New York diocese, declared that he "would not presume to anticipate the court's action," when the matter shall be called for hearing at the Federal tribunal.

JAMES B. DUKE SUCCUMBS AFTER A SHORT ILLNESS

The father took his two sons, Benjamin N. and James Duke into the business with him. When James, the younger son was 18 years of age, his father turned the active management of the business over to him. The business grew rapidly and in 1890 Mr. Duke formed the American Tobacco Company, taking in numerous other concerns.

Some years later the company was attacked as a monopoly and in 111, following suit by the government under the Sherman anti-trust law, was dissolved. Duke, who had been president of the American Tobacco Co., became chairman of the board of the British-American Tobacco Co., one of the subsidiaries, continuing in this office for several years.

Developed Water Power.

Meanwhile, he had become more and more interested in development of water power and gradually severed his active connection with the tobacco business. His efforts resulted in the organization of what is now the Southern Power System in North and South Carolina and the harnessing of the Saguenay River in Canada.

He was a heavy investor in Southern Cotton mills which made use of the power developed by his Hydro-Electric plants, and in Electric Railways serving the territory.

Development of the water power of the Saguenay River was part of Duke's plan for the manufacture of cheap fertilizer. He had hoped to work out a process for obtaining phosphate by means of electricity, a method he believed would be much cheaper than the acid method generally employed. To further his efforts along this line Mr. Duke acquired a Florida phosphate mine and also became interested in the American Cyanamid Co., a successful nitrogen producing Company.

While the whole scheme was not immediately successful, due to the fact that the process of extracting phosphate from rock by electricity was not commercially successful, Duke had not abandoned faith that it ultimately could be worked out.

Made Cigarettes and Tobacco Popular by Advertising.

Duke was the first tobacco man to realize that the cigarette could be made popular. Always a believer in advertising, he spread the name of "Duke's Mixture" smoking tobacco nation wide. Another of his big advertising campaigns extolled the merits of "Lucky Strike" cigarettes, and still another, "Bull Durham," cigarette tobacco, which enjoyed tremendous popularity.

Through the American Tobacco Co., Duke waged many trade wars against English tobacco manufacturers, and finally gained virtual control of the British market. Duke's greatest achievement was a $157,000,000 merger of productoin and distribution firms, the Tobacco Products Corporation.

JUDGE IN DOUBT OVER GRIESEDIECK IMMUNITY CLAIM

Directs Filing of Briefs in Case in Which Brewer Was Indicted After Going Before Grand Jury.

Federal Judge Faris will decide later whether Joseph Griesedieck is to have immunity from prosecution on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act, because he merely appeared before the grand jury which investigated the case, without giving any testimony which was of assistance.

The conspiracy charge is the same one in which the Fallstaff Corporation and "Jelly Roll" Hogan, the latter now serving a short term in the St. Louis jail for another offense, are jointly accused with Griesedieck of arranging the shipment of a carload of real beer to Jefferson City. Griesedieck was president of the Falstaff Corporation. He was not actively connected with the Griesedieck Bros. Brewery, which figured in the beer protection conspiracy charge of which Heber Nations was convicted last May.

John C. Dyott, who, as special Government prosecutor in liquor cases, conducted the investigation of the Falstaff-Hogan case, was called as a witness yesterday, when Griesedieck's lawyers argued before Judge Faris a motion to quash the indictment against Griesedieck. The motion was taken under advisement.

Dyott's Testimony.

Dyott, in telling why Griesedieck was indicted after having appeared before the grand jury as a witness, said:

"If Mr. Griesedieck had given us the information which I was advised that he had—I don't say that he had it, but I was advised that he had it—I would have cheerfully granted him immunity, so far as I was concerned.

"He gave me nothing of value. That is what I was disappointed about. My reason for reading him Section 30 was for the purpose of trying to get co-operation, if he was able to give me any."

Section 30 of the Volstead act was read by Dyott to Griesedieck. Dyott testified, before Griesedieck went into the grand jury room.

"That is known as the immunity clause?" Griesedieck's lawyer suggested.

"Well, yes and no," said Dyott. "I advised him that any information that he might give us could not be used against him, and read the whole section." The section, he said in answer to a question, provided that anyone testifying untruthfully in connection with such an investigation would be guilty of perjury.

Questioning of Griesedieck.

Dyott said, in reply to questions, that Griesedieck was questioned about his acquaintance with Hogan, the leader of the Hogan gang, and about the shipping of beer to Jefferson City, which was alleged to have purchased the beer.

Telling of the circumstances of the inquiry, Dyott testified:

"We were fully advised that beer had been shipped out from a railroad spur, where the Falstaff people loaded, to Jefferson City, and distributed in Jefferson City, and how it was paid for. All the facts had been established, and it was for the purpose of trying to connect other persons that were assumed to be protecting the beer business in St. Louis that, in the end, I questioned these men, to try and hook it up."

"These men" were Griesedieck and others connected with the Falstaff Corporation. At that time, early in 1924, the Nations case was under investigation.

"You were trying to get them to turn State's evidence?" Dyott was asked, and he replied, "Yes, trying to get them to tie the thing up. So far as the shipping of the beer and the manufacture of the beer were concerned, we were fully advised on all those points."

Dyott said he showed Griesedieck, in the grand jury's presence, the check supposed to have been used in payment for the beer, and a deposit slip of his company, indicating the depositing of the check with the Chouteau Trust Co. Griesedieck said he knew nothing about the check and slips.

"I wanted to know definitely," Dyott explained, "if this particular brewery was putting beer out, because any evidence that I could get would have checked up our other evidence against the brewery, and would have made possible the calling of other witnesses. But by the failure to check it definitely to this brewery, through Mr. Griesedieck, I was balked in going any further in connection with the brewery matter."

What Griesedieck Testified.

Griesedieck, testifying yesterday in support of the motion to quash the indictment, said that when before the grand jury he was asked if he had manufactured and shipped beer and he said he had not and that he denied knowledge of checks and bills of lading shown him.

On conclusion of the testimony, Judge Faris said he was in some doubt regarding the right of Griesedieck to immunity and in some doubt as to the proper construction of the statute, which he read, as follows:

"No natural person (this term means an individual as distinguished from a corporation) shall be prosecuted on charges growing out of anything or any matter to which in obedience to a subpena he testifies or gives evidence."

Judge Faris said it appeared from Griesedieck's own testimony that he had not given evidence, but on the contrary had denied knowledge of everything concerning which he was asked.

Attorney John M. Goodwin urged that this construction would give a guilty man an advantage over an innocent man, and possibly would result in perjury before grand juries to gain immunity rather than the truth. Judge Faris directed the attorneys to file briefs.

VATICAN RECORD SHOWS ST. LOUIS ON MAP IN 1700

St. Louis Priest Inspects Document Marking Jesuit Mission at River Junction.

St. Louis was on a map 225 years ago.

Pierre Laclede founded St. Louis in 1764. But a map dated 1700, which is now in the Vatican Library at Rome, shows a settlement at the junction of the Mississippi and River des Peres, as the site of a mission of the Jesuit fathers.

The Rev. Gilbert J. Garraghan, S. J., of St. Louis University, inspected the map while he was in Rome in connection with the work of compiling a history of the Society of Jesus, or Jesuit order, in America. The name Des Peres (meaning "of the Fathers") is explained as being a memorial to the early Jesuit missionaries.

Father Garraghan examined, both in the Vatican Library and in the historical and church archives of Paris, other documents with deal with the early colonial history of America.

72-MILE GALE SWEEPS OVER NEW YORK ON COLDEST OCT. 10

Seven Are Hurt and All Traffic Is Stopped; 15 Inches of Snow in New England.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Sweeping from the Great Lakes at a 72-mile-an-hour velocity, a bitter cold nor'wester today unleashed its strength upon the metropolitan area, toppling the thermometer to 35 degrees for the coldest October 10 in fifty-five years and spilling the first flurry of snow of the season.

While the city's millions shivered, all traffic, shipping, pedestrian and vehicular—experienced the worst atmosphere upheaval in months.

Seven persons were injured. Scores of pedestrians were bowled off their feet.

Miles of telegraph lines were torn down in the suburbs and trees uprooted. Many windows were broken.

At Elizabeth, N. J., an 8-year-old boy was killed when a chimney blown down buried him in bricks.

In Westchester county a number of valuable trees that John D. Rockefeller had imported from Japan were destroyed by the wind.

New England and New York State points also reported damage by wind. In northern New England the snowfall varied from a slight covering of the ground up to fifteen inches. Northern New York State also had considerable snow.

PEORIA RETALIATES WITH INDICTMENTS FOR "DRY" SQUAD

"Lone Wolf" Ascher and Aids Charged by Grand Jury With Robbery, Assault and Larceny.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 10.—The "lone wolf" of the United States prohibition enforcement corps, J. E. Ascher, will return to Illinois some time this month to stand trial on charges of "robbery, larceny and assault to injure," and to tell what he knows of enforcement in the city of Peoria, the one-time source of this country's largest whisky revenue.

The leading purveyors of illicit drinks were persuaded by Ascher, masquerading as a prospective saloonkeeper, to deliver stocks of their ware to "Uncle Sam's Place," Ascher's tentative saloon. On their arrival, Ascher and United States deputy marshals greeted them with open handcuffs and escorted them to another place of Uncle Sam's, the jail.

He will be carefully guarded to protect him from his erstwhile friends and "higher-ups," the wholesale bootleggers of Peoria.

Got Damaging Evidence.

Repeated successes as one of the cleverest prohibition enforcement officers of the Department of Justice got Ascher the Peoria assignment, after various district officers had failed. He was accompanied there by Max Hartzig, another successful enforcement officer, and in the grand finals had Deputy U. S. Marshal Walter Moody as an aid. They are all under indictments, charging robbery, larceny and assault to injure.

According to U. S. Marshal J. M. McClure, they got damaging evidence against more than 100 Peorians who make a livelihood violating the Volstead act. They will present this evidence before the Federal grand jury which meets in Peoria Oct. 19, and at that time will likely learn when they will be arraigned for trial.

They were indicted by a Peoria County grand jury sworn in by County Judge T. N. Green. Trial of the three operatives was taken out of the hands of the county authorities by District Attorney Thomas Williamson and transferred to the Federal Court. This will put Williamson and his force into action as lawyers for the defense, and State's Attorney Pratt of Peoria County will have the burden of the prosecution, opposing them.

An interesting detective story will be told by Ascher. He will tell that he went to Peoria to get the wealthy wholesale bootleggers, who had been operating boldly in violation of the Volstead act, for years past. Other operatives had arrested the small violators, but the big fellows seemed immune.

Ascher and Hartzig arrived in Peoria as good fellows, desiring to go into the bootlegging business. They won the confidence of all the wholesalers, Ascher tells. They visited all the bootlegging places, and bought a variety of "pints" and "quarts," and were received in the best bootlegging circles.

Still unable to get the best evidence against the wholesalers, they interviewed them and proposed opening a "joint" of their own. They got a cordial promise of help, and accordingly announced a "grand opening." This "opening" proved successful, but not as an "opening." It concluded their careers in Peoria. They had been "bootleggers" for a day and a night and "Uncle Sam's Place" had collected large stocks of evidence and a dozen defendants.

Planning their opening, they evinced more fear of the enforcement squad, than the Peorians, and insisted on careful promises of exact compliance with their "opening" plans. Twelve wholesale bootleggers were given orders for deliveries on the opening day. The first was asked to come at a stated time, and to make no mistake. The second was asked to come at a time 15 minutes later, and so on, at 15-minute intervals.

Bootleggers Speechless.

Ascher sent to Springfield for help, and United States Deputy Moody and another deputy came. They waited in the rear of the newly opened drink parlor. The first bootlegger arrived on time. He entered with his quantity of liquor and was escorted to the rear room. Just as he put his package down, two steel handcuffs flashed and encircled his wrists. Without much ado he was ushered out the back door into another automobile and taken to the city prison. His own automobile remaining in front was driven away.

In 15 minutes the second wholesale bootlegger appeared and the episode was repeated. And so on, until 12 wholesalers and 12 automobiles had been gathered in.

$3,026,871 FROM GAS TAX IN 8 MONTHS

St. Louis Contributed $781,316 in Six Months—Year's Revenue Put at $4,500,000.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 10.—The State tax of 2 cents a gallon on gasoline used for motor vehicle fuel produced $3,026,871.31 for the State road fund in the first eight months after the tax became effective on Jan. 1 last, the State Oil Inspection Department announced today. This forecasts a total of approximately $4,500,000 from the tax in 1925.

An audit of the gasoline tax collections being made by the State Auditor will disclose some extensive evasions of the tax in St. Louis, it is understood. The auditors now are at work in St. Louis but the results of their investigation will not be made public until the audit is completed. The evasions were discovered, it was learned, through checking the reports of wholesalers on the gasoline they had handled, against the railroad records of bulk shipments of gasoline received by the companies.

A report of collections has been compiled by the oil inspection department only to Aug. 31. The tax payments for September are not due until Oct. 25. As has been told, the Highway Commission in proposing the gasoline tax as part of an initiative proposition for additional road revenue, adopted last November, estimated the gasoline tax would yield $4,000,000 a year.

A recent report on collections for the first six months showed that gasoline wholesalers in St. Louis and Kansas City paid $1,278,703, or 60 per cent of the total of $2,131,177 collected in the first six months. St. Louis paid $781,316. The State tax is collected in most instances at the wholesale or bulk stations.

FALLING GAS PIPE AS POSSIBLE CAUS OF LACLEDE BLAS

Coroner to Seek to D termine Whether Explo sion Was Due to Bre of Ceiling Support.

INQUEST WILL BE RESUMED TUESDA

Testimony of Seven Em ployes and One Woma Customer Heard at t Opening Session.

The Coroner's inquest into deaths of the four persons kil by the explosion in the Laclede Building, Eleventh and Ol streets, will be resumed Tuesd tomorrow being a holiday (Colu bus day).

Seven employes of the gas co pany and one woman custom who was in the building at t time of the explosion, at 2:05 m. Thursday, testified at the op ing session yesterday. One of employes testified to hav smelled gas in the building befo the explosion. The others had noticed any unusual odor, thou the customer said her daught who was with her at the time, s afterward that she had smell gas.

Line of Inquiry.

At the future sessions of the quest the Coroner will seek to termine whether the explosion m not have been due to the pull loose of a ceiling support of a inch gas pipe running through basement, and to the consequ sagging of the pipe and its bre ing open at two defective points.

This theory would account the flooding of the basement w gas, though it would not accou for the igniting of the gas. Ho ever, the Coroner believes a spa caused by the iron pipe strik the concrete floor, might have p vided the ignition.

The pipe in question enters basement from the alley, and r through the basement to a len of about 60 feet, weighing in whole length about a half ton. Coroner's office, after an inspection, has reported that the s port of the pipe was a ¾-inch i rod, imbedded about six inches the concrete ceiling. It was ported that a portion of the c ing concrete was pulled away the support.

Pipe Was Cracked.

The inspection also disclosed, is said, that the pipe cracked a point which seemed to have b defective near the air vent, which gas fumes poured, caus fire on the eleventh floor. A other crack at the opposite end the pipe, apparently at a defect spot also, was just opposite freight elevator, which would g circulation upward to gas that w escaping.

It also was found that the va which controlled the turning and shutting off of the supply gas into this pipe was shut The valve was at a point near wall at which thepipe entered near which the bodies of the tionary engineer and two main nance men were found.

It will be remembered that thony Kohler, a survivor of the cident, told in an interview Fri of having heard Carl T. Bre the engineer, say: "Is that the I should shut off?" and of se him "grab a big valve" just bef the explosion.

Coroner's Theory.

The Coroner's office think likely that the three employes served the pulling loose of pipe support, the sagging of pipe and the release of gas, hurried to and did shut of gas. The pipe is believed to h fallen, however, just after the was shut off, and the falling of pipe is believed to have caused explosion.

Engineers and employes of company will be questioned to termine whether the sound of pulling away of the supporting was not heard by some just be the explosion.

The line of questioning of Coroner is in support of a th slightly different from that of rector of Public Safety Brod believes the explosion was du gas, the source of which w broken pipe, but that the h likely was caused by proximit steam pipes.

Building Commissioner Chr pher, with a carpenter's help, terday removed a section of br iron pipe from the basement, will hold it as evidence in the cial investigation, which was b at the order of Mayor Miller. rector Brod sent his report t Mayor yesterday, but it was made public.

One of the employes testi yesterday, Daniel Quartz, sta ary fireman, brought a move of interest when he remarked he was about to light his pipe before the explosion. He however, that he did not lig and the fact that he had no in causing the explosion se to be shown by his unharmed dition. At the time he was compartment inclosed by a fire wall, in which the coal-fired ers were.

He had not smelled gas or

FALLING GAS PIPE AS POSSIBLE CAUSE OF LACLEDE BLAST

Coroner to Seek to Determine Whether Explosion Was Due to Break of Ceiling Support.

INQUEST WILL BE RESUMED TUESDAY

Testimony of Seven Employes and One Woman Customer Heard at the Opening Session.

The Coroner's inquest into the deaths of the four persons killed by the explosion in the Laclede Gas Building, Eleventh and Olive streets, will be resumed Tuesday, tomorrow being a holiday (Columbus day).

Seven employes of the gas company and one woman customer, who was in the building at the time of the explosion, at 2:05 p. m. Thursday, testified at the opening session yesterday. One of the employes testified to having smelled gas in the building before the explosion. The others had not noticed any unusual odor, though the customer said her daughter, who was with her at the time, said afterward that she had smelled gas.

Line of Inquiry.

At the future sessions of the inquest the Coroner will seek to determine whether the explosion may not have been due to the pulling loose of a ceiling support of a six-inch gas pipe running through the basement, and to the consequent sagging of the pipe and its breaking open at two defective points.

This theory would account for the flooding of the basement with gas, though it would not account for the igniting of the gas. However, the Coroner believes a spark, caused by the iron pipe striking the concrete floor, might have provided the ignition.

The pipe in question enters the basement from the alley, and runs through the basement to a length of about 60 feet, weighing in its whole length about a half ton. The Coroner's office, after an inspection, has reported that the support of the pipe was a ⅝-inch iron rod, imbedded about six inches in the concrete ceiling. It was reported that a portion of the ceiling concrete was pulled away by the support.

Pipe Was Cracked.

The inspection also disclosed, it is said, that the pipe cracked at a point which seemed to have been defective near the air vent up which gas fumes poured, causing fire on the eleventh floor. Another crack at the opposite end of the pipe, apparently at a defective spot also, was just opposite the freight elevator, which would give circulation upward to gas that was escaping.

It also was found that the valve which controlled the turning on and shutting off of the supply of gas into this pipe was shut off. The valve was at a point near the wall at which the pipe entered and near which the bodies of the stationary engineer and two maintenance men were found.

It will be remembered that Anthony Kohler, a survivor of the accident, told in an interview Friday of having heard Carl T. Brewer, the engineer, say: "Is that the one I should shut off?" and of seeing him "grab a big valve" just before the explosion.

Coroner's Theory.

The Coroner's office thinks it likely that the three employes observed the pulling loose of the pipe support, the sagging of the pipe and the release of gas, and hurried to and did shut off the gas. The pipe is believed to have fallen, however, just after the gas was shut off, and the falling of the pipe is believed to have caused the explosion.

Engineers and employes of the company will be questioned to determine whether the sound of the pulling away of the supporting rod was not heard by some just before the explosion.

The line of questioning of the Coroner is in support of a theory slightly different from that of Director of Public Safety Brod, who believes the explosion was due to gas, the source of which was a broken pipe, but that the break likely was caused by proximity to steam pipes.

Building Commissioner Christopher, with a carpenter's help, yesterday removed a section of broken iron pipe from the basement, and will hold it as evidence in the official investigation, which was begun at the order of Mayor Miller. Director Brod sent his report to the Mayor yesterday, but it was not made public.

One of the employes testifying yesterday, Daniel Quartz, stationary fireman, brought a movement of interest when he remarked that he was about to light his pipe, just before the explosion. He said, however, that he did not light it, and the fact that he had no part in causing the explosion seemed to be shown by his unharmed condition. At the time he was in the compartment inclosed by a fireproof wall in which the coal-fired boilers were.

He had not smelled gas or ammonia, and the only witness who testified to an odor was Miss Mildred Ruschenburg, a third-floor employe, who said she smelled the gas and spoke of it to the forewoman, Miss Rose Schneider. She said Miss Schneider went into the hall to report the odor to someone, and then called the telephone operator on the eighth floor, who said she smelled it, too.

Others who testified were Alexander E. Garvin, manager of the building; Edward McKay, chief clerk in charge of customers' accounts; Michael Seyand, elevator operator; Edward M. Ring, assistant chief clerk of the sales department; Rudolph Schott, janitor, and Mrs. Bessie Humphreys of 820 Franklin avenue, who was paying her bill at the teller's window, and suffered an injury to her right hand. She was one of the 43 persons who were injured by the blast, six having been seriously hurt.

The building, which was damaged to an extent estimated by the company at $200,000 to $300,000, remained closed to the public yesterday, though some employes of the gas company and tenants of other offices were permitted to enter.

2328 MILES OF STATE HIGHWAY COMPLETED

An Additional 2176 Miles of Graded Earth Road Ready for Hard-Surfacing.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 10.—The State Highway Department had constructed a total of 4504 miles of graded earth and hard-surfaced roads up to Oct. 1, at a cost of $67,997,685, since the department began its work on the State highway system in 1921, Chief Highway Engineer B. H. Piepemeier stated in a report issued today.

The work done includes 2328 miles of hard surfacing, representing 30½ per cent of the 7640-mile State system. Of the 2176 miles of graded earth road completed, 697 miles have been placed under contract for hard-surfacing.

Projects now under contract include 660 miles of graded earth, to cost $8,057,979; 1341 miles of hard-surfacing, $31,467,939, and bridge work along these roads to cost $2,452,900. The work under contract totals $41,978,819.

Piepemier's report on road work finished includes both completed projects and the completed mileage on construction contracts still in progress.

The 4504 miles of road completed include 2176 miles of graded earth, costing $19,573,123; 2328 miles of hard-surfacing, costing $43,456,126, and bridge work costing $4,968,436, totaling $67,997,685.

GRAND JURY TO GO INTO RUMORS OF BRIBE OFFERS

been favored by Comptroller Nolte, Director Brod, Fire Chief Alt and Master Mechanic Meier, and the specifications were so drawn that that equipment was only one that could exactly meet them, the specifications calling for a seven-bearing shaft. The other companies produced equipment with a four-bearing shaft.

When the matter came before the Board of Standardization several days ago to award the contract, Kinsey and Dietz moved to recall the specifications, so that they might change them to permit others than the Ahrens-Fox Co. to bid. When this was done, Comptroller Nolte withdrew, saying he would have no further part in the proceedings.

Howard A. Long, a representative of the Stutz Co., is considering legal action in an effort to compel the awarding of the contract to his firm as the low bidder. He attempted to see Mayor Miller Friday after the Mayor had ordered the purchase of the American-La France equipment, but he was denied an audience. The city charter permits the Board to reject any or all bids.

'OUR DUTY TO CONTROL,' SHIP BOARD DECLARES

Letter to Coolidge Announced Intention of Commissioners to Direct Fleet Corporation.

POWER MUST GO WITH RESPONSIBILITY

For Two Years, Letter Said, Board Tried to Carry Out Wishes of the President.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1925.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Having asked the Attorney-General for a legal opinion as to what rights the President has over the Shipping Board, the President his limited his action for the moment to an expression of disapproval of the appointment of E. E. Crowley as president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation without consulting the White House.

The Shipping Board insists that it had no more reason to consult the President than in the appointment of any subordinate official or clerk.

Text of Letter.

The Shipping Board attitude toward the President is defined in the following letter dated September 24, which has never before been published. It reads as follows:

"Dear Mr. President: On several occasions we have taken important steps in the organization and management of the Emergency Fleet Corporation solely at your request, fully appreciating that you did not expect us to permanently relinquish any duty imposed on us by law.

"As the work of the board involves business principles only, Congress made it a bi-partisan body whose seven members are selected from geographical areas defined by law. These elements controlling the selection of commissioners assure the application of different points of view in solving the problems of the board. To make possible independence of judgment, the commissioners are given a term of office, of six years, and continuity of policy is promoted by these terms overlapping.

"Whether Congress acted wisely in providing the present form of board, and whether Congress has the power under the Constitution to create administrative commissions exempt from executive control are not matters of our consideration; but so long as the present law remains in force, it is our duty to accept and apply the policy and intent reaveled in its provisions.

Wants Further Legislation.

"We have been assigned the task of developing an adequate American merchant marine, and extensive powers have been given us to that end. Unfortunately, we have not been able to secure the enforcement of several provisions of law intended to be important factors in the program, but it is our purpose to promote the work to the extent possible under present law, remaining hopeful that further legislation necessary for complete success, can, with your co-operation, be procured from Congress.

"Among the powers granted is the discretionary power to create a corporation for use as an agency in our work. The Emergency Fleet Corporation has been created accordingly, but it is optional with the board to what extent and for what purposes, if any, it shall be employed.

"The law clearly intends that officials of the corporation shall be agents of the board, and, therefore, subordinate to the plans and policies of the board, to a degree certainly not less than executive officials in a private business corporation are subject to the plans and policies of a board of directors; for this reason, the control of the entire stock capital is vested in the board to meet technical, legal requirements.

"For nearly two years, Mr. President, we have complied with your request in the selection of executive officials of the corporation and in the grant of power to operate the fleet, we realize that your requests have been prompted by principles and policies having much merit, when properly applied; but in their application, for reasons very naturally beyond your control, the results have been unsatisfactory. It is our purpose at an early date further to consider the entire situation and to the extent we find a revision of the personnel or functions of the corporation advisable the revision will be made; it is our intention, however, to adhere to the policy of investing ample powers in a single executive for the efficient operation of the fleet.

"Will Assume Control."

"We know you will approve the principle that it is neither wise nor just to have responsibility for results separated from power to control the agents employed. In the present circumstances, as the responsibility is ours, it is clearly my duty, and it is therefore our intention, to resume full and exclusive control of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

"With great respect we are
"Sincerely yours,
"T. V. O'Connor, chairman.
"(By direction of the board.)"

The foregoing is the last word from the Shipping Board to the President and nothing is expected to be done by the President until he hears from the Attorney-General.

Even the vacancies in the board are not to be filled for the present, and it is likely Mr. Coolidge will not make his recommendations for legislation to Congress until after Attorney-General Sargent has ruled.

PARKING BUSINESS AT SCHOOL YARD COSTLY, BOYS FIND

Enterprise During Veiled Prophet Parade Gets Three Pupils in Trouble.

Three pupils of the Marquette School, 4015 McPherson avenue, have a new problem in profit and loss to ponder and in an atmosphere hardly as conducive to concentrated thought as the school room—Juvenile Court.

During the Veiled Prophet parade Thursday, they utilized the school playground to conduct an automobile parking business. They took in $8.75. That was profit.

To provide an entry-way, they tore down a new wire fence enclosing the playground, and now the school authorities declare the damage to have been $100. That was loss.

The boys' parents have promised to foot the bill. That is another problem.

BELLBOY SHOT AS HE SHOWS GUEST ROOM

Employe of Majestic Hotel Seriouly Wounded by Man in Army Uniform.

Jack Tucker, 19 years old, a bellboy at the Majestic Hotel, Eleventh and Pine streets, was shot and seriously wounded last midnight by a guest whom he had just shown to a room in the hotel.

His assailant, who was registered as "J. F. Sullivan," told policemen after his arrest that he was Allen Rutherford, 22 years old, a reserve second lieutenant in training at Jefferson Barracks. He was in uniform at the time of the shooting.

After the shooting Tucker made his way to the lobby and told the manager what had occurred. A moment later Rutherford came down and stood by in the lobby until he was arrested. He could give no explanation of his act beyond saying he had been drinking.

Tucker was shot in the left hip, the .45 caliber steel jacketed bullet emerging from the right hip. Rutherford turned over a .45 caliber army automatic and a smaller pistol to the police when he was arrested. He gave his home address as Pine Bluff, Ark.

ROBERTSON TO FLY NEXT WEEK TO MAP OUT MAIL ROUTE

Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, will fly to Chicago early this week to make a preliminary survey of the night airway over which his company will carry air mail. The contract for the Chicago-St. Louis route was awarded the company last week.

Robertson will plot out locations for emergency landing fields on the route, which parallels the Chicago & Alton Railroad tracks, and other members of his organization will begin negotiations with land owners to establish fields.

After reaching Chicago, Robertson will study methods of handling mail employed at the Government mail field there.

The new route, to be established in 60 or 90 days, will give overnight air mail service to New York and 24-hour service to San Francisco.

ANOTHER BLOW STRUCK AT CITY PLUMBING COSTS

Building Commissioner Names Committee of Experts to Assist Him in Revising Code.

REDUCTION OF PIPING SUGGESTED

Government Report Mentioned as Possible Basis in Drawing Up New Rules for City.

Another blow, the second within a month, was delivered yesterday at plumbing costs in St. Louis when Building Commissioner Christopher appointed a committee of experts to assist him in revising the plumbing ordinances of St. Louis in order to bring down building costs.

The appointment of this committee follows the recent announcement of Attorney-General Otto that he has begun an investigation upon which to base an antitrust prosecution of the Association of Master Plumbers, the Journeymen Plumbers' local union, the Piping and Heating Contractors' St. Louis Association and the Steamfitters' Union.

Based on Disclosures.

The action about to be undertaken by the Attorney-General is based on disclosures by the Post-Dispatch of conditions in the building industry, particularly pertaining to plumbers and steamfitters, that are, in the opinion of architects and general contractors, in need of adjustment if the St. Louis program is not to be further hampered by high costs.

Certain architects, general contractors and other informants of the Attorney-General, have expressed the opinion that a thorough revision of the ordinances regulating installation of plumbing would reduce the cost of plumbing in St. Louis about 30 per cent, and bring to St. Louis a modern system of sanitation.

The committee named by Building Commissioner Christopher comprises John P. Austin, member of the Board of Examiners of Plumbers, recently appointed on the board to succeed Arthur Black, secretary of the Journeymen Plumbers' Union; Charles F. Walker, chief plumbing inspector; J. A. McBride, president of the J. A. McBride Mechanical Equipment Co.; Albert B. Grove, architect; Austin Fisch, architect; Dr. Max C. Starkloff, City Health Commissioner, and William A. Barnholt, chief clerk of the plumbing inspection department of the city.

Suggestions Offered.

The Building Commissioner's suggestions to the committee set forth that there appears to be a general demand for a reduction in plumbing costs, and he further suggested that the committee keep in mind the elimination of all unnecessary piping in order to bring about a reduction in costs, while conforming to sanitary principles.

The United States Plumbing Code, issued through the Department of Commerce, was suggested as a basis upon which to begin work. This code was worked out by Department of Commerce engineers following conferences of master and journeymen plumbers, architects and general contractors, called at Washington a few years ago by Secretary Hoover, who at that time made a comprehensive investigation of building costs throughout the United States.

The question of revision of ordinances to eliminate obsolete methods of piping and thus reduce costs has been frequently discussed by master and journeymen plumbers. The masters have said the ordinances were fostered by the journeymen solely to create more work and increase labor costs, and that the journeymen had opposed all suggestions for revision.

Union's Attitude.

When recently asked about this charge, representatives of the union declined to discuss it, except to remark that most of the journeymen know more about the economics and sanitation of plumbing than do the masters or experts who have opposed the St. Louis system.

A master plumber yesterday informed the Post-Dispatch that progressive master plumbers of St. Louis would welcome a revision of the plumbing ordinances, and that substitution of the Government one loop back vent system would save two-thirds of the material required under the present ordinances.

Many large cities have already adopted the Government code as to plumbing. This code is followed in St. Louis on Government buildings, against which neither the local union, master plumbers or city inspectors have made any protest, notwithstanding the ordinances.

In the conferences held at Washington, Secretary Hoover made an urgent appeal to representatives of all lines in the building industry to adopt modern measures and reduce costs.

Fred M. Tate of 5855 Washington boulevard, special investigator for the Attorney-General's office, is collecting evidence for Attorney-General Otto's anti-trust suit.

Science Links Climate and Suicide Through Statistics

Mapping of Self-Destruction Areas in Europe Sets May and June as Most Fatal Periods.

By SAMUEL SPEWACK.
Berlin Corerspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.
Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—One of the most remarkable statistical surveys ever made, devoted to all phases of the subject of suicide, was made public here tonight. The survey embraces all of Europe and is characteristically exhaustive and detailed.

The German investigators establish scientifically that climate and suicide are mathematically related—that countries with variable climates produce the most suicides, and that these countries are found between 47 and 57 degrees east longitude and 20 and 34 degrees north latitude, which embrace Central Europe.

Flat Country Most Dangerous.

There are more suicides in flat country than in mountainous. For Central Europe, May and June are the most productive of self-destruction and the favorite days are Monday and Tuesday for men and Sunday for women. One-third of the suicides are committed at night, the rest in the forenoon and afternoon, with a very few in the early hours of morning.

Twice as many Protestants in Europe ended their lives as did Catholics. Among Jews suicide is on the increase, especially among the Orthodox. In eastern Europe, among the famous Jews, virtually no suicides at all are reported.

Men Lead Women in Deaths.

Four men commit suicide in Germany for every woman, but more women between the ages of 20 and 30 kill themselves than men. Divorce plays a big roll in suicide in the Reich, for there are ten men divorced who commit suicide to one married man, and five divorced women to one amrried woman. It is established that women prefer drowning as a means of death while men evince no marked partiality for any particular method.

The investigators insist that movies influence suicides. They analyzed 250 pictures and found there were 98 murders, 51 divorces, 19 attacks, 45 suicides and 176 thefts. The investigators conclude from this that the movies have a harmful effect on those predisposed to self-destruction.

Germany has the highest record for child suicides—10 boys under 16 and three girls for every 1,000,000 population, while France has three boys and one girl for the same number.

A 6-year-old boy, running from behind a parked automobile in front of his home at 2119 Olive street, at 3 p. m. yesterday, was struck and instantly killed by a west-bound automobile.

The driver of the car, John J. Bulan, 25 years old, of 2008 Allen avenue, halted the car and took the child to City Hospital, where he was pronounced dead from a fractured skull. The boy was unidentified until the arrival of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanham.

Bulan was driving a Buick coupe, the property of the Vesper-Buick Automobile Co. He said he was employed as a mechanic at the company's maintenance department at 3900 West Pine boulevard and was returning from a demonstration to a prospective customer. He was arrested and released on bond for appearance before the Coroner.

The automobile was overturned, and all were injured. They were taken to City Hospital.

McCollom probably suffered a fractured skull. His wife suffered internal injuries, their 7-year-old son, Raymond, lost five teeth, and Anna, 5 years old, was cut and bruised.

Driver Thrown Into Windshield After Hitting Cable.

Elmer Haley, 18 years old, 4306A Arco avenue, driving his automobile south in Twenty-third street, at 10 p. m., at Morgan street, collided with a cable, tsretched across the street to warn of repairs, and was thrown into the windshield. At City Hospital he was treated for a severe gash on the cheek. He also suffered a possible fractured skull.

ITALIAN MASONS ORDERED TO HALT ALL ACTIVITIES

Grand Master's Action Follows Clashes With Fascists, in Which Several Were Killed.

MEMBER OF PARTY WAS ASSASSINATED

Lodges Told to Hold No Meetings Until Law Abolishing Secret Societies "Shall Be Made Void."

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Oct. 10.—Domizio Torrigiana, grand master of the Masonic Order in Italy, today issued an order to all lodges to hold no meetings and to cease all work until further notice. His action follows the recent Fascist-Mason clashes at Florence, in which several persons were killed.

Torrigiana's order says that it is proposed to suspend all Masonic work in Italy until the law abolishing secret societies "shall be made void." This law was laid before Parliament by Premier Mussolini last January. It declares all secret societies illegal and gives the Government the right to dismiss instantly all state employes who belong to such societies.

A series of clashes between Masons and Fascists in Florence began the night of Oct. 3, with the assassination of Cavalier Luperini, member of the Fascist party directorate of Florence, by Giovanni Benciolini, who himself later was killed by a mob. At least four deaths are known to have resulted and a score of persons were wounded.

A report reaching Paris yesterday said 18 were killed and 40 wounded in the Florence disorders, while a dispatch to London reported the institution of a Fascist reign of terror in revenge for Luperini's death.

The Masonic grand master subsequently ordered the dissolution of all lodges in Florence.

Reorganization of Italy Virtually Completed.

By Radio to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1925.

ROME, Oct. 10.—Reorganization of the Italian political and social structure has been virtually completed by the grand council of the Fascist party, whose session has just ended.

Although some of the measures decided upon are not yet in force, it now is certain these will be the chief characteristics of the new Italian commonwealth.

1. The monopoly in wage negotiations for unions and employers' associations is recognized as belonging to the Government, with compulsory awards by governmental wage tribunals. Some strikes will be punishable as crimes.

2. The Senate will be elected partially and eventually entirely, by the recognized trade unions, employers' associations and professional and other societies. Present Senators however, will continue to hold office for life.

3. Complete suppression of local self-Government for municipal townships under 5000 inhabitants will be effected. The national Government will appoint town managers for terms of five years, and with full powers, responsible only to it. Larger cities may receive the same system at the discretion of the Government. In any event, their town councils will be elected in part by the trade unions.

4. All co-operative societies—which are tremendously important in Italy—will be consolidated under Government control.

5. The chamber of deputies will be deprived of its authority to initiate legislation and its power to provoke a Cabinet crisis will be limited or abolished. It will become a consultative, rather than a legislative body. A special legislative council will be appointed to study and draft legislation.

6. All societies actively opposing or disturbing the work of the Government will be dissolved or placed under Government supervision and control. Italians abroad criticising the Government will suffer cancellation of their citizenship and confiscation of their property.

These reforms, buttressed by the Fascisti black shirt militia puts virtually the entire governmental administration of Italy in the Fascist Government, responsible to Mussolini. The Fascisti assert this is necessary to the welfare of the nation under modern conditions.

BAKERS OF STATE TO MEET

The Missouri Master Bakers' Association will hold their meeting at the Robidoux Hotel, St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 12, 13 and 14. This is the first meeting of the Missouri State Bakers' to be held since their reorganization at Sedalia last February.

Bakers and supply men from all parts of the State are expecting to attend. A delegation of 50 or more will go from St. Louis. A large attendance is expected from Kansas City and other western parts of the State. Gov. Baker will be one of

NAVY OFFICIAL SAYS ITS CRITICS TALK TOO MUCH

Assistant Secretary Robinson at Honolulu, Defends Hawaiian Flight and Last Trip of Shenandoah.

DOES NOT MENTION ANYONE BY NAME

"We Are Not Going to Let Any Man or Circumstance Stand in the Way," He Tells Luncheon Guests.

By the Associated Press

HONOLULU, Oct. 10.—Theodore D. Robinson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who was a guest yesterday of the Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon, defended the Naval Air Service and declared himself in favor of the Pearl Harbor naval station.

"We are not," he said, "going to let any one man or circumstance stand in the way of development of aviation by the Army and Navy. That development is ours and not any one man's and it is going to be for the Army and Navy in the defense of the country and not for any one man."

Few people realize, he said, the importance of Hawaii in the defense of the United States.

"I am more than ever convinced that the improvements at Pearl Harbor and elsewhere proposed by representatives in Congress are fully justified."

"Aviation is on the tongue of everybody these days—a little too much so, in fact, on some people's tongues. Nothing new has come up except the Hawaiian flight, which is called a failure, and I do not think that was so bad.

"Another aviation incident of which capital is being made is the MacMillan Arctic expedition. Now the facts are that MacMillan expressed the opinion that the planes could be landed all right in that area. The truth of the matter is that the men who went up there accomplished some of the most remarkable things in aviation history.

"Another failure is pointed to in the fate of the Shenandoah. I have been on the Los Angeles, which made the trip to the Bermudas and back without difficulty. I would have been on the Shenandoah, too, if I had not been sent over here on an official trip. Any ship running into a typhoon may have trouble."

DEPARTMENT STORE TO RUN LINE OF PASSENGER PLANES

Wanamaker's and Ford Interests Plan Service Between New York and Miami.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—An airplane passenger service between New York and Miami, Fla., using planes being manufactured by Henry Ford, is to be established by the John Wanamaker department store, it was announced tonight by Rodman Wanamaker, president.

Engineers of the Ford Motor Co are seeking suitable landing fields between the two points, Wanamaker said. The venture is to be sponsored jointly by the Wanamaker department store and the Ford interests. A more detailed announcement, definitely stating when the service is to be started, will be made soon.

Tonight's announcement followed a three-hour conference at Mitchel Field this afternoon between Edsel Ford, of the Stout Metal Airplane Co., and members of the Presidential Air Inquiry Board.

The Wanamaker store today placed on exhibition the JW-1, the first airplane manufactured by the Ford interests. It required the entire night to bring the plane from Mitchel Field to the store, where it was placed in a show window. The plane measures 56 feet from tip to tip.

Mrs. Tate was in a holiday mood as she took leave of jail attaches at 3:30 a. m. to begin an automobile trip to Joliet, where she will start her sentence of 20 years. She was accompanied by Special Deputy Frank Meece and Mrs. Stella Cash, housekeeper at the county jail.

Tate, in custody of Deputy Sheriff George Walker, boarded a train for Chester. His sentence is 30 years.

Kansas City Doctor Invents New Truss

New Discovery Heals Rupture Without an Operation

A new discovery which, experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of the well-known Hernia Specialist, Dr. Andrew Kaiser, 149-H Koch Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no cruel steel bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Kaiser's ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the Post-Dispatch who writes him. He wants one person in each neighborhood to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery, with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.

OZARK TRAIL PROMOTERS MEET IN TEXAS COUNTY

President Sam Hodgdon of Webster Groves Presides Over Sessions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Mo., Oct. 10.—The national and Missouri State conventions of the Ozark Trails Association were held at the Texas County Soldiers' Memorial Building in Houston yesterday and today. President Sam D. Hodgdon of Webster Groves, probate Judge of St. Louis County, presided, and he and Mrs. Ousley, former Mayor of St. James, Mo., who is secretary, were both re-elected president and secretary, respectively, of the State and national organization.

Committees were appointed to solicit membership, which is $5 for both organizations. Steps were taken to put on an extensive advertising campaign of the territory covered by the Ozark Trail. A descriptive booklet will be issued.

The Ozark Train was organized several years ago and extends from Amarillo, Tex., and Las Legas, N. M. It is the shortest and most scenic route between St. Louis and Springfield of any other highway. The attendance was not large on account of a cold rain for several days of the past two weeks. Much interest and enthusiasm characterized the session. Thousands of tourists go over this route every year.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for only 75 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

FORMER TEXAS K. K. K. OFFICIAL IS OUSTED

Millionaire, Replying to Order, Calls on Body to Repay $5000 Note He Indorsed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 10.—Charged with taking certain records of the organization and refusing to return them, Z. E. Marvin, former "grand titan" and later "grand dragon" of the Ku Klux Klan in Texas, has been suspended from the hooded fraternity by an order of Clarence S. Parker, "exalted cyclops" of Dallas Klan No. 66, where Marvin has had his membership since the organization of the klan here.

The ousting of Marvin and the recent removal of George Dutcher, both prominently identified with the local and national organization since inception of the order, is regarded as indicating the klan is tottering in Texas, once the banner State of the order. Marvin says thousands of members, becoming disgusted with the manner in which the klan is now run, have allowed dues to lapse and that thousands of others will take the same procedure to get out of the organization.

Text of Ouster Order.

The ouster order against Marvin, issued Oct. 8, follows:

"By authority vested in me as exalted cyclops of Dallas Klan No. 66, Realm of Texas, Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, you are hereby officially notified that you are, this date, suspended from Dallas Klan, No. 66, on the following charge:

"Violation of Article 28, section 3, of the Constitution of Laws of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Ie: 'Refusal or failure to obey the mandates, rules, edicts and orders of the exalted cyclops.'

"Said violation being caused by your refusal or failure to return certain records of Dallas Klan No. 66, upon order of the exalted cyclops."

Says Move Is a Compliment.

Marvin, replying to the ouster order, said: "You know that I have not been an active member of the klan or attended its meetings for about a year, and I am glad the opportunity brought by your letter to publicly announce my severance from the Ku Klux Klan and consider my elimination, indeed, a compliment. As the klan is now operated, I have for some time felt out of place as a member, and had determined, as so many others have done, to be automatically eliminated by letting my dues lapse. The immediate relief that comes to me by having my connection with that organization terminated is most welcome."

The parting shot of the millionaire drug man at the klan was a request that the organization make arrangements immediately to pay a note for $5000 he had indorsed and re-indorsed for them.

The Marvin and Dutcher following in the ranks of the klan in Texas is legion, and many of them are expected to quit the organization.

BERLIN CENSORS THEATERS

Government's Intervention Causes Changes in Two Productions.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—Reasons of state twice have interfered recently with theatrical productions in Berlin. In one case, a leading theater prepared a musical revue entitled "From Paradise to Hindenburg." Many serious-minded Germans, to whom President von Hindenburg's name is sacred, considered this to be nothing short of sacrilege, and they demanded Government intervention, declaring that to have the President's name dragged into vaudeville and placarded on gaudy posters was calculated to detract from the dignity of the presidential office. At the Government's request, therefore, the producer changed the name of his revue to "From A to Z."

In the second case, a German film company staged a picture portraying the life of a great theatrical star. To the initiated it was evident that the late Eleanora Duse was meant. One character in the film was a certain Prince in love with the star, and the initiated also identified this gentleman as none other than Gabriele D'Annunzio. When the Italian Government heard of the film, it intervened with representations to the Berlin Government objecting to the reference to D'Annunzio. This incident was satisfactorily closed when a Danzig merchant was substituted in the scenario for the Italian Prince.

NEW POST FOR FATHER DOOLEY

The Rev. Patrick J. Father Dooley is a native of St. Louis, and was ordained in Rome in 1909, after finishing his studies in the American college there. "ON ROAD TO TEMPERANCE"

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment announced today that a committee of 50 it had appointed to study liquor control systems had reported that Quebec is "on the road to real temperance."

Since the inauguration of the Quebec liquor control bill, the association said, the people of the Province are drinking more wine and beer, but liquor sales have decreased 8½ per cent "in spite of the annually increasing number of Americans who invade Quebec each year and drink mainly whisky." The committee was appointed, the statement said, with the idea in view of recommending some legislation to Congress "to relieve conditions attributed to the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act."

"While there are 200,000 more persons in Montreal than Washington, D. C.," it said, "there are twice as many arrests for drunkenness here as in the Canadian city."

Man Ends Life With Dynamite.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Kan., Oct. 10.—Jerry Seehar, an Austrian, about 50 years old, was blown to bits near his home in the Edison coal camp by a dynamite explosion yesterday in what the county Coroner declared was "a plain case of suicide." Investigation failed to disclose a motive for his action. Two witnesses declared they saw Seehar lie in his backyard and light a match. A moment later they heard a terrific explosion.

$80,000 LOSS RESULTS FROM TORCH EXPLOSION

Furniture Finisher Knocked Over Torch When Trying to Put Out Fire on His Sleeve.

Fire resulting from the explosion of a benzine torch caused damage estimated at $80,000 to the building and contents of the National House Furnishing Co., Nineteenth and D streets, Granite City, yesterday afternoon.

Herman Meyer, a furniture finisher, was at work on the top floor of the building, a three-story brick structure, at 2:30 p. m., applying the torch to furniture in a finishing process, when his shirt sleeve became ignited. In attempting to extinguish the flames, Meyer knocked over the torch and it exploded.

Firemen summoned from Madison and Venice, along with two Granite City companies, confined the flames to the third floor and damage resulted chiefly from water and smoke. The fire was under control within an hour. L. R. Burwitz, manager of the concern, estimated the damage to the stock of furniture at $80,000. Elmer McNary, owner of the building, said the building damage was $20,000. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

With the exception of Meyer, who suffered burns on the arm, no one was injured in the blaze.

COCKRELL ADDS NEW PHASE TO U. S. SENATE RACE

Announcement of Judge Disturbing Factor in Plans of Other Prospective Democratic Candidates.

SEVERAL HAVE BEEN SURVEYING SITUATION

More Disconcerting to Those Who Have Been Thinking About Running Than to Congressman Hawes.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

Announcement by Circuit Judge Ewing Cockrell of Warrensburg of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate may be calculated to be a disturbing factor in the plans of several Missouri Democrats who have been giving serious consideration to the making of a similar announcement. It can well be disturbing to several prospective candidates.

It has been known for some time that each of several who have been active in politics believed that when the proper time arrived he could capitalize that element of the Democratic party opposed to Congressman Harry B. Hawes, add it to their own personal following, and defeat Hawes for the nomination.

Whether any one of them could do it has been a moot question. It could be considered almost a certainty that no two or more could, because the larger the number of candidates the larger Hawes' plurality may be expected to be. Hawes already having built up a powerful organization extending into every county in the State.

Some Opposition to Hawes.

For a time it appeared that Hawes would have no serious opposition for the nomination, but the crystallizing of the opposition to Hawes in the minds of many rural voters has been noticeable for several weeks, particularly in the reports a number of rural lawyers gave of sentiment out in the country, when they were in St. Louis a week ago to attend the Missouri Bar Association.

They conceded that Hawes had real strength in the country, but said there was a considerable feeling that some other Democrat should be the nominee.

There has appeared to be little question that Hawes would receive heavy pluralities in St. Louis and Kansas City, and there has been quite a general feeling that these would be sufficient to overcome any deficiency there might be in his rural vote.

Several Surveying Situation.

Acting upon this reported feeling in the country, there have been several who have been surveying the situation with a view to getting into the race, among them former Gov. Gardner, Charles M. Hay of St. Louis, former Congressman James T. Lloyd of Canton and John D. Taylor of Keytesville. So far as can be ascertained, there was no talk of Cockrell until his announcement came Friday.

Each of the prospective candidates undoubtedly feels that he has a strong personal following and that it would be necessary only to draw the anti-Hawes vote and he would have a sufficient count to win the nomination.

Whatever the facts may be as to that, the anti-Hawes vote could hardly be divided between two or more candidates and still be made to count for anything against Hawes.

Proposal That Usually Fails.

Undoubtedly some politician, who will not be without a personal motive, will endeavor to get the prospective candidates together with the idea of inducing all except one to withdraw, and that one to oppose Hawes. Such schemes ordinarily do not work for the simple reason that usually each of the group is fully convinced that all the others should withdraw and permit him to make the race, and consequently such conferences usually wind up with everybody running.

It is too early to say whether any of the group mentioned will be a candidate, though there is little doubt that each wants to be and that encouragement is all any of them needs.

Strength of Cockrell.

While Cockrell has not been prominently active in State-wide politics, he has a considerable strength and might appeal strongly to the women voters, those voters who would be influenced by a "dry" candidate and those who have been interested in social betterment work.

At least his candidacy should be considerably more disconcerting to those who have been thinking about running than to Hawes, who stands to profit by it. While Cockrell possibly would not be considered as strong in vote-getting as one or more of the others might be, he undoubtedly is sufficiently strong to render a candidacy by any of the others rather futile.

SUSPECT IN $2800 HOLDUP OF RAIL OFFICE ARRESTED

Freight House Employes of Illinois Central in East St. Louis Identify Prisoner.

A St. Louis police character, who is being held by the police of East St. Louis suspected of being one of three payroll robbers who stole $2800 from a safe in the freight office of the Illinois Central Railroad, 308 South Front street, East St. Louis, early yesterday, was identified yesterday by four of the six employes of the railroad as the armed man who held them prisoner while one of his companions robbed the safe.

He was arrested in the rear of a dwelling at 305 South Eighth street, East St. Louis, where he has lived for the last two weeks, police said. Searching the house, police found $280 in currency and silver wrapped in several towels, the silver corresponding in amount and denomination with that taken from the safe. A number of car tokens and a blue steel revolver included in the loot were also found at the house. There were between 25 and 30 car tokens in the safe.

The suspect offered no explanation to the police of his presence in the yard at that time of the morning, but said he had bought the tokens recently and that he used the silver to make change in hauling people to the Fair Race Track.

CONTENTED OWNERS

Altho not a daily occurrence we have noted in the latter years an increasing number of patrons who bring the third generation into Conroys for a piano.

In analyzing this condition we cannot but conclude that these owners of former days not only realized that Conroys alone give Conroy values but also remembered—that their transactions with us were of such pleasant a nature, that introducing the third generation seemed quite the obvious thing to do.

It is perhaps unnecessary to state that this singular mark of public commendation is more than pleasing to Conroys, a musical institution that has not changed hands in almost half a century.

St. Louis Child's Portrait in Exhibit of Susan R. Knox Paintings

DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. JOHN RAEBURN GREEN.

Paintings by Susan Knox Have St. Louis Showing

Daughter of St. Louisan and Archie Roosevelt, Jr., Among Portraits in Fall Exhibition.

Upward of 20 portraits and figure paintings by Susan Ricker Knox of New York are presented in exhibition at the Shortridge galleries, 4418 Washington boulevard, where they will remain until Nov. 15. For the most part they are portraits of women and children, the most difficult types with which a painter has to deal.

The portraits of Miss Knox present a splendid opportunity for the study of the difference between representative and presentative art. For some of them aside from the factual circumstances of likeness have a living, a presentative quality of their own. Such a portrait is that of little Coxie Green, a St. Louis child, who looks on the world with humorous and wide-eyed wonder and is as charming an elf as one would find in all that world. The figure piece "Susette," painted in her winter garments with a nodding plume on her tiny white hat, and in whose cheeks the flush of frost is such that one can almost feel, presents a gay and piquant little miss.

Childhood Glorified.

In these two painting there is a quality of childhood, so emphasized as to be almost upon the verge of caricature. Yet, it is restrained to manifest the painter's critical faculty of selection and rejection in organizing the materials of her picture. It brings forward the essential emotion and achieves a result which, while not necessarily photographic in its likeness to the children, presents the unique and inimitable child.

More conventional, yet radiating the health and joy of boyhood is the portrait of little Archie Roosevelt Jr. Yet on the other hand Miss Knox can paint, as in the Betsy and Ann Reed, what are mere photographic puppets.

Three types of portraits are disclosed, one of matronly woman and dreaming men, calm, placid, dignified; another painted in high key, full of color and joyous in their light as the picture of James Douglas, or the figure painting called "The Visitor," which is a delightful decoration, and finally, those which give a fleeting glimpse into the mysteries of childhood and personality.

Miss Knox is well known among the women painters of America, a member of the National Association of Women Painters and Sculptors, of the National Arts Club and the Connecticut Academy, the Buffalo Society of Artists, and many other organizations. She will visit in St. Louis in the course of the exhibition.

DAVEN

What is a L-E-A-K-A-N-D-E-N-S-E-R?

EVERY detector tube needs a grid leak of known and permanent value, and a grid condenser of fixed capacity.

Daven has again blazed the trail by combining in a single unit a grid condenser without mica and without tin foil plates, that does not change its capacity, and does away with wide variations, plus a Daven Grid Leak, standard of accuracy the world over.

The Leakandenser is simple, effective, sturdy, handsome. Precision-built, takes up less space, better looking, with new fastener clip—$1.00.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Oct. 10.—Wheat rose sharply, closing 2¼c to 4¾c higher, after a hesitant start. Corn finished fractionally higher. There was short covering in wheat. Wet weather in Canada was a bullish factor. Corn was helped by wheat.

Primary receipts throughout the United States today were reported as having fallen to but little more than half as much as a week ago, and to well under a third of the parallel 1923 figures. Report of drought becoming serious in Australia was one of the main late factors. Estimates were heard that the Australian yield would be 37,000,000 to 54,000,000 bushels below last years production. There was also report that damage by frost was feared in Argentina. The three degree United States Government crop report was likewise construed as an encouragement to purchases.

Cash wheat was wanted in the cash grain division. Hard wheat was up on demand and Soft was steady to 1c higher. Demand was fair. Corn was steady to ½c higher. Demand was good. Oats were ⅛c to ¼c higher. Demand was good.

The early ranges of both wheat and corn were not wide. December and May corn were fractionally down at opening and ruled so early. Wheat was slightly up to fractionally down. Liverpool wheat closed unchanged to ⅛d higher. Winnipeg early was ⅛c to ¼c up. The Government report was bearish on corn but had little influence. Wheat ruled irregular.

December corn later sold at fractional net gain. Wheat also was net higher.

December wheat opened at $1.44⅜. May wheat $1.44¼. December corn 74⅝c. May corn 79¼c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 32,200 bushels, contrasted with 51,800 a week ago and 235,300 last year. Included 13 cars of contract grade. Corn receipts, which were 21,000 bushels, compared with 58,800 a week ago and 50,400 last year. Included 2 cars of contract grade. Oats receipts, which were 60,000 bushels, compared with 124,000 a week ago and 64,600 last year. Included 21 cars local and 9 through. Hay receipts were 16 cars local and 5 through.

The three principal western markets combined had 1878 cars of wheat compared with 3031 a week ago and 2100 last year. Minneapolis reported 159 cars, Duluth 133 and Winnipeg 1586.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,001,000 bushels, compared with 1,808,000 a week ago and 3,543,000 last year, corn receipts were 269,000 bushels, compared with 479,000 a week ago and 583,000 last year. Oats receipts were 584,000 bushels, compared with 841,000 a week ago and 1,172,000 last year. Wheat shipments were 557,000 bushels, compared with 1,032,000 a week ago and 1,444,000 last year. Corn shipments were 223,000 bushels, compared with 522,000 a week ago and 576,000 last year. Oats shipments were 476,000 bushels, compared with 868,000 a week ago and 570,000 last year.

PRICES MIXED AT WEEK'S CLOSE ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Declines Outnumber Advances With Fair Number of Securities Unchanged —Big Gain in Rice-Stix.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Oct. 10.—Despite the fact that no less than eight securities sold at new high prices on the movement during the past week, the net changes in the general list at the close of the week showed declines outnumbering advances. The total volume of business did not quite measure up to that of the previous week.

Ely-Walker common, Skouras and the newly listed Sheloff Packing stock were the leaders as far as business was concerned. The dry goods company stock showed gain of half point for the week. The packing issue did not hold the full opening day advance.

Among the securities which at some period of the week reached new top figures were Best-Clymer, Bruce common, Hydraulic Brick preferred, Hussman, Laclede Steel, Southwestern Bell preferred, Rice-Stix second preferred and Rice-Stix common. The latter sold mostly at 285, or 50 points above the price paid near close of preceding week. A meeting of stockholders has been called to consider a proposed recapitalization of the company. An offer of common stock of no par value has been proposed in connection with plan to issue 10 shares of no par value stock for each $100 shares no wheld.

International Shoe common at 155 at the close of week was down five points, while Wagner Electric was three points under the closing basis of week ago.

A new issue, St. Louis Amusement Co., class "A" common stock of no par value, will be added to the trading list Tuesday. Owing to Columbus Day, there will be no session Monday.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Heavy trading and higher prices in several sections of the list characterized today's brief session of the Stock Exchange. The motors and the department and chain store shares were the most conspicuous again. A score or more new high records were established. Profit-taking sales in the second and last hours checked the rise in many directions.

The outstanding features in the automobile group were Dodge Brothers A and General Motors. The former changed hands in large volume above 42, while General Motors shot forward several points, also to a new top. Studebaker bettered its previous high, and among the rubber, tire and motor accessory issues, U. S. Rubber common, Fisher Body, Hayes Wheel, Timken Roller Bearing and Stewart-Warner all sold at the highest for the year.

Associated Dry Goods took the lead in the merchandising group. Its advance to a new high was accompanied by similar performances in the Fair, McCrory B and Oppenheim Collins.

New highs were made also by Case Threshing Machine preferred, American Agricultural Chemical preferred, Brunswick Dock, Coca Cola, Western Pacific preferred, Foundation company, Columbia Gas and Federal Mining, Smelting preferred, Central Leather preferred, and Brooklyn Union Gas. The market for U. S. Steel common and the independent steels marked time.

The Bond Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Bonds held their generally firm tone in today's session. What transactions there were were generally upward, instances being Southern Pacific general 4s and U. S. Steel sinking fund 5s. A moderate demand appeared for American Telephone and Telegraph collateral trust 4s.

Czecho-Slovak 8s were higher in anticipation of a new loan. Outstanding Czecho-Slovak bonds are selling to yield practically 8 per cent.

On the week both the foreign and the domestic bonds are higher and this notwithstanding the check which the foreign list received when French bonds were being sold on Monday. New offerings have not been particularly large and this has helped the market. The statement of the member banks of the Federal Reserve System, published today, shows a substantial increase in investment holdings other than U. S. Government securities, so that evidently liquidation from that source has not been as heavy as generally believed. The figures, however, are only brought up to Sept. 30, 10 days ago.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The Evening Post in weekly review exchange market writes today, says:

"One of the chief events in the foreign exchange market during the last week was the inauguration of the new gold movement from London, about $4,000,000 being taken early in the week for shipment to Paris. It had been feared that withdrawals of gold flow would be prevented even though sterling exchange had dropped to or below the gold export point, but the temporary tension in money in this city resulting from calling of loans on a demand from outside sources was looked on as overcoming the disposition to refrain from such importations. It was generally understood that these withdrawals in London have spanned the policy of bankers' interests and that the current movement for some time will reflect only accumulation for gold import purposes. Sterling raised a through the week, around 4.84¾, for cable transactions from that rate being only trifling in effect. Periods of strength and weakness marked francs exchange. A decline to above 4.60 early in the week being followed by an advance to 4.64, but in the last two days the market became heavy. There also showed a weak tone at times, dropping about 3 points in the first half of the week after which it made a moderate recovery.

"There was a special basis for strength in Belgian exchange on the part of the stock exchange operations to stabilize the currency and at the same time there was a discussion of financial plans being the subject of a Belgian loan here. The Belgian franc, which in the preceding week sold as low as 4.38 moved up to 4.39 and which exchanges were in moderate demand for a while, but became stronger toward the end of the week.

"Notwithstanding the Danish nuveau the usual course of reacting and then advancing, movements on Norwegian exchange were peculiar, the 19.50 generally advancing to 20.20. Danish, which yielded early in the week to 23.98, moved up to 24.30 on American exchanges were in urgent demand all through the week. Brazil moved up from 14.81 to 15.10, a high record. Argentine exchange ranged from 41 to 41.50, also a new high for the year.

"Foreign exchange dealers reported business on a light but most European rates showed nominal improvement. Sterling, while, for instance, were up a shade to 4.84 5-16, and francs showed a little better. Norwegian kroner, however, receded under profit-taking."

SHARP RANGES MARK LATE WEEK ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The impressive and broad buying movement that developed in Friday's late dealings was seen in effect on the New York Curb Exchange today. Prices in several issues that have been daily soaring to new high levels were favored by substantial support which produced further advances, the additions in numerous share units ranging from 5 to 10 points. Greatest interest was given the opening transactions in Fox Motor of Canada, at 600, a gain of 55 points over its initial quotation. Hupmobile, Hudson Motor, Nash Motors and Chandler Motor were also active.

Magnolia was the outstanding feature in the petroleum group, selling from 146 to 152, a new high record.

The week's trading and improvements included liquidation in the final few days following the publication of the Federal Motor of Canada's sensational advance. Other features were the sharp recessions in Fisk Rubber, Stutz Motor and the wide-ranging movements in Hudson, which made its greatest progress on Friday's trading when a number of stocks were moved to new high levels and many others sold at the highest prices of the year.

The widest movement was in National Tea which rose 75 points to 560. First Motor of Canada's sensational advance followed the publication of earnings for the year ended July 31 showing profits equal to $67.80 on the 70,000 shares of stock. Stutz Motor had the widest range in its history, selling from 175 to 275. Goodyear Tire was another spectacular feature, moving up over 11 points during the week to the new high of 49. Miller Rubber, which sold as low as 145, moved to 250 to 255. Land Co. of Florida also was active and strong, making a gain of 10 points from its low of the week and John-Manville, after failing to 153, rose 10 points.

There were wide movements in many of the public utilities. Public Power ranged from 383 to 400 and United Light and Power A, which this year sold as low as 44¼, moved from 137¾ to the new high of 167.

The corporation's books aggregated 5,284,771 tons. The increase had been foreshadowed by the steady improvement recently reported in steel operations, which now are averaging around 80 per cent of the industry. The total compares with 5,477,297 tons as the end of September a year ago.

A comparison with the monthly figures of 1924 reveals a striking similarity in the rise and fall of steel production. Unfilled tonnage of the corporation at that time began to fall off in March and it was not until the end of August that a gain in orders was reported.

INFLUENCES DOMINATING STOCK LIST

Basis of Present Position of Stock Market Is Reviewed —Foreign Gold Coming to U. S.

Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

That stock prices do not fall on their high levels is something of a mystery even to persons who understand the fundamental basis of the great upswing since 1921 and particularly since a year ago. An advancing market almost necessarily gets a position where technical reactions come, why some analysts ask, do securities remain firm in the present instance? The answer is that many far-reaching changes have been made, of which some people are unaware. Anybody who thinks the present market has been free from liquidation does not know all of the facts. Large blocks of stocks have been unloaded by operators at different times this year. Large distributions were made this week. Enough liquidation has occurred to break an ordinary market wide open, but trading has become so broad that movements no longer lie within the control of any one group of operators. Nine months we have witnessed more two-million share sessions than appeared in the whole of 1924 and as many as had been recorded for any calendar year before in the history of the Stock Exchange.

Must Understand Currents.

"In the broad market that has developed generalizations on trends are coming to mean less and less as the movements of particular groups more and more. More individuals are stockholders now than ever before in the history of the country and diversification in groups offer a wider area for speculation and investment than ever has been available heretofore. An understanding of the multitude of cross-currents developed in the market during the last year is almost as valuable as a knowledge of money and business conditions in the interpretation of present price movements. So long as fundamental conditions remain sound and money is plentiful this very breadth of the market will help to sustain prices and it will be possible for particular groups to advance as others remain stationary or decline. The very bad news on the business situation has appeared this week, but hopes for a prosperous autumn are being turned into realization.

Earnings of Carriers.

"Net earnings of our carriers for August not only reached a record level for that month, but, except for last October, established a new high for all time. Probably the new records will be made in autumn months. Our railroads will earn more this year than in any year since the war. Cheerful reports come in from the cotton country. Even the new estimate of 14,759,000-bale cotton crop this year, which would be the largest since 1914, does not so much alarm the cotton manufacturers as those who speculate in the raw commodity. Apparently a real demand for cotton goods is felt at last. Commodity prices have reached a plane of stability and freedom from serious maladjustments that until this year had not been known since we entered the war. For both producer and consumer stable prices are preferable to an illusive, fluctuating price level and make for greater happiness and prosperity.

British Gold Coming.

"Authorities differ in their opinions on the volume of foreign financing that may be undertaken here in the next six months, but many generally agree that fewer issues will be sold than might have been marketed had Caillaux settled the French debt while here. The action of the French envoys in so way destroyed our confidence in European securities in general or French securities in particular, but satisfactory settlement would have aroused a demand for foreign bonds in many investors that now feel no urge to hurry. Great Britain is beginning to ship more gold and part of it is coming to our shores, but such a movement was to be expected and need not arrouse fears. While we do not find the metal and England is not particularly anxious to let it go, gold exports from that country are anticipated by the authorities when they lowered the bank rate last week. Unfortunately the Britishers to date have lost a small amount of gold without the satisfaction of seeing that in turn they are reviving trade to any appreciable degree or winning out in the trade warfare."

Motors Strong Saturday.

"Notwithstanding the fact that a prolonged holiday was in prospect prior to the observance of Columbus Day on Monday, trading on the New York Exchange went ahead at a terrific pace during the short session today. Profit-taking was plainly in evidence throughout the morning, but in face of this selling pools continued to bid up their favorite issues in most spectacular manner. Weekly trade reviews reported conditions developing up satisfactorily in practically all directions, the steel tonnage figures published at noon were construed to be favorable, and the new rate fixed for carrying stocks over the week-end all contributed to the help of the bull forces. While selling sales were rather extensive in some groups, offerings were taken without great difficulty and at no time was the indication of any street weakness. The food shares, coppers, steels, some of the oils, and utilities too numerous to mention all went ahead vigorously, reacting only fractionally from the best under selling at the close.

Motors Still Leaders.

"Despite the rapid pace of recent operations in the motors, it was that group which furnished the outstanding features of the day. General Motors was rushed up some 6 points to a new record high, Dodge Brothers shares were heavily bought and Hudson Motors, Hupp and Nash kept abreast of the leaders. The accessories naturally followed along in sympathy. The only discordant note was in Chrysler Motors, which sagged quite readily under heavy offerings, coming down some 3 points from the previous final levels.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"The actual conditions statement of New York Clearing House member banks shows an increase of $41,987,780 in surplus reserves as compared with a week ago. Today's statements showed an excess of $20,454,790, against a deficit of approximately the same proportions last week. Loans and discounts were down $61,372,000 and net demand deposits showed a decrease of $8,976,000."

Exchange Market Quiet.

"Foreign exchange dealers reported business extremely light but most European rates showed nominal improvement. Sterling cables, for instance, were up a shade to $4.84¼ and francs also were a trifle better. Norwegian kroner, however, receded under profit-taking."

MANY DELINQUENTS PAY STATE INCOME TAX

Collections of $60,000 Made in St. Louis Since August With $60,000 More in Sight.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 10.—The roundup of State income tax dodgers and delinquents started by the State in July under a new law authorizing the State Auditor to inspect and check up returns, has netted about $120,000 in St. Louis alone, State Auditor L. D. Thompson said today. He estimated the drive would bring in approximately $250,000 from the entire state by next March.

Thompson received a report from City Collector Koeln of St. Louis that $60,997.85 in delinquent state income taxes had been collected in St. Louis since last August. Additions to the St. Louis income tax assessments, through a check-up on individuals and corporations failing to file State returns will produce another $60,000, Thompson said. The State income tax rate of 1 per cent is doubled on these belated assessments.

Collections in St. Louis.

The delinquent tax collections reported by Koeln included 1925 income tax (delinquent after June 1), $21,580; 1924, $7871.46; 1923, $2082.24; 1922, $4021.09; 1921, $5669.22; 1920, $772.10.

Thompson's income tax field force of four inspectors which has been co-operating with Assessor Gehner of St. Louis in the check-up there, will be sent to other points in the State as soon as the work is finished in St. Louis, Thompson said the force would be kept in St. Louis another month.

"Preliminary investigations made elsewhere indicate income tax delinquencies and tax evasions on a scale proportionate to that in St. Louis in at least two-thirds of the counties," Thompson stated.

Some Assessors Busy.

Some of the County Assessors have been rounding up additional tax returns in advance of a visit from the auditor's inspectors. The Pike County Assessor early in the year reported an income tax assessment that would have produced only $3157 in taxes. However, since his report was filed he has obtained additional returns that swelled the income tax collections to $6145. The assessment reported from Marion County would have produced $15,245, but checking up of returns locally has increased the collections to $16,056.

The Auditor's department is compiling a card index file by counties from lists of Federal income taxpayers in Missouri obtained from the Federal Government, and will use these records in checking up State returns in each county. The total of State returns filed this year was 43,087 less than the number of Federal returns filed last year, although the number of State returns should have been greater than the Federal list.

TURKEY ASPIRES TO SEIZE WORLD'S TRADE IN OPIUM

Angora Government Plans Creation of Monopoly in Raw Production.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co., New York World and Post-Dispatch.

GENEVA, Oct. 10.—Creation of a Government monopoly in the production of raw opium which will enable Turkey to inherit the world's trade is planned by the Angora Government, according to reports received by the League of Nations opium department. The New York World and Post Dispatch correspondent learns that Angora recently appointed a special Government commission, under the commissariat of agriculture, which is inspecting the poppy fields for the purpose of determining how much the industry can be enlarged in the vicinity of Afium and Karahissar.

The commission also arranged a meeting with opium dealers during which Fatk Bey, general director of the opium trade, urged the necessity of promoting export on a national basis. The trade commissariat is investigating the proposals, having promised its active support, while the Government has given its official sanction to the newly formed opium dealers' association.

It has developed that during Foreign Minister Tewfik Bey's three weeks visit to Geneva, during the assembly on the Mosul question, Prince Arfa Ed Dowles, the Persian envoy, conferred at length with the Turks, especially after the decision of the League to send an investigating committee into Persia to assist in abolishing the trade. It is believed that Arfa discussed the possibility of turning over to Turkey the Persian trade and also arranged for the employment of some 40,000 opium growers. In the future Turkey is not to be bound by either the Hague convention or Versailles.

WOMAN'S EXPOSITION PLANNED

My dear Doctor: I hereby wish to thank you for the wonderful cure you have accomplished in treating me for piles, which I have had for the past 22 years.

You have accomplished a cure that others had failed in. My troubles did not amount to much the first few years, but later it was almost unbearable, lack of sleep and nervousness caused a good deal of grief.

I came to you, was examined, and cured practically painlessly, and did not have to lose any time from work, in the short period of time.

In closing I wish to thank you again, and especially for your reasonable fee and the liberal terms you allowed me. I am cured.

Yours truly,

TIGERS DISPL TEAMWORK, HUSKERS M

After Visitors Score in Play, Columbia El Scores Touchdown,

By J. Walter Goldstein,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 10.—Twenty-five long, lean years of Tiger denial were appeased on Rollings' Field this afternoon. The indignities of a quarter century were required when an unstoppable University of Missouri football team outplayed, outfought and outscored the Cornhuskers from Nebraska, 9 to 6.

The heroic repute of their foemen meant nothing to those snapping, snarling Bengals. They probably knew that the Nebraskans had turned back the high-powered Illinois U. eleven only a week ago, but the Tigers weren't interested in reputations today. They even held but little respect for the famous Capt. Ed. Weir, all-America star and the man who made "Red" Grange look like a mere mortal last Saturday.

There was nothing flimsy nor tainted about the conquest, and the Tigers looked fine in victory. They showed no unusual gridiron tactics, employed no surprising artifice nor was there any scintillating work of an individual to dominate the play. It was just a team of 11 men who would not be denied and who fought as savagely as men can fight. They worked as a unit and the things they did were done thoroughly.

Tigers' Teamwork Outstanding.

Savage but clean tackling, intelligent interferers, brilliant punting, alert line charging and determined running by the backs—these were the talents of the Tigers. It was just a knowledge of football fundamentals and a will to win that determined the issue.

The score represents a touchdown and its subsequent goal kick and a safety for Missouri and a touchdown without the goal kick for Nebraska.

All of the scoring incidents followed errors of execution, but this was not unusual. In a game savagely fought as this one, a game in which the work of the first line of defense dominated, it was a certainty from the outset that breaks would decide the issue.

Nebraska Scores Early.

Nebraska started out in a commanding manner and in the first five minutes of play took the lead, 6 to 0, in such handy fashion that the spirit of the 8000 Tiger enthusiasts seemed far more enervated than was that of the big Black and Gold eleven. Whiteman had returned a kickoff 10 yards to his own 35-yard line. One line smash brought but two yards and then a punt by Studebaker was blocked. The ball rumbled along the gridiron past a couple of chalk lines until a Nebraskan hopped on it. Two line-bucks failed; but then a forward pass, from A. Mandery to J. Weir, was good, putting the ball on the line on Missouri's five-yard line. Three line plunges carried the pigskin six inches from the goal, from where Quarterback Brown crashed over.

Coglizer blocked Weir's effort to kick the goal.

Nebraska, however, showed that it was satisfied to rest with the lead until some Tiger error might prepare an opening for a new opportunity. Three times during this period the Cornhuskers took possession of the ball in their territory and each time did Capt. Weir drop back and kick on his first down.

Studebaker Outkicks Weir.

However, this strategy was not as good as it might have been. Tackle Studebaker of the Tigers was punting in pure form and gained on each exchange. It was this kicking advantage that made the Tigers dangerous toward the close of this period.

Forced back to his 15-yard mark, Weir booted 25 yards and the Tigers had the offensive in the enemy's land. Then started a line mass

Missouri U. Defeats Nebraska, 9-6, for First Time Since 1899

TIGERS DISPLAY PERFECT TEAMWORK, OUTPLAYING HUSKERS MOST OF WAY

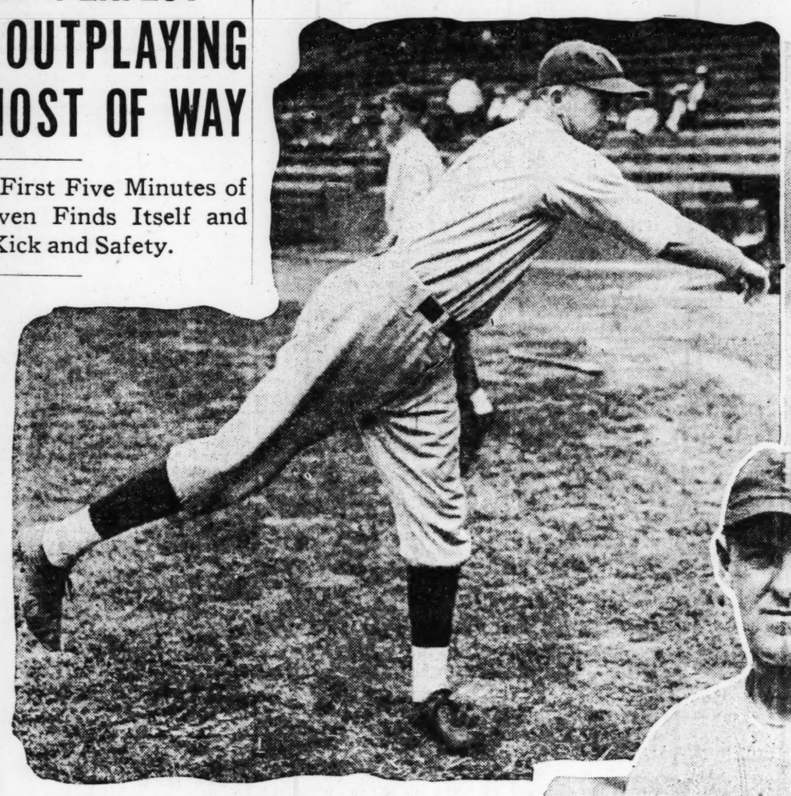
Pitching Highlights of the Third World's Series Game



FERGUSON (above) won the game; Marberry (right) who went in after Ferguson retired for a pinch hitter, narrowly missed losing the verdict; Kremer of Pittsburg (below), pitched well, though defeated.

World's Series Not Won That Way, Writes McKechnie, in Declining to File Protest

"We Failed to Hit in Pinches" Says Pirate Manager—Corsairs Had Better Team on Field in Third Clash of Baseball Title Struggle, He Asserts.

By William B. McKechnie,
Pittsburg Manager.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Well, we lost because we did not hit in the pinches, I want to give all the credit to Washington for its gallant stand. I really believe we had the better club and nine times out of ten would have won the kind of a ball game that was played. We will still win the series, I believe.

For a time I've contemplated a protest on the grounds that Rice never caught the ball that Earl Smith hit, apparently into the temporary seats in right center. We were prompted by the fact that two fans came to the clubhouse after the game and told us that Rice dropped the ball. They said they would make affidavits to the effect. The names of these fans are R. I. Ashman, 901 Ashman avenue, Altoona, Pa., and Ralph Lewis, a Sergeant in the engineering detachment, stationed at the Washington, D. C., barracks. Lewis formerly lived in Pittsburg. These two men naturally wanted the Pirates to win, I suppose.

After Umpire Rigler had made his decision, I told Commissioner Landis that a protest was contemplated. However, after the heat of battle, the Pirate players and myself decided that the matter would go no further.

But world's series games are not won that way and, after all, if we had hit in the pinches the ball Rice caught or did not catch, as the case happened to be, would have made but little difference.

It is the opinion of the Pirates that the catch was not made.

No Complaint to Make.

It was a great battle between two hard-fighting ball clubs. The Pirates have no complaint to make.

A good many fans were wondering why the Pirates did not protest against Marberry batting out of turn in the seventh inning. As a matter of fact, the Pirates got the best of that mistake made by the Washington club.

I will say it was one of the goofiest games I ever have watched.

Are the Pirates downhearted? Say, watch us go in tomorrow's game. I have Emil Yde set to pitch. The catcher will be Gooch. Smith has done wonderful work in the series generally, but Gooch and Yde work so well together that when I use Emil I always stick in Gooch to catch him.

Walter Johnson and Lefthander Yde Will Pitch Today's Game

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—EMIL YDE, a lefthander, who was the National League's greatest pitcher in 1923, and who won two-thirds of his games for Pittsburg this season, will face Walter Johnson here tomorrow in the fourth game of the world series.

Yde and Johnson worked out for about half an hour each today, despite the cold. The tall Pittsburger will be the first southpaw to appear in the series. Gooch will do the catching for the Pirates.

Omaha Defeats Schenbergs in Intercity Game

Freyman Permits but Two Safeties in Giving 3 to 2 Victory.

Omaha defeated St. Louis in the first baseball game yesterday between the municipal champions of the two cities when the Murphy-Did-Its beat the Schenbergs, 3 to 2.

Freyman, Omaha hurler, held the Schenbergs to two hits both of which were made by Newsom. Newsom drove in the only St. Louis runs in the sixth with a single.

The second game of the series will be played this afternoon at Fairground at 3 o'clock. Preceding the game, star players from each of the local muny leagues will try out in a special exhibition before big league scouts. Two of the players will go to St. Louis major league training camps next spring.

MARBERRY PULLS OUT OF HOLE IN NINTH; GOSLIN HITS HOMER

Washington Goes Ahead With Rally in Seventh Inning When J. Harris Scores 'Bucky' With a Single — Ferguson Retires for a Pinch-Hitter.

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Fred Firpo Marberry, the Washington pitcher, who is reserved during ordinary baseball situations and sent to the firing line only when victory or defeat, success or failure depends on a few pitches, when the enemy is rampant and other Washington hurlers have failed, pitched the Senators to victory this afternoon in the third game of the world's series and put the American League champions ahead in the struggle for the world title, two victories to one. The score was 4 to 3.

Dangerous situations mean nothing to Fred Firpo Marberry. The greater the danger, the harder he works. And this afternoon he encountered the most trying situation he ever had in a ball game. And he did deliver.

The Senators had scored two runs in the seventh inning and taken the lead in a see-saw contest and with the team ahead by one run, for the first time during the game, Manager Harris called on Marberry, the pinch-pitcher, to hold that one run lead.

Marberry started as though the enemy had no chance. He struck out the first two men who faced him in the eighth inning and got the next one on a fly to the outfield.

Marberry in Bad Situation.

But in the ninth inning the Pirates were fighting desperately to save the game. Pinch hitter Bigbee struck out but Moore smashed a single to left and Max Carey came through with a line single to right which sent Moore to third. Here was danger. A sacrifice fly, a hit, an error, any sort of a break would tie the game. And then after having two strikes on Cuyler, Marberry curved a fast one into Cuyler's ribs. That filled the bases and the hearts of the Washington populace with worry. Now a walk would tie the score, a walk or hit batsman or a hit, sacrifice fly or error. It certainly looked bad.

The situation was relieved somewhat when Barnhart made the second out by popping a foul to Ruel. But there was still Traynor to get out of the way. It still looked bad.

And when Marberry threw a ball, and then another ball and then a third ball, there was reason for worry. Now one ball would tie the score. Bucky Harris trotted over to the box and said something reassuring. He still had confidence in Marberry. And the pitcher sailed a strike over the plate. But he still had to put two more over to do any good and one bad one would tie the score.

There was no doubt about the next pitch. It was a fast one through the heart of the plate.

Now here was a real pinch. Bases filled, two out and a call of three and two on the batter. Marberry wound up, the Pirate base runners started to run and the crowd held its breath. It was a strike and Pie Traynor swung, but the ball sailed to center field and Sam Rice made an easy catch.

Ferguson Credited With Victory.

Alex Ferguson will get credit for the victory in the official box score; but Fred Marberry is the man who won the game, the man who delivered in that ninth inning pinch, the man whose heart beat true and steady and whose right arm worked so perfectly when the call was three and two and one more ball would have tied the score.

It was another thrilling game. The Pirates scored first on Traynor's triple and Wright's sacrifice fly in the second inning. And, after the Senators had tied the count in the third on Rice's single,

In the seventh the Senators won the game on a walk, three singles and a sacrifice fly. Liebold, batting for Ferguson, walked and McNeely ran for him. Rice filed out but Bucky Harris hit in front of the plate and beat it out for his first safety of the series. Goslin then caught the Pirates unawares, laying down a bunt to Traynor, filling the bases. Judge's sacrifice fly to center scored McNeely and then Joe Harris came through with the

IOWA U. RUNS OVER BILLIKEN FOOTBALL ELEVEN, 41-

Kutsch and Fry Are Stars for Hawkeyes; Higi Suffers Injury

Ingwerson's Backfield Men Get Away for Many Long Gains — St. Louis U. Guard Forced Out in First Quarter.

IOWA CITY, IOWA, Oct. 10.—Uncovering a smashing line attack, the Hawkeyes this afternoon avenged their defeat of nineteen years ago and smothered the St. Louis University eleven under a barrage of touchdowns that brought the total score to 41. The Billikens failed to score.

Just 19 years ago the blue-clad grid men from the Mound City invaded the Hawkeye stronghold and on that occasion humiliated the Iowans with a 39 to 0 victory. This afternoon the story was different.

Kutsch, Iowa's sensational sophomore halfback, dashed 42 yards through the whole Billiken team for a touchdown in the first five minutes of play.

Fry, sturdy Iowa fullback, also ripped through the Billiken forward wall for steady gains. The Iowa machine showed a decided improvement in every department of the game over the exhibition made last week against Arkansas.

Higi Badly Hurt.

Higi, husky St. Louis guard, was seriously injured in the first quarter when his left ankle was reported broken. He was carried from the field by his teammates.

The Billikens, although outplayed in every department of the game, won praise from the 10,000 fans by their gameness. Feldmanry halfback, and Captain Ramaciotti, played great defensive games.

With Fry and Kutsch doing the brunt of the ball-carrying, the Hawks scored three touchdowns in the first quarter and St. Louis failed to get the ball. Just as the whistle for the first quarter blew, Kutsch sprinted 15 yards around right end for the third touchdown.

Shock Troops Shock Billikens.

In the second quarter, one of the prettiest pieces of football of the year was displayed. Kutsch broke loose on his own 30-yard line and dashing through the entire Billiken team raced toward the goal line. Captain Ramaciotti caught the speeding Hawkeye back and spilled him so hard on the 10-yard line that Kutsch dropped the ball and St. Louis recovered on its own 5-yard line. After this play Ingwersen sent in his shock troops, who scored two more touchdowns.

Statistics of the game show the Hawkeyes gained 396 yards in scrimmage and made 14 first down. The Billikens gained only 14 yards in scrimmage and made three first downs. The Iowans also had a distinct advantage in punts.

Rigler's Judgment That Rice Caught Smith's Fly Is Final Word on Play

By J. Roy Stockton.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Was it a spectacular catch by Sam Rice, or a home run by Earl Smith?

Did Rice hold that drive in the eighth inning or did a fan in the right centerfield bleachers give him the ball after he had half fallen over the wall of the bleachers?

Those are the questions over which Washington and Pittsburg baseball fans got all steamed up this evening. Bill McKechnie was quoted as saying he could get affidavits stating that Rice missed the ball, but that he acted so cleverly he completely fooled the umpires, especially Charley Rigler, who as umpire at second base, made the decision that it was a fair catch by Rice. McKechnie considered protesting the game. He changed his mind but still the word war wages.

The Washington players, of course, insisted that Rice made a fair catch, one of the most brilliant catches in the history of world series combats.

Rice Crashes Into Fence.

Two men were out in the eighth inning and the Senators were leading by 4 to 3 when Smith hit a ball to right center. Rice dashed over to center and just when it seemed the ball would crash into the bleachers, Rice stuck up his hand and made or appeared to make a backhanded catch. Rice was near the bleacher fence—when he made that catch, or appeared to make the catch—a low wall perhaps three feet in height, and as he was on the run he stopped with difficulty.

He collided with the fence and for several moments he was bent over that bleacher wall, with his two hands out of sight of the umpires and other players and out of sight of all spectators except a few in the bleachers near where the catch was made, or appeared too have been made.

Umpire Final Judge.

Perhaps Rigler did not consider whether Rice held the ball. Perhaps he saw that Rice had made the catch and decided that even if Sam did drop the ball over the fence, it was after the collision and after it had been held momentarily. The Pirates contended that the ball had been missed by Rice, that it lodged among the feet of the bleacher fans and that while Rice was bending over there, mourning perhaps, his failure to make the catch, one of the fans slipped the ball into his hand.

Probably it never will be known, except by the few there in the bleachers, what really happened. It was said Pittsburg fans who were in the bleachers were ready to make affidavit that Rice did not make the catch. But there also were Washington fans who would swear just as confidently that Rice did make the catch. And so, if it had become a matter of affidavits, they would nullify each other.

Rigler's judgment was that Rice made the catch, and unless an umpire makes a faulty interpretation of the rules, his decision cannot be protested. When it is a matter of an umpire's judgment there is no protest.

Marberry Pitched Despite Sore Arm

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.

FRED MARBERRY, whose relief pitching saved the game for the Senators, went into the box with a sore arm, it was disclosed tonight by Manager Bucky Harris.

Marberry's right wing has not been in the best of shape for some time, but he performed courageously.

"I'll throw the old arm off to save the game," Marberry told Harris when he was summoned to the mound. "Firpo Fred" immediately struck out Wright and Grantham and had two strikes on Smith when the Pittsburg catcher hit his disputed liner to Rice at the bleacher rail.

Then, after a wild start in the ninth, he pulled himself out of a bad hole with the bases full.

SOUTH BROADWAY A. C. BOXING TOURNAMENT POSTPONED TO NOV. 5

An amateur boxing tournament, which was scheduled by the South Broadway A. C. for next Thursday night, has been postponed to Thursday night, Nov. 5, according to an announcement last night by Willie Miller, chairman of the matchmaking committee. Miller stated the postponement was ordered after club officials had been notified that two boxers would be unable to compete in special bouts he had scheduled for the coming Thursday night. Six interclub events are planned as special attractions on the November card.

Only Sam and His Maker Know If He Caught Smith's Smack, Says Lardner

They Had Better Get This Over Quick or There Won't Be Space in Dist. of Columbia Asylums.

By Ring Lardner.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—They had better get this over quick or there won't be space enough in the Dist. of Columbia asylums to hold all those who are going to apply for a room without bath. In the first place the people who came to the ball park without being obliged to can be voted a little off color as it was no place to be for a person with any regard for health. The cold seemed to go to everybody's head in the 8th innings. It was in this wild session that Sam Rice fell into the right field seats after a terrific smack by Earl Smith and sooner or later came up with the ball. Whether or not Sam caught the ball will always be between him and his maker. I am not his maker. Several of those setting in those seats were in position to tell the truth, but it is kind of hard to reach people by phone in Washington this week, expecially when you don't know their name and don't want to.

A moment later Washington sent Marberry to bat in somebody's else's turn. At least that was what we thought in the iceberg they have nicknamed the press box. I mean those of us who weren't too congealed to think. Nobody on the benches or playing field seemed to agree with us and maybe we were all wrong. It wouldn't be the first time or yet the last time. Anyway it didn't make a difference in the result and the neutral element is tickled to death that the pastime didn't go into extra innings, in which event they would have had to chip one and all out of the ball park with picks.

Oswald Is Not Unlucky.

Washington is supposed to be far enough south to get out of October blizzards, but if that is the case it is just as well for our widows and kiddies that the American League pennant was not win by Philadelphia. If any of the call players or umpires are accused of having cold feet at this game they can justly retort "Who didn't?"

Oswald Bluege may consider himself unlucky left at home in a warm bed, waiting for somebody to come and replace the divots Vic Aldridge had sliced out of his head. But Oswald, there are hundreds who would gladly have changed places with you, including the undersigned.

The leader of the greatest band we have ever heard at a serious seen President Coolidge approaching down the aisle and ordered his men to play "I'll see you in my dreams." They say it is very difficult for lots of people to see him any other way. No sooner had the President got seated when they played the Star-Spangled Banner and he had to stand up again. He seemed to be singing under his breath and it is said that he was making up a parody line dedicated to the Washington players who failed to get some very important hits in Pittsburg Thursday. The line was as follows:

Aldridge Still There.

"The bums popping in air gave proof through the afternoon that Vic Aldridge was still there."

Judge Landis went and set in the President's box for a moment. The President was decked out in a beautiful new salmon colored hat, while with all due respect to the Judge it must be admitted that his own fedora looked like it had spent two or three days in Pittsburg.

The visiting boys scored a run in the second because J. Harris tried to make a catch of Pie Traynor's short Texas Leaguer to right. Pie dashed around to third and came in on Wright's long fly to J. Harris whose throw home might have caught somebody who was in no special hurry. The Senators lost a slim chance to score in their half when Max Carey dropped Peck's fly with two out. Max should not be found fault with for this little slip. He has been smacked three times with pitched balls in his throwing arm and was beginning to wonder whether a world serious is worth while after all. Oswald Bluege was wondering the same thing with what Vic Aldridge left of his wondering apparatus. Max stopped wondering in the fifth long enough to take two bases on a single which is against the rules in polite leagues.

Crop of Goose Flesh.

When the score was 3 to 1 in favor of Pittsburg in the 6th, Goslin smacked a home run into the right field seats. Anybody but a goose would waited till there was a man on base in which case the wallop would have tied the score.

Several of Those Setting in Seats Can Tell Truth, but It Is Kind of Hard to Reach People by Phone.

However, his mighty blow gave the Pirates such a crop of goose flesh that they stood flat-footed and watched him beat out a bunt when he came up in the 7th inning calamity. Those of us up in the exposed pressed box was enjoying the same ailment for another reason.

A good many of the experts was expressing mystification in regards to the manner in which Peck and other star members of both clubs had shown a tendency to juggle ground balls, and to nearly throw them away after once picking them up. Also why some of the big hitters has been accumulating batting averages that wont never cause their wife and kiddies to shout with joy and sing "Look what my red-hot papa done." It seems to me like the solution is to be found in the boys' literary efforts. A bat feels awful big and awkward in your hands after you have set up half the night juggling a pen, and it is a difficult matter to pick up a ball clean and throw it straight when suffering with writers' cramps.

Too Many Player Authors.

Never in my experience of worlds serious have I seen or heard of so many athletes devoting themselfs to authorship. If there is any member of either team who aint dashing off literature during the present brawl, why it must be the nephew of old assistant bat boy. As a result of this situation a movement has been started amongst the regular baseball writers to have the players set in the press coop next year, while us boys takes their place on the field. This would insure the serious being indefinitely postponed during the first game to permit of the removal and disposal of the bodies.

One of the sensations of today's pre-game episodes was the big cheer that went up when the writer of these lines entered Mr. Griffith's stadium. It was learned later that I had been mistaken for President Coolidge's father.

As we struggle out of the park there is a report that Bill McKechnie has protested the game. My reply to Bill is, "So do I."

Rutgers Team Beaten.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—University of Maryland's hard running, flashy, open game was too much for Rutger's football team on Franklin Field today, the Marylanders winning, 16 to 6. The weather was cold and only a small crowd saw the game.

Third Game Sidelights

By a Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.

"Walter Johnson will go against the Pirates in the fourth game, and Coveleskie in the fifth, and it looks like we ought to take four out of five," said Clarke Griffith, president of the Senators, tonight.

"I am glad that McKechnie changed his mind about protesting the game," Griffith continued "Rice's catch was the greatest piece of fielding I ever saw in my baseball life, and it would have been foolish to protest against such a fine piece of work."

Griffith went on to explain that Rice had collided with a negro spectator in the bleachers, when he half fell over the wall, and that the collision dazed the outfielder. Griffith said Rice's neck was black and blue from the collision.

Griff Indorses Ban's View.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, said that he was in favor of a major league agreement to prevent the reducing of the playing area by building temporary stands. Griffith said he was heartily in accord with Johnson's views and it was said the matter would be brought up at the joint meeting of the major leagues this winter.

Poor Baseball Day.

It was poor weather for baseball and very little baseball was played. It was about the most poorly played ball game in the history of world series competition.

The management, the field direction, the umpiring, and the official scoring were all at fault.

The two major league managers permited a batter to go to the plate out of his proper turn.

Umpire McCormick permitted Goslin to go to second on the passed ball, though ground rules provided for only one base.

Joe Judd went to sleep around the bases, stopped and watched a first baseman take a throw when he might have scored had he continued to the plate.

Thermometer at 41.

The thermometer registered 41 during the ball game and there was a 35-mile wind sweeping over the field. When the tarpaulin cover was taken off the infield this morning there was ice on it. No wonder the baseball was poor.

Johnson Denies Belittling Cards.

Ban Johnson tonight in the course of comment on the world series in particular and baseball in general declared he had been misquoted when it was said that he made the statement that the Cardinals were slowly starving to death and that St. L ouis was not big enough to support two baseball clubs.

"I never mentioned any club or any city in particular," said Johnson. "In my talk at Kansas City I merely said that experience in the major leagues indicated that New York and Chicago were the only cities which had proved that they were capable of supporting two big-league teams profitably and I am sure that there will be no dissent from that statement."

base hit that won the game, a single to left.

Ferguson Wild at Start.

Ferguson was wild at the start. He walked Moore and hit Carey with a pitched ball. It was the third time in the series that Carey reached first in this manner. Cuyler sent a high fly to Goslin and then Peck helped to atone for previous errors by taking a hot grounder from Barnhart and starting a double play.

It was a fine stop of a difficult scooter made on the first hop.

With two down in the Washington half of the inning, Goslin swung and missed a third strike and Earl Smith also missed the ball. Goslin raced around to second base, while Smith held out his hands for Umpire Barry McCormick to give him another ball, claiming that Goslin had fouled the ball.

Kremer had pitched to Judge before the other umpires decided that McCormick had pulled his first name. Apparently there was an agreement or ground rule, for Goslin was ordered back to first base. Judge pooped to Grantham to end the inning.

Traynor Gets Triple.

Joe Harris, the hitting hero of the first two games, gave the Pirates a run in the second inning when he tried to make a shoestring catch of Traynor's low liner. The ball skidded past Joe, and the fleet-footed Traynor raced to third and scored on Wright's sacrifice fly to Goslin.

Max Carey gave the Senators an opening in the same inning, but the champions did not profit by it. With two out Carey camped under Peck's fly and then muffed it. Peck reaching second.

Kremer declined to give Muddy Ruel anything good to swing at and after the catcher walked, the Pirate hurler struck out Ferguson without giving him so much as a foul.

Carey was heaving many sighs of relief as he came in from the field. A Washington base hit might have put that muff in the class with the one made famous by Snodgrass.

Muddy Ruel did some clever catching in the third inning. After Kremer had been called out on strikes, Muddy went to the backstop for Moore's foul and then raced in front of the plate to turn Carey's neat bunt into a put out.

Washington tied the score in the third inning. Sam Rice led off with a single, a grounder which buzzed past Kremer and skipped into center field. Manager Harris promptly sacrificed and Rice went to third on Goslin's long fly to Cuyler. Joe Judge crashed a double down the right field line, scoring Rice. This was the first two-base hit of the series. Joe Harris reached first on Wright's low throw, but Judge tried to score and was out at the plate, Grantham to Smith.

The Pirates soon untied it. Cuyler doubled to left center to start the fourth and crossed the plate on Barnhart's single to left. Cuyler stumbled as he rounded third and a perfect throw would have nailed him at the plate. Goslin's toss, however, was too far to fuel's left. Barnhart went to second on the play at the plate and Traynor waited and drew a walk from the apparently faltering Ferguson.

Peckinpaugh threw out Wright and with Pirates on second and third, Fred Firpo Marberry began to warm up for the Senators. Grantham popped to Judge and Ferguson decided that Earl Smith was too dangerous a customer and gave him an intentional pass, filling the bases. It proved to be fool strategy, for Kremer struck out, swinging wildly at a wide third strike.

Myer Makes Fine Play.

The Pirates did some brilliant fielding in the fourth. Myer drew a pass to start the frame and then Peck shot a hot grounder between third and short. Wright raced over to the edge of the infield, far to his right, made a great stop and whipped to Moore in time to force Myer. Peck then died stealing and Ruel filed to Barnhart.

Veterans are likely to be self satisfied and complacent and that's what Sam Rice was in the Pirate half of the fifth when Carey singled to center and turned it into a double. Rice fielded the ball with too much nonchalance and when he came to, Carey was sliding into second. Young Buddy Myer made a great play on Cuyler's grounder, coming in fast and throwing to first on the run, without taking time to aim or get set. Carey went to third on the play, but he was left as Barnhart fouled to Judge.

A double play helped to turn back the Senators in this inning. After Ferguson struck out, Rice beat out a slow roller in front of the plate, but he was doubled off first on Bucky Harris' liner to Moore.

Peck's Error Is Costly.

Traynor got the longest drive of the game thus far to start the sixth inning, but Sam Rice raced to the fence in left-center and pulled down the ball as it was about to crash against the wall. Roger Peckinpaugh, the most valuable player in the American League except Sisler and Collins and Cobb and Speaker and Walter Johnson, then contributed his fourth error of the series, a wide and low throw on Wright's easy grounder. The error was costly too, for, after Grantham struck out, Smith singled to right, sending Wright to third and Kremer's easy grounder to Harris took a bad bounce past the second baseman and went for a single, scoring Wright.

Smith stopped at second on the hit and Moore then drew a pass, filling the bases. Carey, however, struck out to end the inning.

Goslin Gets Home Run.

Goose Goslin, more or less of a dud up to this time, came through with a home run to start the seventh inning and put the Senators ahead in one run of a tie. Judge Bluege sent Carey deep into center for a high fly. Joe Harris singled to center and after Myers struck out, Peck clapped the first pitch to him for a single, Harris stopping at second. Ruel punched the ball down the left field line, but Traynor grabbed it and stepped on third, forcing Joe Hagris.

After Peck had thrown outside to start the seventh, Goslin went to the fence for a fine catch of Barnhart's long drive, but missed the ball, while he turned a somersault after making the catch. It would have been a home run in the Pirate ball park. Traynor then popped to Harris.

Joe Harris Comes Through.

Manager Harris sent in Lelbold to bat for Ferguson in the second half of the inning, and the pinch-hitter drew a base on balls, after which McNeely was sent in to run for him. Sam Rice crashed the ball to left for what threatened to be a base hit, but Barnhart raced over and made a clever catch near the foul line. The Senators were rampant, however, and could not be stopped this inning. Bucky Harris got his first hit of the series when he beat out a roller in front of the plate. Goslin then surprised the Pirates by laying down a bunt, when the Corsairs were hoping that he would not knock the ball over the fence. This filled the bases and the tieing run crossed the plate on Judge Bluege's sacrifice fly to Carey. Joe Harris then made another strong bid for the honor of being the hero of the series. Joe cracked a single to left and Bucky Harris dropped the pellet with a run that put the Senators ahead. Myers ended the rally when he hit down the first baseline and the ball hit his leg as he ran toward first.

Joe Harris, having done his duty, Manager Harris took him out of the game, sent McNeely to center, shifted Rice to right and called on Fred Firpo Marberry to hold the one-run lead. Marberry started out impressively. He struck out Wright without the Pirate getting a foul and fanned Grantham on a foul and two clean misses.

Rice Makes Star Catch.

Earl Smith connected solidly with one of Firpo's fast ones and sent a drive toward the seats in right-center. But Sam Rice raced back and made a spectacular back-handed catch with his gloved hand. He collided with the fence but the catch and fans prevented him from catapulting over the pellet. This caused the Pirates to protest that Rice had not caught the ball and that the ball had been given to him by one of the bleacher occupants.

The Senators batted out of turn in the eighth inning, without the Pirates calling it to the attention of the umpires. Peck grounded out to start the inning and Ruel struggled to left. It was McNeely's turn at bat, as he had gone in to run for Lelbold, who had batted for Ferguson. But Marberry, who should have taken Joe Harris' place in the batting order, went to bat and sacrificed.

Rice grounded to short to end the inning.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—In all my experience on baseball dia- nds, I don't believe I have seen a more unusual game than that today. A little bit of everything was shown and maybe I wasn't ed that we won out after I apparently had kicked it away in the frame. It would have been particularly tough for me had we in view of the fact that just before play started I was presented a cup full of money by Washington fans.

e game was an exceptional- from two angles. In the first , there were so many heroes, I have never seen four um- so "up in the air." looking for players to hand crown to, four—Sam Rice, Marberry, Alex Ferguson and Goslin—stand out. A bet- atch than Rice made in the h has yet to be seen in our There is no doubt in my but that Sam held the ball. reason he did not come up er was because he hit his 's apple on a fan's head while g and it knocked the wind of him.'

the sixth, Sam made another catch, which robbed Tray- of a home run, while Goslin one in the seventh which Barnhart a four-baser, the Goose falling after spearing the drive.

Managers Must Be Awake.

With tight fielding, Ferguson would not have been scored upon. His pitching was as good as any we have had in the series to date, which is saying something. Marberry showed just why he is rated so highly as a relief pitcher and that he has plenty of nerve certainly was demonstrated in that Pittsburg ninth.

The umpires found themselves in two ticklish situations and one which was not brought up for them to pass on, simply because Pilot McKechnie was asleep. In the first, Goslin fanned, but was able to get all the way to second on Smith's passed ball. After a strike had been called on Judge, next up, the three base umpires suddenly decided that the Goose was entitled to but one base and the umpire in chief was overruled.

The other was in regard to Rice's catch in the eighth. Momentarily all seemed puzzled, but Rigler quickly settled the question by declaring it a legal catch.

When Marberry came to the bat in the ninth position, a protest from McKechnie would have automatically retired him, for he would have hit in J. Harris' place. As it happened this made no difference as no scoring was done, but it shows that, even in world's series, mistakes are apt to be made and the rival managers must always be on their toes.

Today's victory puts us one-up again and this time I look for us to carry on, with two more wins likely as Walter Johnson and Stan Coveleskie are due to work for us tomorrow and Monday.

Central's Eleven Defeats Mexico Cadets, 27 to 7

Fumble by MacCready Gives Visitors Their Only Touchdown.

The Central High School football eleven gained a 20-to-7 victory over Missouri Military Academy yesterday. Walker's aggregation gained an early lead and was never headed. It was not until late in the final period, when MacReady, Central's safety man, fumbled on his two-yard line that M. M. A. was able to score.

Coach Walker's boys got in front in the opening period when they counted first on a safety after blocking a Cadet kick, and added a touchdown on a pass, Harnett to Cameron, which resulted in a 25-yard gain.

In the third quarter, a series of gains, with a 25-yard run by MacIntosh, put the ball on the five-yard line and MacReady went over for the touchdown. MacIntosh kicked goal.

A long forward pass and a three-yard plunge by Klausner gave Central a score at the start of the final period. MacIntosh went over for the final score a short time later and kicked goal.

When MacReady fumbled on his two-yard line, M. M. A. recovered, and after Central had held for two downs, Maloney went over and kicked goal.

AERIAL ATTACK GIVE PITTSBURG VICTORY, 15-7

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 10.—Upset by Lafayette last week, the University of Pittsburg football squad came back strong today to score a 15 to 7 victory over the West Virginia University gridders.

After a terrific struggle during the scoreless first half, the Mountaineers, with Barnum, Farley, Morrison and Glenn starring, used forwards and plunges to register their only score. Barnum, who carried the ball across, added the point.

But Big Andy Gustafson, with the aid of Harding, Welch and Kifer, the other Pitt backs, was too much for the Mountaineers. He scored two touchdowns and a field goal during the final half. Pitt used a forward pass to perfection to win.

MATHEWSON BURIED AT LEWISTON, PA., WHERE HE LEARNED BASEBALL

By the Associated Press.

LEWISBURG, Pa., Oct. 10.—Christy Mathewson was laid to rest today in this quiet little college town where he won his first honors on the baseball diamond. His grave overlooks the grounds of Bucknell University from which he went forth years ago to scale the topmost heights of baseball fame.

Christy's body, brought here last night from Saranac Lake, N. Y., where he died after a five-year fight against tuberculosis, rested in state during the forenoon today at the home of Mrs. Mathewson's mother, Mrs. Frank C. Stoughton.

Judge Fuchs, John McGraw, Bancroft, Reilly, Ernest Sterling of Bronxville, N. Y., and Albert Powell of New Haven, Conn., part owner of the Boston team, were pallbearers.

Memories of Matty's triumphs of years ago were called forth by the floral tributes. One, reminiscent of the days when umpires announced "Mathewson and Bresnahan" as the battery for the Giants, bore the name of Roger Bresnahan. Another came from Judge Landis. Virtually every major league baseball club sent offerings, as did the umpires of the National League and the league itself.

GAFFSMAN WINS $5000 STAKE AT LAUREL TRACK

By the Associated Press.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 10.—Two $5000 stakes were run here today. The first was the Patuxent Steeplechase and was won by Marshall Field's Labrador very easily.

The other stake was the National for 2-year-olds. The Glen Riddle Farm sent two to the post and they were played down to 1 to 2. Seagram Stable's Graffaman, however, beat them both by a length or more. He paid about $ to 1. Corvette was second and Crusader third.

Soldan Beats Western, 7-0, And Cleveland Defeats St. Louis U. High, 9-0

Lampton, Western Fullback, Is Star of First Game of Double-Header—Musgrove Makes All of Cleveland's Points.

Spectacular plays featured the victories of two City high school teams over their "Prep" School League opponents in a doubleheader football program yesterday afternoon on the St. Louis University Field. Soldan defeated Western Military Academy, 7 to 0, while Cleveland whitewashed St. Louis University High, 9 to 0. A crowd estimated at 2000 witnessed the games.

In the first quarter of the opener, Richardson, Soldan back, intercepted a pass and ran 55 yards for a touchdown, the only score of the game. Lampton, Western fullback, proved the big star. His passes and punts, outdistanced any of the city players' team's best efforts. Frequently the lanky Westerner hurled the pigskin 40 yards, only to be intercepted or grounded.

In the last quarter Lampton passed 30 yards to Frazier, who ran 15 more to put the Alton boys in a scoring position. A touchdown nearly materialized when Lampton tossed to Soldan's 3-yard mark, but Pulford intercepted and the game ended with Soldan in possession of the ball.

Only one other time, in the second quarter, did Western near its opponent's goal posts, so strong was the Soldan line. Capt. Butz shone on the defense, while Richardson was the offensive star for the West Enders.

Billiken Player Injured.

The second game was even more thrilling than the first. Homer Musgrove, quarterback and captain of Cleveland, completely outgeneraled the St. Louis University High quarter. The South Side flash made all of Cleveland's scores, with a dropkick and a touchdown to his credit. Musgrove also did most of the punting, averaging more in yardage than did Campbell, the Blue and White booter.

It was Musgrove's ability to outkick Campbell that led to Cleveland's first score. Taking advantage of Campbell's poor attempts at punting, Cleveland got possession of the ball on the St. Louis U. 10-yard line in the first quarter. Failing to gain through line plunges, Musgrove dropkicked from the 12-yard line.

Shortly afterward "Ham" Strong, the Billiken Junior's quarterback, suffered a shoulder dislocation and was sent to the hospital. The removal of Strong undoubtedly had great influence on the result of the game, for the work of the Blue and White backfield was ragged thereafter.

Rough play marred the game in the third quarter. Coover, Cleveland end, was banished from the game, and his team penalized because he clipped from behind.

Campbell's weak punting put Cleveland in a position to score in the final quarter. After an exchanging of kicks, fake play netted the Carondelet school first down on St. Louis University High's 28-yard line. Musgrove broke through and eluded the whole Western eleven to put the ball over. He failed to make the extra point.

On the defense, Don Haynes, a big table; Knierim, an end, and Fowler, also a tackle, shone for Cleveland. The Junior Billiken stars were: Butler, a guard, and Averal, a tackle.

Dempsey and Stribling Win

Champion Stops One of Three Rivals—Georgia Heavy Beats Huffman.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 10.—Young Stribling, Georgia heavyweight, decisively defeated Sailor Eddie Huffman, former navy heavyweight, in a 10-round fight at Ascot Speedway Park here today. A crowd of about 25,000 saw the bout.

The Georgia youngster completely outboxed his opponent, winning seven of the rounds, while two were even, and one went to Huffman.

Hard lefts and rights drove Huffman into the ropes repeatedly and Stribling was master of the fight throughout. He was never in danger.

Jack Dempsey, world's champion heavyweight, appearing in three two-round exhibition bouts, knocked out one of his opponents and allowed the other two to stay. Jack Stafford, navy heavyweight, was knocked out, while Joe Bonds, an old timer, and Ray Neaman, a local heavy, weathered their part of the sparring match.

In the preliminaries Sailor Ritchie King, navy featherweight, took a decision over Jackie Sherman in four rounds. Young Sam Langford, negro lightweight, fought a six-round draw with Young Burmey, Filipino.

NEGRO CHAMPIONS BEAT NASH ALL-STARS, 5—2

The St. Louis Stars defeated the Nash All-Stars in an interesting game yesterday at the Stars' park by a score of 5 to 2.

The motor team scored two runs in the fifth inning, but could not overcome the locals when they piled up five runs in the seventh inning to win the game. Peetz did some brilliant hurling but lacked support. The second game will be played this afternoon at 2:30

BROWN HOLDS PENNSY TO A 9 TO 0 SCORE

By the Associated Press.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 10.—The University of Pennsylvania, playing its first game against Brown University since 1913, achieved a 9 to 0 victory here today. It was the first major contest in the new Brown stadium. Nearly 15,000 persons shivered in the big concrete stands.

Penn's tallied a touchdown in the second quarter and a field goal from Brown's 15-yard line in the third period, were scored by Charley Rogers, right halfback, and Al Kreuze, fullback, respectively. Kreuze failed to kick goal after Rogers' touchdown.

A Brunonian drive landed the team on the Penn 12-yard line but the Red and Blue stopped the onrushing foe. A similar disappointment to Brown fans and another example of Brown's lack of punch, came late in the fourth period, when Penn held its rival on the five-yard line.

12,000 CROWD SEES LONG SHOT WIN FAIRMOUNT FEATURE

Resolution Pays $51.80 In Handicap

Gayety of Spectators Inspires Jockeys to Better Riding and Management Announces Plans for Improvements.

By Dent McSkimming.

Every element that goes to make up a pleasant afternoon for racegoers was present yesterday afternoon at Fairmount Race Track, where the record crowd to date, estimated by the track management at 12,000 persons, witnessed one of the best programs of the meeting.

The horses and jockeys seemed inspired by the enthusiasm and color of the crowded grand stand, and they went "all out" in trying to win honors and acclaim. There was probably more good racing on display than there has been in any previous day's entertainment at the new track.

Long shots, while not dominating the card, were numerous enough to give the crowd something to shout lustily about. Resolution, winner of the feature race of the day, The Hotel Statler Handicap, returned to his supporters $51.80 for a $2 investment at the ticket windows. Uproar, in the second race, won and paid $12.50 for $2.

The track was dry and apparently fast, but in racing parlance it was actually slow because of the moisture retained in the under strata, after the continuous rains of a week.

In a gaily decorated box near the judges' stand, the Veiled Prophet Queen, Miss Maud Miller Streett, and her party of friends, sat as honor guests of the management of the Fairmount Jockey Club.

Plans to Improve Track.

Col. Matt J. Wynn, managing director of Fairmount, in expressing his delight at the capacity crowd, supplemented his comment with an announcement that he has now under consideration architects' plans for vast changes in the new racing plant, looking toward an increase in the seating capacity, the erection of a pretentious clubhouse, the creation of an artificial lake in the infield and other features. These changes will be made in time for the spring meeting, Wynn believes.

Fifth Race a Thriller.

In point of good racing, close finishes and general interest, the fifth race on the card, billed as the feature event, for the Hotel Statler silver trophy, was the outstanding race of the day.

Resolution, left at the post and a bad last as the horses made the first turn, was brought all the way through the field of eight starters to win. Jockey R. Costello made the most of each opportunity to push his mount past one and then another of the horses which started ahead of him, and his victory brought a great cheer from the crowd.

A St. Louis owner took a share of the honors in this race, for Child's Play, the 5-year-old mare owned by A. P. ("Tony") Foley, finished in second place, with Transformer, ridden by Mack Garner, in third place.

The longest price of the day was paid on Resolution, a $2 ticket bringing $51.80.

Another Close Finish.

Another sensational finish was provided in the second race, wherein the early leader weakened as the field reached the stretch turn and the entire nine horses appeared to be running head and head.

Uproar held on better than the others and outlasted Fausto, which finished second, and Lubeck, which was third. The others were not far behind.

In the opening race, St. Maurice, Rosamond and Llerre finished in the order named after Froth, well liked by the bettors, had set the early pace. It was a neck-and-neck finish.

Fast Time Takes "Queen's Purse."

The third, a five and one-half furlongs race for 2-year-old fillies, called The Queen' Purse, in honor of the Veiled Prophet Queen, Miss Maude Miller Streett, saw Fast Time out in front at the start and never headed. The thrill in this race was provided by Jockey Mack Garner on Virginity.

He was in poor position at the start and was forced to go around the entire field to finish third, challenging madly in the last sixteenth. Boch, which finished second, was lucky to stand off this threat from Virginity, and Fast Time had too good an early lead to be overtaken.

Other Results.

The fourth a six-furlong race for 3-year-olds and upward, found Robert Maxwell, with W. Charles up, off to a good start. He increased his lead as the race grew older and finished with three lengths to spare. George Groom was second and Myrtle Bell third.

In the sixth, Irish Lace, with the new jockey, Vernon Wallis, in the saddle, was forced to overtake Sombre and then outlast Mad Boy to win by half a length.

The seventh went to Billy Starr, with Al Stebler second and Bucko, never worse than fourth, finishing third.

MISS PEP WINS WOMEN'S DISTRICT GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Mrs. Hynes Beaten in Final, 1 Up

New Champion Captures Four of Last Five Holes to Conquer Triple A Rival Over Westwood Course.

By John H. Alexander.

Miss Virginia Pep of Midland Valley is permanent possessor of the three-time trophy emblematic of the women's golf championship of the St. Louis district. Yesterday she was carried to the eighteenth green at the Westwood Country Club by Mrs. I. S. Hynes of Triple A, but won the final match of the annual district tournament. Her margin of victory was 1 up on 18 holes.

Miss Pep's victory was accomplished only after a spectacular spurt on the final holes after being three down on the thirteenth green. While her followers in the small gallery held their breath, she won 14 and 15, halved 16 and won 17 and 18 when Mrs. Hynes found the traps in reaching the greens and putted poorly after getting on.

The winner's putting was bad throughout the round as it has been all week, but her approaches were high and true while her wood shots got good distance. Mrs. Hynes, who has played golf only two years, looked like the new champion when she ran up her lead to three holes in the final stages, but cracked under the strain of the match and saw the second tournament in which she has played go glimmering.

All Square at Turn.

Neither of the finalists played especially brilliant golf, as their cards show:

Women's Par Out—
654 464 444—41

Miss Pep Out—
675 465 446—47

Mrs. Hynes Out—
585 565 355—47

Women's Par In—
456 445 345—40-41, 81

Miss Pep In—
567 445 345—43-47, 90

Mrs. Hynes In—

For the first nine holes the match was neck-and-neck, with the lead shifting back and forth until the turn, where they were all square. Miss Pep's poor putting lost her several holes. Mrs. Hynes won the first with a birdie and Miss Pep squared things on the next hole, when both putted badly. After halving the third, Miss Pep assumed the lead on the fourth with a par and held it until the seventh, when Mrs. Hynes sank a long putt for another birdie.

Mrs. Hynes sliced her approach and three-putted the eighth to go to the ninth one down. She again squared the match here, when Miss Pep tried to play her second under a large overhanging tree branch, and lifted the ball too much, her shot hitting the limb and stopping dead.

Miss Pep hooked her drive on the tenth into the rough and lost a stroke getting out. She laid a high approach shot three feet from the flag, but missed a four, laying her opponent a stymie. Mrs. Hynes played the stymie perfectly, halving the hole.

Miss Pep Rallies.

Mrs. Hynes then made her rally which almost won the match, taking the next three holes in a row, two of which Miss Pep lost by loose putting and the third on an overlong approach. Miss Pep's putt to halve on the eleventh was no longer than three feet but she was short. She missed another short one on the twelfth and almost cleared the thirteenth green with her approach shot, while Mrs. Hynes sank an 8-foot putt to win.

Three down and five holes to play, a situation trying enough to test the best tournament nerve, Miss Pep tightened up and took the next two holes and went to sixteen only one down. Sixteen is just 103 yards and both had no trouble in getting threes.

One up going to seventeen, Mrs. Hynes faltered completely on her short game and, running afoul of the traps, took three and four putts to go down. Miss Pep was quick to take advantage of it, winning the seventeenth and taking the match on the final green.

Miss Pep also won the title in 1922 and 1923.

Other Class Results.

Results in other classes were as follows: Mrs. Adolph Stein, winner in Class A; Mrs. H. H. Scott, winner of Class A consolations; Mrs. A. F. Eisenbeiss, winner in Class B; Mrs. Crawford Duncan, winner in special class.

The final matches in the women's inter-club series will be played Wednesday morning over the Glen Echo course. The trophies will be awarded at luncheon immediately following the matches. Mrs. J. A. Corbett, president of the district association announced yesterday.

Ames Surprises By Victory Over The Jayhawkers

Line Plunging Ability Enables the Cyclones to Down Jayhawkers.

By the Associated Press.

AMES, Ia., Oct. 10.—The Iowa State college football team showed unexpected line plunging ability here today and decisively defeated Kansas University, 20 to 0. The game marked the dedication of the new stadium.

A blocked punt by Galbraith in the second quarter paved the way for the first touchdown. After failing to make the necessary yardage the Kansas team elected to punt. Galbraith rushed through the line, blocked the kick, grabbed the ball and raced from the 25 to the one-yard line before he was tackled. Captain Johnny Behm, swept around left end for the touchdown.

Captain Behm was also responsible for another of the Ames' touchdowns and Cory, who surprised every one by his plunging from the fullback position, supplied the third score. The result of an intercepted pass.

DRAKE TEAM BLANKS KANSAS AGGIES, 19-0

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 10.—The Drake University football team opened its new half-million dollar stadium here this afternoon by beating the Kansas Aggies, 19 to 0, in an erratic game.

The Drake team showed unexpected flashes of offensive strength in contrast to the showing they made against Washington University at St. Louis last week.

Spears, Drake halfback, scored the first two touchdowns by short line jabs after the ball had been carried deep into the Wild Cat territory.

The Kansas Aggies depended largely upon an aerial attack to make gains, but for the most part they were unsuccessful.

The third touchdown was the result of Sloane's alertness. Sloane blocked an attempted kick and fell on the ball for a touchdown, when the Wild Cats tried to punt from behind their goal.

Navy Wins Over Marquette, 19-0

Midshipmen Gain Eight First Downs Against One for Opponents.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 10.—Showing great alertness in following the ball and taking full advantage of all opportunities, Annapolis midshipmen triumphed over Marquette University on Farragut Field today, 19 to 0.

Navy registered eight first downs against one for Marquette. The visitors put up a plucky fight against the advantage of weight, but the midshipmen developed a sustained attack. The middies directed most of their plays to the right side of the line to avoid Dilweg, All-Western end.

Shapley, Navy, had the advantage of the punting duel with Demoling. Marquette fumbled at critical moments, and failed to penetrate the Navy defense. Twice the Middies invaded the opposing goal in the second period and once more in the final. Royce Flippin, sturdy left halfback, registered most of the scores. Shapley crossed the third time. One try for point after touchdown was successful.

Cubs, With Blake Pitching, Again Beat Sox, 8-2

"Sheriff" Allows Only Five Hits—Veteran Faber Is Pounded.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—With "Sheriff" Fred Blake hurling in brilliant form, the Cubs scored another triumph over the White Sox today, winning 8 to 2, and now own two victories over Eddie Collins' proteges, who have yet to register a triumph.

Blake was pitted against the veteran Red Faber when play started, but the pale-hosed spitball artist was retired after pitching five innings and Hollis Thurston completed the mound task.

Only five hits were compiled by the Sox, who found Blake at the top of his form.

The attendance was 13,693; receipts, $12,872.10; commissioner's share, $1,930.82; players' pool, $6,564.77; each club's share, $2,188.25.

Borotra Shows in Exhibitions Here

French Star Loses Set to Drewes but Wins in Two Other Matches.

The French tennis marvel, Jean Borotra, stopped here yesterday and played in three exhibition matches on the St. Louis Country Club courts. He is touring the country on business after helping the French Davis Cup team to defeat Australia and meet the United States players in the final round. In this final he carried William T. Tilden, national champion, to five sets. Borotra is the present United States indoor champion.

Ted Drewes, local star, surprised by defeating Borotra, 6—4, in the first of the two singles matches played. The court was not completely dry and Borotra seemed off form somewhat, as he had just traveled from California. In the second singles exhibition, Borotra defeated Wray Brown, 6—2.

Joe Werner, St. Louis Country Club champion, paired with Borotra in a doubles match. They defeated Drewes and Brown in three sets, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3.

Borotra is a very pleasing type of tennis player. He appears to enjoy his matches. The French star has a brilliant overhead game. He goes after every ball and makes a number of surprising returns. He wears a blue "skull" cap when playing.

Mrs. Baehr and Miss Hagemeyer Play for Title

Latter Defeats Ruth Bailey in Semifinal of District Women's Net Meet.

Mrs. Mellicent Endicott Baehr, the present champion, will oppose Lottie Hagemeyer in the final singles match in the St. Louis district women's tennis championship this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The match will be played at the Forest Hills Tennis Club, where the tournament has been in progress since Sept. 12.

Referee J. E. Mooney announced that the women's doubles and mixed doubles would not be played owing to the cold weather.

In one of the singles semifinals yesterday, Mrs. Baehr won from Miss Virginia Baer, O'Fallon Park champion, while in the other Miss Lottie Hagemeyer defeated Ruth Bailey, the 15-year-old girl who recently won the Municipal title.

Both semifinals were close. Mrs. Baehr was slow in starting and dropped the first set, 9—7, to Miss Baer, but won the next two easily. Steadiness enabled Miss Hagemeyer to win from Ruth Bailey in their match, which was hard fought from start to finish.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Women's Singles.

Semifinal round:

Mrs. Melicent Baehr defeated Virginia Baer, 7—9, 6—0, 6—2.

Lottie Hagemeyer defeated Ruth Bailey, 10—8, 7—5.

Yale Team Beats Georgia 35 to 7

Intercepted Forward Passes Give Eli Eleven Three Touchdowns.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 10.—Yale defeated the University of Georgia football machine here this afternoon 35 to 7. Yale scored four touchdowns in the first half of the game but the Blue attack weakened in the last half. Georgia, exhibiting a good forward pass formation, appeared to gain renewed life after the half time period and crossed the Yale line before the Blue defense tightened.

With a minute to go, Failing intercepted Morton's pass under the shadow of Georgia's goal for Yale's fifth touchdown.

The feature of the game was Bradley's 40-yard run for a touchdown through an open field after snaring Kline's 20-yard toss.

Both Yale and Georgia gained eight first downs. Three of Yale's scores came as a result of intercepted Red-and-Black forward passes. However, the Southerners completed three passes during the afternoon for long gains. The teams were evenly matched in kicking.

Baltimore Gains 11 Inning Victory Over Louisville

Tincup Fans 10 Batters—Score Is 10 to 9—Orioles Now Lead in Games.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 10.—Swirling flurries of snow and a piercing north wind brought discomfort to players and spectators alike as Baltimore today drew to within one game of the Class AA League championship by defeating the Louisville Colonels, 10 to 9, in 11 innings. Misplays were frequent and the heavy clouting of both teams brought five pitchers into the fray.

The Orioles have now won four of the five games necessary to decide the championship. The Kentuckians have taken three contests.

Clayton Sheedy, Baltimore's first baseman, was the hero of today's arctic struggle. With the Orioles three runs behind and seemingly helpless in the face of Southpaw Nick Cullop's fine relief hurling, Brainard and Boley managed to beat out hits in the eighth inning. Sheedy then belted a fast ball high up into the stands in right field for a home run that tied the score. Cullop fanned the next three batters but the damage was done.

Tincup, the Kentuckian's Indian moundsman, struck out 13 men in seven innings but was touched up for 11 hits and nine runs while doing so. Cullop, who relieved him, escaped until the eleventh inning, when a pass to Magee was converted into the wunning run on Porter's long single to center field.

The Colonels found Ogden for 10 hits and 6 runs in four innings, added three more markers during the four frames Jackson pitched, but were helpless before Tommy Thomas, who finished the game.

Shannon, Colonel shortstop, with four hits and two passes in six trips to the plate, and Brainard and Tyson with home runs, were the star batsmen of the day. Fritz Maisel was forced out of the game in the fourth when Guyon crashed into him at third base. The Baltimore captain was knocked unconscious and had to be carried from the field.

Before the game Maurice Archdeacon, speedy center fielder of the Birds, made a public apology to Umpire Connolly before both teams at the home plate for his actions in the eighth inning of Wednesday's game when he attempted to assault the arbiter after being called out on strikes.

Pel Bellinger, Louisville third baseman, who was suspended for insubordination during the trip here from Louisville, was reinstated before the game and played in his usual position.

Another game will be played here tomorrow.

California Loses; First Reverse for Bears in 5 Years

Golden Tornado, Helped by Gale, Beats Penn State

Georgia Tech Rallies in Last Two Periods to Win, 16 to 7.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A fighting and hitherto undefeated Penn State, caught between a howling gale out of the North and a tornado of Golden Jerseys from the South, was swept to defeat in its anual football game with Georgia Technical at the New York American League Baseball Park before about 8000 shivering spectators today, 16 to 7.

Placed on the defensive at the start of the second half by a windstorm which blew back a punt by Capt. Gray almost in his face, the men of Bezdek were quickly and decisively beaten down by a Tech attack which tactfully omitted recourse to aerial play. Desperately the Nittany Lions, however, hurled short and bullet-like forward passes, but no aerial tosses were safe, and an intercepted throw followed by a brilliant Tech march down the field finally decided the battle.

Favored by the breaks in the final half, the Southerners overcame a 7—0 advantage snatched by the Pennsylvania team in the last 30 seconds of the second period Ruben Pincura hurled a low, hard pass to Daingerfield from a fake cross buck formation and the latter shook off three tacklers to cross the goal line. Bergman scored the extra point on a placement kick.

Starting the third period, Capt. Gray attempted to punt, but the wind sailed the ball back to him and a Penn State player had to fall on it to prevent it rolling back over the defenders' goal line. Within easy scoring range, the Tech backfield working behind the sweeping Southern shift, then shot Wycoff over in six plays for the tying touchdown, Williams adding the extra point.

With the teams still locked at the opening of the fourth period, Georgia Tech opened its final drive and swept brilliantly to its second and deciding touchdown. Short, sharp dashes through the line by Barron, Wycoff, Williams and Murray carried the ball from the Southerners' own 20-yard line to within scoring range and Barron was finally pushed over. Williams' try for the extra point was blown wide of the standards, but later in the period he made victory sure by booting across an easy field goal.

"Chicago" Outsteps Leading Two-Year Olds in Queen City

20,000 Turf Fans See Lancaster, Blockhead and Others Beaten.

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 10.—Chicago won the Queen City Stakes here, this afternoon, before some 20,000 patrons of the turf when, with the aid of brilliant ride on the part of Jockey Denny Connelly. He defeated Lancaster, Blockhead, Mars and seven others, and in so doing established himself as one of the greatest juveniles of the year, when he ran that distance in 1:38 4-5.

As a result of this great turf performance, the West scored an intersectional victory over the East as the color bearers from the Eastern seaboard finished second and fourth; but they came from far behind and were far from disgraced. This time is just 4-5 of a second slower than the record for the race made by Kentucky Cardinal in this same event last year.

The race was worth $17,450 to the winner owner, while the second horse was given $1500 and third, $800, while the fourth saved his stake.

Thirteen Starters in Race.

The horses, 13 in number, which were started at the sixteenth pole, broke after a few minutes' delay at the post. Helen's Babe immediately went to the front, closely followed by Blockhead, Wildwood, Chicago, Talledega, with the others far back and outpaced for the first three-eighths. Helen's Babe was running well at the half, but Blockhead was in restraint and Chicago closed some ground on the back stretch when Connelly took a hold of him, contented to follow the fast pace.

On the far turn, Lancaster moved into a contending position and so did Mars. But Helen's Babe started to tire and Blockhead took the front just before reaching the head of the stretch.

Chicago made his move and saved ground on the turn, when Blockhead weakened and it was a drive down the stretch from there. Lancaster came fast, as did Mars; but the Grabner colt got the decision by a nose, while Lancaster was second, half a length in front of Blockhead, which finished five lengths in front of Mars. Rhinock, the Western favorite, Great Sport, Percussion and Breast Plate could never get up and never had a chance with the speed of the leaders. While the race was a true-run affair, there were many horses in the event capable of showing a better performance against time which did not get into the money.

The winner paid his backers $24.40 for a $2 straight ticket.

Harvard Eleven Displays Power

Crimson Team Rolls Up Bigger Score Against Middlebury Than Yale Did.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 10.—Harvard let loose its new scoring machine against Middlebury today and defeated the little Vermont college 68 to 0. Middlebury made one first down in the entire game, and that was late in the final period, when the Crimson had a full team of substitutes on the field. Admittedly striving to build up a score greater than Yale's 53 points of last Saturday against Middlebury, Harvard drove its offensive against the Vermonters with full force.

SOLOMON MEETS LIGHT-HEAVY KING TOMORROW

Berlenbach Can't Lose His Crown

Newest Heavyweight Hope Is Not Able to Make the Weight Limit for Final Outdoor Fight of Season.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The last open-air bouts of the season here are carded for Monday afternoon with Paul Berlenbach, light-heavyweight champion, and King Solomon of Panama in the star bout. The show was originally scheduled for last Monday night, but some 40 hours' of continuous rain had made a soggy mass of the Polo Grounds lawn and Jimmie Johnson, who is promoting the bouts for the benefit of the National Sports Alliance Fund, pushed them back a week, made a daylight affair of it because Oct. 12, Columbus day, is a holiday in this state by legislative enactment.

The star bout is of particular interest, because it is the first time Solomon has been matched against a champion. It is true Berlenbach is the light-heavyweight champion and is outweighed by his opponent a matter of from 12 to 15 pounds, but he is, nevertheless, a champion. King Solomon has been fighting around here since last spring. He came from Panama under the guidance of George Lawrence and Joe Woodman, and was heralded as the only Jew candidate for heavyweight honors now in the running, and the first since Joe Chonski.

He immediately built up a tremendous partisan following in the cloak and suit industry, which helped him in getting bouts and made him a good drawing card.

"Born in Palestine." But—

He was hurled into the public prints as one of the 14 children born in Palestine, with a grandfather still living, who was 104 years or so old. He is 29 years old. He was said to have come from Palestine to Panama, where he took up the boxing game in a serious way, and, according to his evangels, won 28 consecutive battles there, 19 by knockouts. His first appearance here was against Rojas Romero, the Chilean, in an eight-round semifinal on June 5, in the show in which Gene Tunney laid Tom Gibbons low. Rojas Romero gave the King all he wanted and then some in the first three rounds, but after that the Panamanian got better and outboxed Rojas by a safe enough margin to get the decision.

That bout got him a good start and he has been kept busy since, having an amazing lot of good matches for a new-comer. Just as he was beginning to be regarded as a possible candidate for heavyweight honors, someone discovered the Palestine part of the King's pedigree had sprung a leak. He admitted that he was not a full-blooded Jew, but was the son of a Jewess and a South American. That made his Jewish admirers will and they wanted him run out of New York as an imposter and wanted the Boxing Commission to black list him. But he had won his standing with the general public then and this opposition hasn't hurt him any.

Jack Sharkey Beat Him.

His one real defeat here was at the hands of Jack Sharkey. It was by a very narrow margin in a 10-round bout fought in a drizzling rain at Boston. His only knockout was over Jim Maloney in Boston and cost him a decision! The blow landed just after the bell rang and Solomon, who had been leading all the way up to the end of the third round, was disqualified for the foul.

He fought Rojas a second time and whipped him easily. Ad Stone of Philadelphia was also a relatively easy victim, and was Pailor Max Stead.

Berlenbach got a fine jolt when he was informed by the Boxing Commission that he must make 175 pounds in his bout with Solomon.

The light heavyweight champion of the world has been laboring under the impression that it was his privilege to go into the ring on that day at catch weights, inasmuch as King Solomon is a heavyweight and will come in at least 190 pounds heavy. George Lawrence, his manager, states that the King will be no heavier than 185 pounds. The King did think at one time that he could sneak in at 185 pounds and win Paul's title. He changed his mind after a lot of hard work in trying to get to that mark.

Champions Must Do Title Weight.

There is a rule established by the commission which compels a champion to come to his proper weight. It was possibly made in order to discourage these handicap matchers. The fathers maintain that a champion who is compelled to make his proper weight will tell himself that he might just as well meet men in his own class.

PACKS SIGNS PESEK FOR COLISEUM MAT SHOW, OCTOBER 22

A telegram received last night from Tom Packs, local wrestling promoter, stated that he has signed John Pesek, Nebraska heavyweight grappler, for the main event of his indoor mat inaugural at the New Coliseum arena on Thursday night, Oct. 22. The message was sent from Ravena, Neb., Pesek's home town. It stated that Pesek will be matched with Jimmy Londos, Dick Daviscourt, Frank Judson or Orsete Vadalfi.

Pesek was signed by Packs after the St. Louis promoter failed to induce Joe Stecher, the heavyweight champion, to accept terms for a bout with Londos, Pesek or Judson on the New Coliseum card.

Ball With Correct Grip Very Essential to Good Bowling

Jimmy Smith, World's Greatest Tenpin Star, in Third Article of Series Explains Various Grips and Importance of Using Right One.

NO. 3—HOW TO BOWL.

By Jimmy Smith.

World's Greatest Bowler.

MY AMBITION to become a great bowler dates from the time when I first became interested in the game, more than 30 years ago. I started as a pin setter, and take it from me, what a pin boy doesn't know about bowling can be written on your thumb nail. If time and space permitted, I would tell you of my early experience in the pit and the humorous side of the game as seen by the pin boys.

As a pin boy, I gained a view of the game at that end of the alley from which most of you are barred. There you see the real practical results of the 57 varieties—and 47 more which I can easily add without fear of contradiction—in the delivery of the ball at the foul line; the effectiveness of both the hook and straight ball; what happens when the ball crashes into a full frame; the center ball and the corner ball; the important question of speed versus accuracy, and in fact every angle of the game can be studied to great advantage.

When I graduated from the pit to the foul line to become a bowler I still lacked knowledge of the game and even now, after 30 years, whenever I see a match game or visit a bowling alley I study the movements of bowlers who seem to have good points and try them out—though not always with success. Much can be learned from observation and many boxers can credit their success to the blows and defense learned from watching the other fellow at the ringside.

Desire to Get Perfection.

With me it is always the desire to obtain perfection, and such will be my aim until, who knows, I may be able to bowl perfect scores of 300 in every game. I am bringing out these points because I wish to impress upon my readers the absolute necessity of following instructions very carefully.

Of course, one of the important items to good bowling is the selection of a ball which fits your grip, and after you have become somewhat familiar with the game I advise the purchase of a ball, as much better results can be obtained by using the same ball all the time. Until you have become proficient select a ball from the alley rack which feels easy in your hand and which you are able to grip firmly when held at arm's length. I use two black mineralite balls of 15¾ pounds weight every season.

The span of my finger holes is exactly 33-8 inches. The "grip" is important. Don't use a wide grip if you have a small hand and short fingers, nor a narrow grip if your hands are long.

Uses Half-Western Grip.

Many of you may not know that the angle in which the finger and thumb holes are bored varies greatly and is frequently the subject of discussion among expert bowlers; therefore if I tell you I use a half-Western grip you probably will not get me. There are three regular methods of boring the finger and thumb holes: Natural, half-Western and full-Western.

In the natural the holes are bored at an angle which would cause them to meet at the exact center of the ball; the half-Western would make them meet ¼-inch above the center, and in the full-Western they would meet ¾-inch above the center. The more pitch the narrower the grip or you cannot get rid of the ball.

Be sure the finger and thumb holes fit, and if the edges are sharp use a little fine sandpaper to round them off so they will not cut the skin. The holes should also be smooth inside, and above all the ball should be so perfectly fitted to the hand that it will leave the fingers easily when the fingers are extended straight out at arm's length, as they should be in delivering the ball, and yet tight enough so you will not drop it.

Never use tape in the holes and avoid all use of resin, chalk and pumice on the hands. This is a subject so important that I shall devote a special article to "Sore Thumbs" later on.

Avoid rubber-soled shoes for bowling. Learn to bowl with elk skin soles. Rubber soles will not injure your feet but are very apt to cause lameness if used constantly. I always use elkskin, and even after a 24-hour or duration contest have left the alleys in perfect condition so far as my feet and the calves of my legs were concerned.

I traveled on tour two seasons with John "Count" Gengler and he at first used rubber soles, often leaving the alleys so lame it was noticeable in his walk and he complained a great deal of "charley-horse" the next day. Feet and legs in good condition are very essential to good scores and to the proper enjoyment of this popular pastime.

In my next article I shall put my readers on the alleys and begin instructions in bowling, first giving attention to position, footwork and delivery of the ball.

HAMILTON OWNER GIVES UP HIS CLUB AFTER WINNING FLAG

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAMILTON, Ontario.—Hamilton, Ontario, has probably seen its last professional baseball for some time. The Hamilton team won the Michigan-Ontario League pennant, but Billy Carroll, president and owner of the club, will be a heavy loser financially.

Carroll provided his city with the best baseball team it had in years. Hamiltonians did not support a winning team and their failure to do so has actuated President Carroll in the announcement that he is through for all time.

Principia Wins Its 1st Game, Beating Roosevelt, 7 to 0

South Side Academy Holds Academy Three Times Inside 15-Yard Line.

By Davison Obear.

The Principia Academy football team, playing its first game of the season, defeated the Roosevelt High eleven, 7 to 0, on the Principia field yesterday afternoon. Edgar Kaw, all-America star at Cornell University in 1922 and 1923, is coaching Principia this year.

Roosevelt, under Coach Carlson, surprised by putting up a stubborn defense. On three different occasions Roosevelt kept the Academy from scoring inside the 15-yard line.

The only touchdown came in the opening quarter. Robert Richardson, Principia halfback, fell on the ball after it hit a Roosevelt player who was receiving a punt. This was on Roosevelt's 26-yard line. The touchdown came when Richardson received a pass from Stitt and ran 15 yards to the South-siders' goal. Stitt's drop-kick added a point to the score.

87-YARD RUN HELPS DEFEAT DRURY ELEVEN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 10.—An 87-yard run from an off tackle play by Merriott, halfback, featured Oklahoma Military Academy's 21 to 0 victory over the Drury College Panthers here this afternoon before a crowd of 2000. Drury was completely outplayed and outfought by the Cadets from Claremore. A. Sanders, Cadet fullback, lugged the ball over in the first five minutes of play for the first score of the game. Two touchdowns came in the final period.

Drury did not threaten the Oklahoma goal line at any time during the game. Coach Fred Walker sent many substitutes to the game, but nothing could be done to stop the plunging Cadets.

It was Drury's first defeat since being drubbed by the Haskell Indians and today's game was the first victory for the Cadets. Line smashes, end runs and several well executed forward passes featured the Cadets' offense. Drury made five first downs, as compared with 15 for their opponents. Both teams were penalized many times.

Missouri U. Surprises by Defeating Nebraska, 9-6

with Capt. Whiteman standing out in the Tiger backfield work. Six line plays netted two first downs and then a pass from Whiteman to Jackson put the ball only 10 yards from the Cornhusker goal. Here, however, came what seemed a tactical error. The Tigers essayed a pass on the first down. The ball was grounded behind the goal line and it went over to Nebraska for a touch back. This was the last scoring opportunity of the half.

Tigers Start a March.

Another break, this time favoring the home team, proves the genesis of the second game. Shortly after the opening of the second half the Lincoln eleven was scrimmaging from its 30-yard mark. Center Hutchinson passed wildly and the oval rambled crazily down the field eluding the wildly grabbing hands of a half dozen players. Coglizer, a Tiger end, was in position to fall on the ball; but attempted to grab it on the run. His over zealousness was costly, as the ball bounced away and a Nebraskan recovered on his seven-yard mark.

Nebraska booted from behind its goal posts to midfield. Then started a series of Bengal bucks that swept down the field like a great black wave. Clark made five, Whiteman seven, Clark added eight On, and on they went, not brilliantly, but steadily and grimly. Big red-jerseyed youths were thrown into the breach. There were frenzied Nebraska conferences as the distance between the battle line and the Husker posts grew less, but these efforts were of no avail.

Enter Mr. Bertram Clark.

Then came what looked like a wide end run by Struber, but a certain Mister Clark—Bertram Clark, 150-pound sophomore—emerged from the mass as if by magic. Strubmer flipped the ball and Clark reached for it, caught it, held on. Clark was over the line and the score was tied. Then Captain Whiteman drop-kicked perfectly and Missouri was ahead, 7 to 6.

However, in years past Missouri has been ahead of Nebraska time and again, but each time the team from the North has either shown more reserve power in the pinch or has been favored by the fickle Lady of Fortune. Even now, Missouri followers could not believe that victory over Nebraska would be theirs.

Early in the fourth period it did seem as if Coach Bearg's eleven would grab this victory out of the Tiger's hopeful claws. A 40-yard march down the field put the lad less than a yard from the hallowed ground, but there Halfback Locke fumbled just as he was crossing the line. It was on the fourth down and the ball went to the Tigers.

Cornhuskers Stopped.

Two minutes later the big red team threatened again. A Tiger punt had gone askew on the 15-yard line and the Cornhuskers took charge at that point. They were unable to pierce the local line and resorted to a drop kick, which was a rather hopeless effort, the ball ricocheting along the ground until a Tiger hopped on it 10 yards from his goal.

The final score came later in this period, when Nebraska, in playing out from its 5-yard mark, did the unorthodox act of trying a forward pass from behind its own goal. The alert Bacchus was in with a rush, blocked the ball and Richerson fell on it for a safety.

Coach Bearg sent a forward passing expert on the field late in the game in an effort to change the tide of siege of plain and fancy passing, but the Tigers were as alert as they were vicious. Hence the Cornhuskers did not even threaten again.

The capital of Boone County was in gala attire tonight. Pop-eyed undergrads and wild-eyed grads paraded the streets. One could see even some professors in the typical collegiate festive garb—nightshirts—included in the lock-stepping line. All of this because the long, lean years are over.

Missouri had won its first victory over Nebraska since 1919.

Clark, Who Scored Missouri's Touchdown, Was Principia Star

BERTRAM CLARK, whose touchdown was the main factor in the defeat of the Nebraska University football team by the Missouri Tigers at Columbia, yesterday, is a former star of Principia Academy here. Missouri's victory was its first over the Cornhuskers since 1899.

At Principia Clark played on the football team under Coach Al Marquard. He played quarterback in 1922 and 1923 and in the latter year was the scoring ace of the academy team which was undefeated. He rolled up a total of 103 points during that season.

After graduation from Principia Clark entered Missouri and was freshman quarterback last season. He is of the short stocky type of player. His speed and open field tactics mark him as one of the best football players in the Central West.

TIGER AERIAL ATTACK NETS VICTORY OVER W. AND L., 15 TO 6

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 10.—Resorting to an aerial attack, Princeton defeated Washington and Lee at Palmer Stadium today, 15 to 6. High wind caused numerous fumbles. The Southerners made 11 first downs against the Tigers' 15. Princeton's line play was ragged, however, and ineffective, during the first and last periods.

Rauber, Wilson and Palmer of Washington and Lee broke through for long gains. The backfield work of Jake Slagle and Tommy Dignam won the game for Princeton.

The Tigers scored in the opening period when Rauber, forced to punt from behind his own goal line, made a short kick which was thrust back by the wind behind his own line. He fell on it for a safety. In the second period an aerial attack, Wilson to Palmer, advanced the ball to Princeton's 10-yard line and Rauber went over for the touchdown. Thomas missed the goal. Princeton scored in the first, second and fourth quarters.

Soccer League Teams to Start Season Today

Few Changes in Lineups With Vespers and Raticans Likely to Start Well.

With comparatively few new faces in the lineups, and only two new players of foreign birth added to the rosters, the St. Louis Soccer League teams will appear in a double-header this afternoon, opening the 1925-26 season. In past years new material, some of it of the imported variety, has added variety to the opening games, but this season the four managers are relying on home-grown talent and the clubs will present much the same appearance of last season.

Strike Threat Disappears.

There was a threat of a strike among the players of the league when the league officials adopted a new contract and asked the men to sign it, but all causes for disagreement appear to have been removed and almost all of the stars of last year are signed up. The Ben Miller club, managed by Billy Foley, has had greatest difficulty in getting the stars to sign the new document, but Foley declares he is ready to place a strong team on the field this afternoon.

Three new referees have been appointed by the league, all of them former professional players. John Cradock, former Municipal League arbiter, will handle this afternoon's games and next Sunday Robert ("Robby") Murphy, former star halfback, will toot the whistle. Charles Carey is the third referee and he will take his turn on the third Sunday.

Entered in Cup Series.

St. Louis Soccer League teams are entered in the United States Football Association cup competition, the national championship series of American soccer. No cup games will be played here by St. Louis teams until January, however, because of the exemption of strong professional teams from the earlier rounds of competition. Almost all of the major professional teams of the United States remained out of the cup series last season because of dissatisfaction over financial "cuts" and because teams were forced to play admittedly weak teams in early rounds. Both objections have been removed through concessions made by the U. S. F. A.

The Ben Millers are champions of the local league, but the Vespers came fast toward the close of last season after a bad start and they are now regarded as the strongest threat in the league, with Ratican's team next. The Wellstons and Ben Millers may have difficulty at the start.

The Raticans meet the Wellstons in the first game, starting at 2:15 o'clock, and the Ben Millers oppose the Vespers in the second game.

Miss Collett Wins.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I., women's national golf champion, added another subordinate title to her collection here today when she defeated Helen Payson of Portland, Me., 5 and 3, in the 18-hole final of the Indian Hill Country Club invitational play.

THE LOCARNO SECURITY CONFERENCE AS VIEWED BY FRENCH AND GERMAN EYES

"All We Have Had Are Pictures of Idyllic Meetings Under Leafy Arbors and Specimens of Legalistic Prose," Says Tardieu

Harden Says if Common Sense Wins at Lake Maggiore There Is Safe Majority in Reichstag for the Security Pact.

THE German nationalists would like to see the Locarno conference fail, says Maximilian Harden in his dispatch from Berlin, because reconciliation with France would destroy their newly won power and nullify their carefully laid plans for a war of revenge. Nevertheless, Harden believes that the Reichstag will ratify the pact if an agreement is reached at Locarno.

Andre Tardieu, eminent French statesman and writer, is still pessimistic of a satisfactory outcome to the negotiations. In his dispatch from Paris, he says that all the Locarno conference has produced, thus far, are pictures of idyllic meetings under leafy arbors and specimens of legalistic prose.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—The Locarno conference thus far has produced two kinds of news; first, somewhat rhapsodical dispatches which remind one of picture books for good little children.

We behold fireworks shooting heavenward from the heights above Lago Maggiore, tracing in flamboyant letters against the sky the word "peace." Thus are Luther and Briand sitting together at a table under an arbor of a rustic inn, the former drinking beer and the latter mineral water like a genuine prohibitionist.

The dispatches tell about the difficulty in drafting resolutions which have been referred to a jurists' committee with the hope that these learned gentlemen will involve formulas satisfactory to everybody.

The scheme is to place everything possible under the auspices of the League of Nations, the covenant of which would thus play a more important part than the pacts over whose cradle so many unofficial doctors today are anxiously waiting.

All Nations Suffer.

From the first of these viewpoints—the sentimental one—it is natural that the Locarno conference should, on its outward signs, bring about a certain easing of the strain owing to the world's weariness. Around the conference table not a single nation is represented whose situation today is real satisfying.

Germany in less than six years has undergone revolution, bankruptcy and other ills.

England has an unemployment and a mining crisis and many other troubles.

France has experienced disappointment, first at the hands of the bloc national and then of the Cartel des Gauches, as well as from her former allies.

This enumeration of sufferings might be prolonged but the final result is that each nation being discontented, seeks to save appearances at least by gaining some advantage. Hence there is a less divided spirit at Locarno than at previous conferences. But there is also less real striving and here is where the sentimental viewpoint gives way to the question of procedure.

It is evident that the jurist-consultants have prepared the way for the politicians and have put whatever agreement is reached into final form. But it is an unfortunate fact that abstract complexity of juridical texts is incapable of coping with the simplicity of political realities.

Expects Equivocations.

During the peace conference every time purists were allowed simply to draft texts they created equivocation and conflict. It is the writer's firm impression that the same equivocations now are about to be produced at Locarno but on a much larger scale.

In Locarno dispatches, when there is a discussion about arbitration treaties and fear that they will infringe on the honor and sovereignty of signatory powers, we read that "jurists have found a formula." Similarly when there is disagreement about article 16 of the covenant, which gives French

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—In order to find two compromise formulas, representatives of seven countries have been working together in Locarno almost as long as it took the Creator to make the world.

The role of guarantor demanded by France is to be transferred, at least in part, to the League of Nations, and it is to be made easier for the German republic to subscribe to article 16, which grants right to march through Germany in case of war in the East, and would even eventually compel Germany to boycott or even wage war against Russia, with which she has economic and financial treaties.

Only these two formulas have to be found at Lake Maggiore. Business men, who should soberly give attention only to profits and losses, would soon have reached an agreement, but political state representatives are handicapped by the necessity of regarding public opinion, and the state partisan and personal interests, which are not always compatible with each other.

The fact that ceremonious public sessions and rhetoric were dispensed with has furthered the work, which, in addition, had been even better prepared than had been the case for any other conference. That this speeding up was attainable without dispensing with wagon brakes, is explained by the fact that men from the coal and iron countries are virtually in agreement. But behind conclusion of the pact there would begin a new condition which appeals to all doubting Thomases as almost too beautiful: Reconciliation of France with Germany and Franco-German collaboration.

Change in Atmosphere.

This has never been recorded in European history. Between 1871 and 1914 France never would have permitted even a single such intimate conversation as that held between Briand and Luther. This, and, in still greater measure, the spirit of the speeches made by President Coolidge at Omaha and Premier Painleve at Nimes, prove that there has been a change in the world's atmosphere, that the fearful surgical operation of war has healed humanity and has strengthened its moral will.

If France no longer fears Germany she will not regard Czecho-Slovakia and Poland further as indispensable watchers in the East whose demands must satisfy at all cost. Perhaps she will even some day realize that Poland's western boundaries were extended further than is compatible with the interests of European economy, of which the newly elected Polish Republic heretofore has been merely a parasite.

Italy has never ceased to demand as her right dominion over Tunis which belonged in her sphere of influence until the French invaded it in 1881.

Unpleasant for Russia.

Mussolini had hoped confidently to be able to realize this old wish in some troublous moment for France. This hope, which has been nourished by the revolts in the Riff and in Syria, must vanish if the pact unites France and Germany. Guardianship by England is inseparable for Italy, which must be

How to Save an Apparently Hopeless Case in Court Told by the Boss Cross-Examiner of Them All

MAX D. STEUER GIVES TWO EXAMPLES OF HIS WORK

The Gentle Art of Destroying the Witness Without Touching the Story, and the Gentler Method of Exploding the Story and Leaving the Witness Unscathed.

THERE was introduced at the recent meeting of the Missouri Bar Association in St. Louis a slight little man—urbane and soft-spoken and almost shy, as "the greatest trial lawyer in New York" and "one of the most devastating cross-examiners in the country."

He was Max D. Steuer, a name sprinkled over some of the most spectacular court cases in recent years, including the Stokes divorce case.

Steuer gave no academic discussion of the art or artifice of cross-examination, but he did give two examples of his skill by which apparently certain conviction was turned to acquittal by a single stroke. Here is what he told, one incident from the famous race-track bribery cases in New York, the other from a trial resulting from a factory fire in which 147 girls lost their lives:

"When Secretary Hughes was Governor of the State of New York he conceived a very strong dislike for horse racing, and he caused to be introduced a bill abolishing horse racing and prohibiting it within the confines of the State. That bill divided the members of both Senate and House. The racing interests naturally put forth every effort to defeat the bill; Gov. Hughes and his friends naturally made every possible effort to have the bill carried. On the day that the voting took place it was found that the Senate was exactly evenly divided; and just as the voting was about to cease there was brought into the Senate chamber on a stretcher a member of the Senate, Otto G. Folker, and Folker cast the vote that carried the bill, and Gov. Hughes said that Folker was the best member that the New York Legislature had had in many a day.

Rumors of Graft.

"At the next election Folker was elected a member of the United States Congress and, while he was a member of Congress, the conduct of the Legislature had still been made the subject matter of a great deal of comment and rumor persisted and recital in the newspapers came, issue after issue, to the effect that in the effort to defeat Gov. Hughes' bill a great deal of money had been used, and that some of it had reached the members of the Senate.

"Numerous articles became so persistent that finally the Senate, for its own protection, appointed a committee to investigate, and while that committee was in session a number of men who had been seen about Albany during the time that this legislation was pending disappeared, and among those who disappeared was Senator Gardiner. Finally, Senator Gardiner was indicted, charged with bribery, and Folker, the Senator who cast the vote that carried the bill, appeared before the investigating committee and told, as he later told before a petit jury, that while he was a member of the Senate and on his way from Albany to New York Gardiner had called him into his compartment and there had offered Folker $3000 for his vote against this racing bill. Gardiner was brought to trial on this charge of attempted bribery, and Folker was on the stand.

"Bear in mind that I am trying now to demonstrate and leave the thought with you that the purpose of a cross-examiner is to destroy the witness, even though he cannot affect the witness' story.

Story of Bribery.

"You will remember that Folker and Gardiner were in the compartment alone, so that Folker could not be contradicted by anybody but Gardiner; and Folker had been the commended legislator by the Governor of the State, and was then a member of Congress. He had told this story of bribery on his direct examination, and then was turned over for cross. About a half hour was consumed in bringing to light Folker's past, which was very strongly in his favor.

"He told of having been brought from Germany to this country as a young boy; that his parents were very poor and that he worked in a bakeshop; that he attended night school, learned English and elementary arithmetic and the subjects akin thereto, and that subsequently, having worked and earned a little money, he went to advanced preparatory schools and finally was admitted to the bar. Folker at this time, in addition to being a Congressman, was a practicing lawyer in the city of New York. All of this alleged cross-examination being thus in Folker's favor and he having the opportunity glibly to enlarge on it in a way that was most favorable, did not bring great hope to Senator Gardiner.

"Presently Folker was asked whether, in order to become a member of the bar, he had passed a regents' examination. A regents' examination is a required preliminary to the bar examination, and Folker said, of course, he had passed a regents' examination. Then he was asked where he took that regent's examination, and Folker could not remember. He could not remember any of the examiners' names. He could not remember when it was. He could not remember any person in the room at the time when he took the examination. And finally Folker was asked whether he had ever studied French. He said 'no.' The only foreign language with which Folker had the slightest familiarity was German; and he remembered distinctly that he had been examined in German by the regents. He neither could translate French into English nor English into French; he could not speak a word of French; he could not write a word of French. Folker was then asked whether he was acquainted with logarithms, and he admitted he had never heard of them. And Folker said that there was no other Otto G. Folker, to his knowledge, within the State of New York.

"And then it developed that when Otto G. Folker took his regents' examination he passed with 99 in French and 95 in logarithms; and he did not have any examination in German. And it later also developed that from the College of the City of New York there was a young man who was in the senior class who headed his class for five years and the only two days on which this young man was absent from college were the two days on which Otto G. Folker took his regents' examination. And it further developed that, in the receipt for the regents' certificate, the signature, Otto G. Folker, happened to be in the handwriting of this young man who was absent from his class on the two days Folker was supposed to have passed his regents' examination.

Never Questioned.

"Since Folker left the witness stand—I remind you that he was a member of the Congress of the United States—from that day to this, none has ever heard of Otto G. Folker being alive. In the whole of that cross-examination Folker was never asked a single question about the conversation between himself and Gardiner on the train from Albany to New York; but the jury acquitted Gardiner in less than 20 minutes.

"You will bear in mind that I was speaking before of destroying the witness without touching the story; what should one mean in speaking of destroying the story without touching the witness?

"We had a case of some time since in New York where 147 girls were burned to death in one loft. At the time we had a law on the statute books called the Factory Act, which made it a misdemeanor for a factory door to be locked during working hours.

"In this particular loft there were two entrances about a block apart. In one corner was what was called the Greene street door; in the other corner was what was called the Washington street door.

"One Saturday flames burst out in this loft and before that fire was extinguished, as I said to you before, 147 girls perished.

"We had and have a statute in New York which provides that if, in the perpetration of a misdemeanor, death results, it makes the crime a felony, and it becomes manslaughter. The proprietors of this factory were indicted on the charge of manslaughter some 25 or 30 times, the reason for the number of indictments being that in each indictment a different name of a deceased girl was put.

Enter Rose, the Witness.

"The trial of these two men came on. The District Attorney had examined 109 witnesses, and then, seeking a solemn moment and having brought about a complete hush—and up to that moment the name of the girl that was incorporated in the indictment had never passed the lips of a single witness; and we were in hope, high hope, that the District Attorney would have no evidence that this particular girl was seen to have come to her end in that fire—but I repeat, he had brought about a dramatic hush. He announced slowly to the Court that he had but one more witness. And then he turned to the other end of the room and said, 'Bring in Rose Schwartz.'

"Doors swung open at a distance from the jury box; each juror was craning to see. And then there came through the doors a simply-dressed, beautiful little girl, who was led to the witness stand and sworn, and after she had testified that she had worked for the defendants and worked on the day of the fire and had pointed out on a chart of chairs the particular chair that she had occupied, the District Attorney said to her, 'Now, Rose, in your own way—in your own way—and in your own words tell the jury what you did and what you said and everything you saw from the moment that you first saw flames;' and then Rose told in substance as follows:

Rose's Detailed Story.

"Now, the name of the girl mentioned in the indictment was Sadie Goldman. Rose said that she, Rose, was seated at her chair and heard the buzzer in the factory which indicated the quitting hour; that she looked up and saw coming from the direction of the Greene Street door a flame, whereupon she looked over toward the Washington street door and, as she looked toward the Washington street door, she saw a crowd standing there, so she started for the Greene street door hoping to skirt the flames; but as she started for the Greene street door the flames spread the width of the loft, so she turned back and looked once toward the Washington street door and, as she looked, she saw that there was a girl who had her hands on the door knob and that she was turning it, first to the right, and then to the left, and then pulling, and then pushing, and she screamed, 'My God! The door is locked!' With that Rose said that she ran to the window, as many others had done, but when she got to the sill—and this was on the eighth floor—and she looked down and saw the great distance, she became frightened and came off the sill again and stood on the floor, and as she stood on the floor she glanced once more toward Greene street and, seeing that it was one sheet of flame, started again toward Washington street; and then she saw that girls were running from the Washington street door. There was one girl, Sadie Goldman, with both hands on the door knob, turning first to the right, and then to the left, pushing the door, and pulling the door, but the door would not give, and the flames kept approaching. She ran to another window, looked out again, became horrified at the distance, came back to the floor and looked toward the Washington street door; and there she saw Sadie Goldman again, with both hands on the door knob, turning first to the right, then to the left, pulling the door and pushing the door, but the door would not give. And then the flames enveloped Sadie Goldman, and she heard a scream, and she saw Sadie Goldman drop. She covered her face, but only for a moment, she did not know how long; when she looked up again and, to her amazement, she saw Sadie Goldman, in flames, struggling once more to the door knob, getting her hands actually on it, and then falling down for the last time encompassed by the flames, and that she herself became unconscious and saw no more.

"I can not describe to you, gentlemen of the Missouri Bar, the pathos of that little girl. I can not reproduce the tears that were running down her cheeks, nor can I tell you how these 12 men were riveted on this girl's story and how they wept while she told it. And, after a long, dramatic pause, and looking in silence at her, the District Attorney turned and said, 'You may (pausing slightly) cross-examine.'

A Lawyer's Irony.

"Did you ever hear a district attorney say, 'You may (pausing slightly) cross-examine?' When the District Attorney feels that the defendant is already on the train, and that the whistles are tooting and that the next stop is Sing Sing, he becomes very gracious, and he says 'You may (pausing slightly) cross-examine.'

Who can tell under those circumstances

Steuer's Notable Cases Have Brought Him Wealth and Fame

MAX D. STEUER, son of poor East Side New York parents, worked his way through law school. Last year, at the age of 43, he paid an income tax of $189,000. He was attorney for the heirs, including Amos and Gifford Pinchot, who broke the Amos Eno will. He successfully acquitted Raymond Hitchcock and Tex Rickard in cases brought by young women. He gained a victory for Lillian Gish in the recent contract suit brought by her manager.

It is said that Steuer can try a four-weeks' case without notes, yet his skill depends upon seizing upon a detail at testimony and tearing the whole case down from that detail. Isaac F. Marcosson, in a sketch of his career, called him "the man with the camera mind," because of his remarkable memory.

Man and Monkeys Are Both In State of Evolution, but Not Relatives, Says Zoologist

Speech Center in Brain of Human Is Entirely Lacking in Anthropoid Ape, He Declares.

The author of the following article is a distinguished German zoologist and is the Director of the Berlin Zoological Garden. This translation of his article was made for The Living Age.

By Prof. Ludwig Heck.

IF YOU ask a man of average education what an anthropoid or manlike ape is, he will probably, if he is a ready answerer, mention the orang-outang, the chimpanzee, and the gorilla. If you press him with further questions, you generally discover that he has but the vaguest notions of the appearance, the habitat, and the characteristics of these animals. Only a man who makes a hobby of the subject will be likely to tell you anything definite about the three classes of anthropoid apes—the red orang-outang of the East Indies, whose home is the large islands of Sumatra and Borneo, and two black African types, the chimpanzee and the gorilla. Many people have seen the red orang-outangs and the black chimpanzees in zoological gardens. Gorillas are rarely found in captivity, though they arouse more popular interest than either of the others, because their powerful muscular development has given them an exaggerated reputation for ferocity and strength.

Resemblance Only.

But the adjective "anthropoid," or "manlike," applied to apes is significant. It indicates that animals exist bearing sufficient resemblance to human beings to have this qualification applied to them. Just now, moreover, they are in the limelight on account of the renewed discussion of Darwin's theories. People ask, What does all this talk amount to? What is an anthropoid, or manlike, ape really like, anyway? And what is his relationship, if any, to man, either physical or mental?

First of all, let us make plain one general fact recognized by all natural scientists. Every plant and every animal now living on the globe can be descended only from ancestors and ancestral types whose petrified remains are found in older strata of the earth's crust than the one that is being formed today. In this genealogical sense the anthropoid apes, who are our contemporaries, are no older than ourselves. Consequently, we cannot be descended from them. The visitor at a zoological garden who wisely points out an orang-outang or chimpanzee as an "ancestor," a "great-grandfather," or the like, instead of displaying enlightenment and scientific broadmindedness, merely advertises his ignorance.

Only Skull Fragments.

How then are we to explain the descent of physical man? Let me emphasize, physical man is a mammal. That is a primary and universally recognized scientific fact that no one disputes. Intellectual man, man as primarily distinguished from other members of the animal kingdom by the contents of his brainpan, presents a different problem. Physical man may easily have descended from a common forefather with the anthropoid apes, branching off from larger family tree at some remote period. This is a plausible hypothesis, although it has not been irrefutably demonstrated. So far as the bones of so-called missing links discovered up to the present in older geological strata are concerned, their evidence is too scanty to be conclusive. We have only a part of the top of the skull and of a thigh-bone of the so-called Java ape-man. All the other bones supposed to throw light upon this subject, of which a great number have been dug up in different parts of the world, are either human bones, no matter how rudimentary and primitive the creature from which they came, or ape bones—that is, bones of animals in the popular sense.

Now what is the distinction between the two? I shall try to make this plain by comparing the skeleton of a man with the skeleton of the animal that most resembles man—the anthropoid ape.

Resemblances in Young.

Beginning with the head, a man's skull presents a relatively high forehead and large brainpan, and a relatively small and undeveloped face and jaw. An animal's skull, on the other hand, invariably has a small brainpan and large facial bones. This is true even of the anthropoid apes, at least when they are fully grown. But the case is different in young animals, and that fact has great scientific significance. How? No one would for a moment confuse the skull of a grown man with the skull of a grown anthropoid ape, for he would instantly notice the great difference in the size of their respective brainpans and jaws. But the skull of a child and of a young anthropoid ape are so similar that a person not a specialist in such matters might well confuse the two. Immediately after birth the human child and the young ape begin to develop in opposite directions. The brainpan of the child's skull grows rapidly at the expense of the facial bones, while in case of the anthropoid ape precisely the reverse occurs.

This is a determining feature in the relations of men and manlike apes. I can illustrate it by an example doubtless familiar to many of my readers. No one has any difficulty in distinguishing an ordinary barnyard hen from a pheasant or a partridge, such as we see hanging up in the game market. But if you were to mix up a brood of newly hatched chickens and newly hatched pheasants or partridges, when they are nothing but little bundles of down, it would take an expert to separate them. Why? Both belong to the same order of birds. They are all fowls, tame or wild. When they are mature they are very different; when they are just hatched they are very similar. Now that is one of the signs of relationship, but it does not indicate that one is descended from the other. If we are to speak of the anthropoids as our relatives, we must not call them ancestors, but cousins.

Now let us compare the limb measurements of men and anthropoid apes. We shall find the arms, legs, hands and feet of both presenting quite as marked similarities, and at the same time as marked differences, as their skulls.

The Ape's Toes.

First of all, let us get rid of the popular error that apes have four hands simply because they can grasp things with their feet. An ape's foot is actually just as honest and true a foot as that of a human being. It has a heel, and that is what makes the difference between a hand and a foot. In its normal position the hand continues the arm in a straight line, but the foot, by virtue of having a heel, always makes an angle to the leg. But an ape can oppose his great toe—or more accurately his thumb-toe, for it is not the largest or the longest—to the other toes and so seize hold of things with his foot. For instance, he can clasp the trunk of a tree the same way that we do with our hands. This is the reason for the popular misconception that an ape has four hands. We must bear in mind that all apes are climbing animals;

Merits of the Bachelor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CONSTANT reading of your editorial page had convinced me that your entire staff were genial, scholarly, bachelors. But now, alas, all my illusions are shattered. That editorial "The Bachelor," proves beyond all possibility of a doubt that at least one member of your staff is an envious married man, entirely unacquainted with the high literary, artistic and philosophic attainments of the footloose and fancyfree, and abysmally ignorant of the rights, duties and privileges of the cautious.

According to the editorial, the sole purpose of bachelors in this present sorry scheme of things entire is to give spinsters hope. Indeed! What of Michaelangelo? What of Schopenhauer? And Herbert Spencer? Does the world today need more poets, philosophers and artists, or is the crying need for men who can fix the furnace? Is not Henry Louis Mencken worth six Eddie Guests, and George Ade better than two and three-quarters Harold Bell Wrights?

Furthermore, if there were no bachelors, who would read and recommend Rabelais and Omar? Can you conceive of any married man's reading the — chapter of the first book aloud to his wife? Is not the furtherance of good literature as noble a pursuit as the repairing of the screen door?

If all men were married, who would admire babies? Just as all bachelor girls know how children should be brought up, so one of our most onerous duties is to admire babies. Married men, knowing their own to be the most wonderful children in the world, have nothing but contempt for all other children. We, the unbound, enthuse over all of them with utter impartiality and the fine frenzy of a poet.

Finally, no married man will ever succeed in convincing me that a certain Democratic bachelor would not have made an excellent Mayor of a certain city. JOS. D. HEADE.

The Jesse James Serial.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MY absence from the city prevented me from writing you ere this and expressing to you my appreciation for publishing that splendid story, "The Rise and Fall of Jesse James," written by Mr. Robertus Love.

It was a fine contribution to the history of Missouri during the latter part of the last century, and I read it with the greatest interest from the first to the last installment.

Mr. Love has a style of his own, and the whole narrative made most delightful reading. Let us have more of his writings. JOHN S. MEYER.

Armistice Day.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN President Coolidge frowned on the suggestion that Armistice day be observed also as Defense day he expressed the opinion that Armistice day is primarily a day on which to emphasize the blessings of peace. The American Legion, which through its official organ and its officers constantly pledges its support to all peace movements consistent with the national security, approved the President's stand.

If each of the legion's 11,000 posts will take the lead in their respective communities on November 11, Armistice day this year and for years to come can be given the character and the importance it deserves. The legion posts can render no greater service, and they will find civic, religious and other organizations in their communities glad to join in celebrating the anniversary of the day that brought to the world the most welcome news it ever received.

The never-to-be-forgotten demonstrations of November 11, 1918, were inspired by the prospect of peace after the most devastating war the nations of the earth had ever waged. Led by the legionnaire veterans of that war, let every community in the country celebrate on November 11 this year the existence of the peace we now enjoy. CHARLES E. ELLIS.

Increase in Farm Taxes.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE just received notice from the Tax Collector of Franklin County and find my tax is almost 20 per cent more than last year on my farm. I just got the Post-Dispatch and was reading about the farm land tax reduction, so there must be a mistake, or else they are making me pay more on account of being a nonresident of the county. Here are a few of the tax bills: 1912, $15.15; 1914, $16.12; 1923, $44.03; 1924, $46.24; 1925, $78.50. Does that look like reduction in taxes for farms? And that is not the worst part; the farm has been idle and I couldn't rent it, and this year I don't expect to get the taxes out of it.

JOHN T. MOONEY.

SOLVING THE FARMER'S PROBLEM.

Frank O. Lowden has an interesting article in the current World's Work on "What We Can Do for the Farmer." He disposes at the outset of the somewhat prevalent illusion that the farm problem has been solved. The farmer, of course, is in happier circumstances now than he has been for several years. Even so, the explanation is far from reassuring. The improvement in his condition, according to the Department of Agriculture, is due to the higher prices of wheat and hogs. But the high price of wheat is the result of a short crop in other countries, and an inferior corn crop accounts in part for the high price of hogs. Mr. Lowden's gloomy conclusion is, therefore, justified: "When the prosperity of the American farmer depends upon the failure of a crop either at home or abroad it hangs by a very slender thread."

As a matter of fact the peculiar paradox pertains to agriculture that abundance is a misfortune; that is, that a bumper crop usually brings ruinously low prices. Such a condition is fundamentally wrong. It must be corrected if agriculture is to survive. Mr. Lowden thinks the solution is in co-operative marketing. He cites how Brazil coffee growers solved their problem by what is known as the valorization plan and how the rubber planters in Great Britain's Eastern colonies, once almost bankrupt, are now highly prosperous. He recommends neither method in detail, but the principle in each instance he considers commercially sound, namely, the adjustment of supply to demand, through centralized selling. Our own experiments along this line, he says, have been satisfactory.

Mr. Lowden believes that the Government can serve agriculture as effectually as it has served the banking business. The Federal Reserve banking system, he points out, mobilizes the credits of the country so that they can be used at any time at the point needed. So he suggests a Federal Farm Board which, whenever it found the farmers of any section sufficiently organized, would be empowered to authorize that organization of farmers to form a corporation for taking care of their surplus—either storing it for future domestic need or exporting on the best terms available. It is the surplus that wrecks prices now and will continue a wrecker until it can be competently handled.

The difficulties of the program are recognized, but practical difficulties, he argues, "can be overcome where there is a will and the principle is sound."

Altogether this is a forthright discussion of the farmer's problem. And since the farmer's problem is everybody's problem any proposed solution which is backed by experience, knowledge, common sense and courage, as this is, should command public attention and consideration. Finally, there is no foolish pride of opinion here. "If there is a better way let us find it," says Mr. Lowden. "But let us not confess ourselves impotent in the presence of what many Americans deem to be the greatest menace to the future of our civilization—a decaying agriculture."

GLORIA'S MARQUIS.

"After all," said the Marquis Henri de la Falaise de la Coudraye, when his right to the title was questioned yesterday, "I suppose we are all descended from Adam." Then he proceeded laughingly to discuss his title as a point of fact, submitting to impressed reporters certain proofs.

Not that it mattered. The Marquis made this point most clear. "My friends call me Hank," he explained. What is a title between friends? Nothing.

Attaboy, Hank! That's the way we like to see a Marquis act under fire. No sneers, no curses, no twirling of mustache ends. A title to Henri de la Falaise is a mere incident.

After all, say we, he is Gloria Swanson's husband. No one has questioned that.

THE SUNDAY NEWSPAPER CENTENNIAL.

Most readers will be surprised to learn that the Sunday newspaper is 100 years old. The New York Sunday Courier, established in 1825, was the world's first Sunday paper. It passed out after a brief career, but its descendants are numerous. According to Editor & Publisher, a sprightly New York journal published in behalf of the business and the profession implied in its title, there are now more than 550 Sunday newspapers in the United States and Canada. Editor & Publisher, in its weekly issue for Oct. 3, celebrated the Sunday newspaper centennial, saying editorially:

"Our Sunday newspaper is as typical of America as is the dollar bill. It fits into the day of leisure, sacred to worship, recreation, gossip, dress, parade, dreams, love, reading, refreshments of body, soul and mind. It is designed for every member of the family, the workaday father, home providing mother, their fledglings of all ages. It is made for all who read. It knows no class. It holds for highbrow and lowbrow. To every community it carries a common message of information, inspiration, education, pleasure, business, all within the price and the reach of Prince or pauper."

Editor & Publisher adds that "the refinements that have come into the Sunday press during the past 10 years have put it on a relatively high plane of literary quality. The early-day 'chamber of horrors' idea has passed. The American Sunday newspaper is no longer cheap or vulgar. It challenges the creative genius of journalism. There is no flight of the imagination too high, no cost too great, no adventure too ambitious, to receive support if it will legitimately attract the interest of the rank and file of readers."

This succinct statement of fact is worthy of a wide perusal. One who reflects upon the progress made already must agree with Editor & Publisher when it asserts that the greatest achievements of the Sunday newspaper are yet to be realized. The high-class Sunday journal is doing now for the general reader what the monthly magazine of a few decades ago was doing in a field which it virtually monopolized; it is providing, along with all the news and abundant offerings of lighter material, a large quantity of substantial writing for serious readers. Authors and artists of the highest class appear in the pages of the Sunday paper.

Dean Walter Williams of the Missouri University School of Journalism once termed the daily newspaper "the parchment of the common people." The Sunday newspaper, as developed through a century, is a liberal education.

GOV. BAKER'S SCHOOL FUND.

Gov. Baker is engaged in the commendable effort to provide a fund separate from the general revenues of the State, for the support of the public schools and the State educational institutions. Years ago an effort was made to provide a fund by special tax such as is levied for the St. Louis schools, to take care of the State University and other educational institutions, but without success.

The present plan of depending upon the general revenue and upon appropriations from that revenue by the State Legislature is not satisfactory. It is beset with uncertainties, and frequently in the rush of legislation, the educational institutions suffer.

Gov. Baker is having drafted a constitutional amendment which will set aside certain taxes, such as the general property tax of five cents on the $100 valuation, the inheritance tax, a new tax of 10 per cent on sales value of all cigars and cigarettes sold in Missouri, and one per cent of the market value of minerals mined in Missouri, making an estimated total of $12,250,000 a year. This fund is to be divided between the public schools and the State educational institutions in the proportion of 60 per cent to the former and 40 per cent to the latter.

The amendment is not yet drafted in full, so that it cannot be judged in detail. The form of the amendment will be decided upon at a conference on Oct. 19. If the amendment is wisely framed, we believe that it ought to receive the support of the people.

TEXAS ENDS ITS HONOR SYSTEM.

Armed guards now watch the convicts work on Texas' prison farm. Too much freedom from the State's restraint led too many of them to depart. There was nothing but honor to hold them, and the tie was weak when open roads led far away. It may seem a little hard on those who were faithful to their pledges to remain, but it illustrates the danger of making "trusties" of too many prisoners.

Probably it proves no more than that. The first purpose of penal servitude is to protect society from the predatory and vicious. Punishment must still remain a part of the system, that potential criminals may be deterred. That is a part of the protection sought. So is making honorable and useful citizens of the erring ones who come within the toils of law. While their sentences are running they must come to understand that honor brings rewards or they will not learn it later.

The Texas experiment erred in including too many criminals, or in lack of care or judgment in selection of those who were to till a State farm, with no more visible restraint than the ranch hands of the surrounding countryside. That system afforded surcease from the grind of prison routine, to a great extent. Few within prison walls would fail to welcome such an opportunity. But there are those who do not love the soil, to whom farm work is drudgery and nothing more, and these, with lingering longings for the old haunts and associates, would deem a State farm a prison still, even without guards and searchlights, iron bars or ponderous locks. They would escape if they could. They could and did, and so the experiment is ended or modified.

This does not end prison reform in Texas or elsewhere. It must proceed, with humanitarian impulses guided by common sense, which will consider the characteristics of the men dealt with. There is a crime wave of shameful magnitude to be dealt with, and it springs from a multitude of causes. Criminals should be restrained. They should be punished to curb the criminal tendencies of others, but this should not halt experiments in trying to make law-abiding citizens of those who err but have redeeming possibilities.

MILITARY TRAINING IN STATE UNIVERSITY.

The question of compulsory military training is being hotly discussed in the State University, due to the activity of certain religious organizations. To quote a recent news dispatch from Columbia: "Calling themselves 'student organizations,' religious groups in the Congregational, Presbyterian and Baptist churches and the Methodist Epworth League have adopted resolutions denouncing compulsory military training."

Apropos of this, Mr. Wesley Groskopf of the Y. M. C. A., Columbia, writes the Post-Dispatch that "there are many misapprehensions current in connection with the question," and asks us, for the information of students, to print that part of the Morrill Land Grant act that has to do with military training in colleges, the university being, in part, a land grant school.

The act, named for its author, Justin Smith Morrill, was finally passed by Congress in 1862 and signed by President Lincoln. It provided for the foundation and maintenance of colleges "where the leading object shall be, without excluding other scientific and classical studies, AND INCLUDING MILITARY TACTICS (which had not been included in the original bill), to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts . . . in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions of life." In 1890 Morrill introduced in the Senate a second act, under which $25,000 is given annually to each of the land grant colleges.

The Student Council of the university will vote on this question at the "home-coming" meeting, Nov. 7. It is anticipated that if the university desires to abolish the teaching of "military tactics," it will have to "make some new arrangements" with the Federal Government to continue the appropriations.

In the early days of the State University, sectarian meddling caused trouble and impeded its progress. History seems to be repeating itself. If the pacifist element succeeds in getting the kind of vote it wants, nothing could be done by mere "arrangement" with the Government. Only a revision of the Morrill act, deleting the "military tactics" clause, could make it possible for the Government to continue the appropriation under this statute.

Military teaching in the colleges, is not necessarily, nor generally, tainted with what we know as militarism. It is for defense—a part of that preparedness for lack of which this country suffered so much, in treasure and blood, in the World War. Under the right kind of teachers and officers, such training is good for the students and for the country.

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized.—Article 4 of the Bill of Rights of the Federal Constitution.

POLLYANNA MODIFIED.

When all the world is dark and filled with sorrow,
When you are what is widely known as "blue,"
Just smile and grit your teeth until the morrow
And you will somehow learn to stagger through.

When friends are leaving you in hordes and clusters,
And bill collectors clamor for their due
And haunt your nights and days in shrieking musters—
Just smile and you will finally stagger through.

When I am victim to both toil and trouble
And lag behind the well-known human race,
I smile and say that Life's a merry bubble
And get a hefty wallop in the face.

Poor old Tom Marshall! The thought of him in politics suggests Ulysses clerking in a Mary Lane shop. He was too full of the milk of human kindness to do anything more than run a sort of sentimental political dairy. He had no critical capacity. He loved everybody in the Senate and he saw good in them all. That government is for the masses and what is the interest of all is its concern never occurred to the amiable Vice President whose single contribution to the sayings of great men was that what this country needs is a good 5-cent cigar. He had in mind not his opportunity to be useful but his good fortune to be there, and whenever those about him showed fire or substance he got under his chair and hoped the storm would soon be over. A born political Parsifal was Tom, and what rough men were doing out in the world while he smiled through the window he never guessed.

Sir: A short item in this column some days ago called attention to an argument which is used by the dry advocates. It was said that drink was an evil because it was contrary to the general welfare of mankind.

Also as opposed to this argument it was urged that pie and radishes, if eaten to excess, are also very injurious, and doughnuts were also mentioned as being in this category.

This is all very true. However, as far as we have any knowledge, an overindulgence in pie or radishes never yet caused a man to fly into such a rage that he grabbed his wife and threw her downstairs, breaking her leg; nor is it on record that anyone ever ate so many doughnuts that they suddenly lost their reason, seized a gun and started shooting up the neighborhood.

To Vicentia Mann: I judge you to be a woman, according to the way you sign your name. For that, I suppose, we should forgive your indiscreet statement. How can you, a Gentile, bear the same feelings toward Spain as we, the Jews, do? As for Rabbi Harrison, I believe he must have been under a hallucination when he made his statement. Him we may disregard. Do you think for one moment that we will ever love the country that once persecuted its Jewish population so bitterly? The Jew is human, too, and for that reason, why should he forgive Spain? Would you love the hand that plunged the knife into your back, or the hand that burned your eyes out, or the hand that cut your tongue out, causing you to slowly but surely die a horrible death?

I am sure you can never understand the feelings that pulse through a Jew when the name of Spain is mentioned. Spain, the hated persecutor of the Jewish race, the country that allowed the Jews to settle and prosper, for it is their nature to engage in commercial pursuits, and then—Oh, irony of fate!—robbed them in their glory of their all and drove them forth like dogs! Surely, you can expect no self-respecting Jew to ever have honor or love for the country that once so horribly harassed his people.

I am sure that if you would but read up on the history of the Jewish race in Spain you would be induced to change your mind.

A 12-year-old girl in Brooklyn has published a book of verse which is hailed by the Brooklyn Eagle as the product of a mature mind. This reminds one of what happened in Newark a few years ago. A boy of about that age attracted the attention of the press with his sonnets, and in a Sunday edition of a Newark newspaper there appeared a page of these sonnets, together with a picture of the boy. This page fell into the hands of S. C. Kiser of the Chicago Record-Herald, who happened to recognize them as sonnets of Shakspeare. That necessarily ended the career of the Newark poet, but for all we know the Newark newspaper is still going.

Two hundred and fifty divorce cases are on the docket in Kansas City courts. The 250 couples involved will be changed into 250 husbandless women and 250 wifeless men when decisions are finally reached. Ninety per cent of all these individuals will be married to new mates inside of two years. Since 90 per cent of the 250 men is 225, and 90 per cent of the 250 women is 225, it will be seen that 450 weddings will grow out of those 250 divorces. Contemporary poets who chose
Their motifs from our busy city life

BRITAIN'S LANDED ARISTOCRACY.

LOTHROP STODDARD in the Century for October.

IN Western Europe the aristocracy has parted with a good deal of its land under economic pressure, especially the high rate of taxation. This is particularly true of Great Britain. Both during and since the war the British tax-rate has been a crushing burden on the landed aristocracy. Unlike the great estates of Eastern Europe, where land still forms the chief source of wealth, many of the British estates show either little profit or were actually held at a financial loss for sentimental or social reasons. The result has been that many estates have been thrown wholesale on the market and are either being cut up into smaller holdings or are being purchased by wealthy persons of nonaristocratic origin. Castles, "halls," and manors which have been treasured heirlooms of noble and "gentle" families for generations and even for centuries today know their ancient owners no more. The effects of these changes not only upon the British countryside, but also upon British society in general, may well be profound.

A PANCAKE ROMANCE.

From the Wichita Beacon.

THE secret is out. It was the flapjacks of Maggie Carr, cook extraordinary, that won the heart of President Coolidge, that won the heart of Jerry Shea. No doubt the uncanny memory of President Coolidge as a diplomat and autocrat of the breakfast table attracted the attention of the observant Jerry. There must have been some strange potency in the pancakes of Maggie Carr. The Presidential breakfast table conferences were becoming the talk of the nation. Senators, representatives and diplomats stood around the corridors waiting for invitations. And when they came away they showed remarkable alacrity in modifying the views to suit the Coolidge policies. Ruminating, no doubt, that the way to the nation's lawmaking heart was through the stomach, there must be something powerful in those flapjacks. Jerry Shea tried some of them. And he was elated. Now President Coolidge has lost his cook. Whether there will be a mass drifting away from administration leadership from now on remains to be seen.

AMERICAN CAPITAL ABROAD.

From the Pittsburg Sun.

AMERICAN capital flowing into foreign fields for investment is estimated by the Commerce Department to have amounted to $551,591,000 during the first six months of the calendar year 1925. This brought the value of private American investment abroad to a total of $9,580,000,000. The acceleration of the foreign investment tendency in the United States was illustrated to some extent by the department's showing that the total for the first three months of 1924 was only $378,700,000, although during the latter half of 1924 the records placed the total value at $583,000,000. All of the figures were based on the public offerings of foreign securities sold for United States investors.

Memoirs

"Cross of Gold and Crown of Thorns" Was Not New, but After Having Been Tried Out on Small Occasions, Was "Laid Away for a Proper Occasion" — Beginning of Free Silver Campaign That Brought Him Presidential Nomination.

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. Edited and Corrected by Mary Baird Bryan.

I FORMED early the habit of attending national conventions. It so happened that the Democratic national convention of 1876 was held in St. Louis, only 70 miles from my birthplace. My father and mother were attending the Philadelphia Exposition at the time, but my enthusiasm reached a point where I decided to go to the convention with some of the other boys—I do not recall that any of them were as young as myself.

I sold enough corn to secure the small amount necessary, the railroad fare being only a few dollars and my other expenses being small. I recall that I stayed all night at East St. Louis, sleeping on a room with more than 30 others on cots.

Next day I appeared at the convention hall, but not knowing anyone from whom I could secure a ticket, I had to content myself with standing around watching the distinguished Democrats, to me unknown, go in and out of the convention. But here again my lucky star helped me out. A policeman, taking pity on me, put me in through a window and I had the pleasure of hearing John Kelly make his famous speech against Tilden.

Speech Paid Railroad Fare.

That was my initiation into National politics. Since that time I have attended every Democratic national convention but three, and I was in close touch with two of the three, those of 1900 and 1904, by wire. The Cincinnati convention of 1880, therefore is the only one that I have actually missed since I was 16 years old. I was still a college boy in 1880, and Cincinnati was so far from Salem that I was able to withstand the temptation that overpowered me four years before.

When the convention of 1884 was held in Chicago I was living at Jacksonville, but my income was so meager that I decided I could not afford a trip to Chicago, but here again fortune favored me. I was invited to deliver a Fourth of July address at Greenwood, a few miles from Jacksonville. In accepting the invitation, I answered the inquiry about compensation by saying that I expected nothing more than my traveling expenses. When I was through speaking, the chairman of the committee asked me about my expenses. When I stated the amount, something less than $3, he handed me a $20 bill with the remark: "That will cover your expenses."

I was so surprised that I almost forgot to thank him. I decided that I would construe my good luck as a providential provision for convention expenses and arranged to go to Chicago. On the train I fell in with Carl Epler, son of Judge Epler, one of the Circuit Judges presiding in the Jacksonville circuit, and we made the trip together.

A Friendly Doorkeeper.

A Chicago we went from one headquarters to another and listened to the arguments in favor of the various candidates. My personal preference was Senator Bayard of Delaware. In one of the "senates" of which I was a member when a schoolboy I represented Delaware and took the name of Senator Bayard. I was open in conviction, however, and ready to hurrah for the candidate who won the convention.

As it is in all national conventions, it was difficult to get a ticket. Finding the Hon. Telas Merritt of Salem, a prominent politician, at the Illinois headquarters, I asked him if he could not secure tickets for Epler and myself. He said he could not secure any tickets, but that he knew one of the doorkeepers, whereupon he took us to Josephus Chesterfield Machin, a Chicago politician, and said in his stammering way: "Joe, p-pa-pass these b-b-boys in." Joe passed us in, and we returned to his door regularly during the session of the convention.

I am sorry to have to remark that Joe was soon after sent to the penitentiary for "ballot box stuffing." This was through no fault of Mr. Merritt's or of ours, and I only mention it because I never think of the incident without also thinking of what befell Josephus Chesterfield after we had thus become acquainted with him.

Memoirs of William Jennings Bryan

"Cross of Gold and Crown of Thorns" Was Not New, but After Having Been Tried Out on Small Occasions, Was "Laid Away for a Proper Occasion" — Beginning of Free Silver Campaign That Brought Him Presidential Nomination.

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. Edited and Corrected by Mary Baird Bryan.

I FORMED early the habit of attending national conventions. It so happened that the Democratic national convention of 1876 was held in St. Louis, only 70 miles from my birthplace. My father and mother were attending the Philadelphia Exposition at the time, but my enthusiasm reached a point where I decided to go to the convention with some of the other boys—I do not recall that any of them were as young as myself.

I sold enough corn to secure the small amount necessary, the railroad fare being only a few dollars and my other expenses being small. I recall that I stayed all night at East St. Louis, sleeping on a room with more than 30 others on cots.

Next day I appeared at the convention hall, but not knowing anyone from whom I could secure a ticket, I had to content myself with standing around watching the distinguished Democrats, to me unknown, go in and out of the convention. But here again my lucky star helped me out. A policeman, taking pity on me, put me in through a window and I had the pleasure of hearing John Kelly make his famous speech against Tilden.

Speech Paid Railroad Fare.

That was my initiation into National politics. Since that time I have attended every Democratic national convention but three, and I was in close touch with two of the three, those of 1900 and 1908, by wire. The Cincinnati convention of 1880, therefore is the only one that I have actually missed since I was 16 years old. I was still a college boy in 1880, and Cincinnati was so far from Salem that I was able to withstand the temptation that overpowered me four years before.

When the convention of 1884 was held in Chicago I was living at Jacksonville, but my income was so meager that I decided I could not afford a trip to Chicago but here again fortune favored me. I was invited to deliver a Fourth of July address at Greenwood, a few miles from Jacksonville. In accepting the invitation, I answered the inquiry about compensation by saying that I expected nothing more than my traveling expenses. When I was through speaking, the chairman of the committee asked me about my expenses. When I stated the amount, something less than $3, he handed me a $20 bill with the remark: "That will cover your expenses."

I was so surprised that I almost forgot to thank him. I decided that I would construe my good luck as a providential provision for convention expenses and arranged to go to Chicago. On the train I fell in with Carl Epler, son of Judge Epler, one of the Circuit Judges presiding in the Jacksonville circuit, and we made the trip together.

A Friendly Doorkeeper.

A Chicago we went from one headquarters to another and listened to the arguments in favor of the various candidates. My personal preference was Senator Bayard of Delaware. In one of the "senates" of which I was a member when a schoolboy I represented Delaware and took the name of Senator Bayard. I was open to conviction, however, and ready to hurrah for the candidate who won the convention.

As it is in all national conventions, it was difficult to get a ticket. Finding the Hon. Telas W. Merritt of Salem, a prominent politician, at the Illinos headquarters, I asked hm if he could not secure tickets for Epler and myself. He said he could not secure any tickets, but that he knew one of the doorkeepers, whereupon he took us to Josephus Chesterfield Machin, a Chicago politician, and said in his stammerng way: "Joe, p-pa-pass, these b-b-boys in." Joe passed us in, and we returned to his door regularly during the session of the convention.

I am sorry to have to remark in passing that Joe was soon after sent to the penitentiary for "ballot box stuffing." This was through no fault of Mr. Merrit's or of ours, and I only mention it because I never think of the incident without also thinking of what befell Josophus Chesterfield after we had thus become acquainted with him.

Patronage at the Door.

When the 1888 convention was held in St. Louis, I was a resident of Nebraska, having helped elect Hon. J. Sterling Morton a delegate, and I had no difficulty in getting a ticket to the convention. I remember being very much impressed by the nominating speech made by Senator Daniel of Virginia.

The Democratic national convention of 1892 was held at Chicago. I was a member of Congress then, and was renominated a few days before the convention. By this time I had become acquainted with a good many public men and also with a good many politicians. I spoke at Creston in the Boise campaign in the fall of 1891. Here I met a prominent Democratic politician of that section by the name of Duggan. I happened to meet him at Chicago and learned from him that he was doorkeeper. He offered to let any of my friends in, and soon I found out how easily one could add to his list of friends when he could reward them with admission to a national convention. Before the session was over I had put a liberal number of Western Democrats under obligation to me by bringing them into acquaintance with Mr. Duggan.

At the Chicago convention I heard Bourke Cochrane make his celebrated speech against the third nomination of Mr. Cleveland, but took no part in the convention's deliberations.

Saw McKinley Nominated.

In 1896 I began attending Republican conventions as well as those of my own party. The first was the McKinley convention, which was held at St. Louis about two weeks before the Chicago convention at which I was nominated. I was at that time editor of the World-Herald at Omaha, and attended the convention ostensibly in the character of a newspaper man. As a matter of fact, however, I was there to encourage the silver Republicans in the fight that they were making.

Beginning in 1893 I had been more and more intimately acquainted with the silver Republican men like Senators Teller, DuBois, Pettigrew and Cannon, and Congressmen Shafroth, Towne, Hartmann and others. I was in conference with them during the course of the fight over the platform, and sent back editorial correspondence to my paper.

The convention turned out as I expected, and the looked-for bolt took place. I felt sure that the action of this convention would have a large influence at Chicago.

Traveled and Lectured.

The free silver fight of 1896 was foreshadowed in a letter which President Cleveland wrote to a Chicago club early in 1895, indicating that the fight was to be on the money question. This aroused the silver Democrats to a realization that they would have to control the organization, or be read out of the party.

A conference was called for June, 1895, at Memphis, Tenn. I attended this conference—in fact, I had spoken in Memphis a month before in answer to Mr. Carlisle, who had gone to Memphis to deliver an address intended to line up the South in favor of the gold standard.

For the next year I traveled throughout the country lecturing in some places and making public speeches in other places—everywhere helping, as best I could, in the organization of the silver forces. At Wilmington, Del., I paid the hall rent, introduced myself and spoke to a handful of people in a small room. At one other place I helped pay the expenses of the meeting.

It was through these speeches that I became acquainted with a number of the delegates who were present at Chicago. I was perhaps personally acquainted with more delegates than any other man who was mentioned as a candidate.

No Surprise to Him.

My own State would have instructed for me if I had permitted it, but I objected on the ground that I did not want to be presented as a candidate for two reasons; first, there was no likelihood of me being instructed for in other states, and, second, because I wanted to help other men who were candidates to secure their own states.

"Coming events cast their shadows before."

The possibility of my nomination at Chicago was foreshadowed some years before. When I delivered my tariff speech in Congress in March, 1892, I received a telegram from a friend in Jacksonville, Ill., which ran about as follows:

"How old are you? Am for you for the Democratic presidential nomination if you are old enough."

This was one of the earliest outbursts of enthusiasm. From time to time newspapers mentioned my name in connection with the nomination. This occurred with increasing frequency after my silver speech in August, 1893. Beginning in 1895 I began to receive letters from prominent Democrats in different states declaring themselves in favor of my nomination. Among the earliest of these were Milton E. Miller of Lebanon, Ore., who has become increasingly prominent in politics since that time. Gov. J. E. Osborne of Wyoming, in whose hom town, Rawlings, I had spoken in 1894 or '95. Hon. John A. Tomlinson of Birmingham, Ala.; Mr. Cassidy of Crystal Springs, Miss.; ex-Governor Baxter of Wyoming, and others.

All of these letters followed the same line of arguing in favor of my eligibility. During the year 1895 I visited Springfield at the invitation of bimetallists and spoke at a convention which was the beginning of the organization of the silver forces of the State. I met Gov. Altgeld there, and have letters received from him afterward suggesting the possibility of my receiving the nomination for Vice President, he being favorable to Congressman Bland.

I went to Chicago some days before the convention to meet a committee of the silver Democrats, as they were called, although we described ourselves as bimetallists when we had occasion to use a description, and was present when Senator Daniel was decided upon for temporary chairman.

When I reached Chicago the outlook was not encouraging for my candidacy. While there were a few who were friends, the majority of the delegates seemed to be divided up among other candidates, Mr. Bland leading. My chances seemed to be so poor that I spoke to Tomlinson about the matter who was on hand arguing very earnestly for my nomination.

Origin of Famous Phrase.

I explained to him that there seemed very little prospect of my nomination, and asked him to feel perfectly free to support another candidate if he found it to their advantage to do so. He replied very promptly that he had no personal interest in the nomination of anyone, and as he believed me the most available man, he would continue to urge my nomination if I was willing that he should do so. I replied that I appreciated his support and would not, of course, forbid his speaking of me, but that I was not willing for him to suffer any personal loss on account of his devotion to me.

I had an engagement to speak at the Chautauqua in Crete, Neb., between the preliminary conference at Chicago and the convening of the convention. I was advertised for a debate there with John Irish of Iowa, one of the prominent advocates of the gold standard. I went from Chicago to Nebraska to fill this engagement, and then returned with the Nebraska delegation.

"In the debate with Irish I used the sentence with which I closed my Chicago convention speech, the sentence which refers to "the cross of gold and the crown of thorns."

I had used it a few times before that time, recognizing its fitness for the conclusion of a climax, and had laid it away for a proper occasion.

Prepared for Speech.

At the preliminary conference I had in mind the possibility of being chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, but found that Senator Jones of Arkansas, the chairman of the Bi-Metallic League, was a candidate for the position, and was not willing to be proposed in opposition to him, so that matter was dropped.

Some of my friends there spoke of me for temporary chairman of the convention, but this position, as I have said, went to Senator Daniel and a very wise selection it was.

Then there was some talk of me for permanent chairman, and this seemed a possibility when I made the brief trip to Nebraska. On the train I made some preparations in anticipation of an opportunity to speak at the convention, although there was no certainty as to this opportunity coming to me. While I spent all my spare time in arranging the arguments for any speech that I might deliver at the convention, I prepared only one new argument, and that I have always regarded as the most important argument presented, although it has never received a great deal of attention from those who have commented upon the speech.

Real Business Men.

The passage was intended for a double purpose; first, to awaken small business men to an appreciation of their importance, and, second, to rebuke the gold advocates who were continually talking about business men, but who regarded there engaged in business as the only business men to be considered. The passage reads as follows:

"We say to you, that you have made the definition of a business man too limited in its application. The man who is employed for wages is as much a business man as his employer; the attorney in a country town is as much a business man as the corporation counsel in a great metropolis; the merchant at the crossroads store is as much a business man as the merchant of New York; the farmer who goes forth in the morning and toils all day—who begins in the spring and toils all summer—and who by the application of brain and muscle to the natural resources of the country creates wealth, is as much a business man as the man who goes upon the board of trade and bets upon the price of grain; the miners who go down a thousand feet into the earth, or climb two thousand feet upon the cliffs, and bring forth from their hiding places the precious metals to be poured into the channels of trade, are as much business men as the few financial magnates who, in a back room corner the money of the world. We come to speak for this broader class of business man."

What does this mean? Anybody who knows is better off than the writer. We are told that it means that no security pact is possible except on the basis of the covenant. Then it is equivalent to saying that material guarantees embodied in the treaty of Versailles must be abandoned.

In short all we have had from Locarno are pictures of idyllic meetings, under leafy arbors and specimens of legalistic prose. It is not enough.

on guard on her Jugo-Slav and South Tyrol borders, and surrenders more and more the sympathies of domestic peoples.

The whole thing would be highly unpleasant for soviet Russia, but she could not prevent it even with more clever methods than those employed by the vain and loud-mouthed Tchitcherin, who again presents himself as the missing link between the over-sly Tzaristic diplomacy and the clumsy demogoguery of communist trouble makers. If he should succeed in bringing about a Russo-Polish agreement his efforts to do evil would result in good by eliminating the source of conflagrations.

German Nationalists listen nervously for signals of coming peace. For six years they have been regaining and strengthening their power by stirring up the people's anger and desires for revenge, but they must now fear the loss of this power at one blow if they are compelled to participate in a policy of reconciliation, which heretofore they have brutally opposed. They could become the opposition party and thus outwardly escape responsibility for the financial catastrophe with which Germany is threatened for lack of capital. But such action would require the surrender of all posts in the Government, and it would not be so easy to regain them as it was last spring.

And if common sense wins at Lake Maggiore, then there is a safe majority in the Reichstag for the security pact.

what he should do? There are times, many times when a person has given evidence very hurtful to your cause and you say, "No questions," and dismiss him in the hope that the jury will dismiss him too. But can you do that when the jury is weeping, and a little girl is weeping.

About a half an hour was consumed in finding out whom this little girl had seen, and where she lived, and how she had been maintained, and where she had been during all the interval since the fire. Little progress was made; but the tears had stopped. And then, not with any special attempt to imitate the District Attorney but, of course, wanting to be kind and gracious to little Rose she was asked: Now, in your own words—in your own words—and in your own way will you tell the jury everything that you did; everything that you said and everything that you saw, after you heard the buzzer?"

The question was put in practically the same words that the District Attorney had put it; and little Rose started her answer with exactly the same word that she had started it to the District Attorney and she finished it with precisely the same word that she had finished it to the District Attorney; and the only thing that had happened was that Rose left out one word. And then Rose was asked, "Didn't you, in answering this question now, leave out a word that you put in when you answered it before?" And she said, "Did I?" and the examiner said, "I think you did." So Rose started to repeat to herself the answer as she came to the missing word she said, "Oh, yes!" and supplied it; and thereupon the examiner went to an entirely different subject and spent about 30 minutes more on that subject. Then once more he turned to Rose and said, "Now, Rose, would you in your own way and in your own words just tell the jury everything that you saw, and everything that you said and everything that you did after you heard the buzzer?' And Rose started with the same word and finished with the same word. tNo one could doubt it was a well-made story that Rose had been well drilled in it. And the jury were not weeping, and the defendants were acquitted; and there was not a word of reflection at any time upon poor little Rose.

Confidential War-Time Letters Of Ambassador Page to Woodrow Wilson

"England Is So Slow That She'll Not Marshall All Her Strength Until the Other Allies Are Exhausted," He Wrote to President in 1915—English Blockade to Stand—Sinking of Arabic as Evidence of Berlin's Desperation.

Edited by BURTON J. HENDRICK
(Copyright, 1925.)

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR,
London.

TO THE PRESIDENT.
London, Aug. 19, 1915.

Dear Mr. President:

AS THIS amazing tragedy unfolds itself we know only imperfectly what is happening and we can only guess what is going to happen. But from what I hear and can infer we had as well prepare our minds and our plans for a long war yet. If the Allies make a peace that leaves the German really victorious, they'll have to fight again, perhaps with fewer of them united than now. They'd rather suffer extinction now than later, and they'll not quit till they are obliged to quit or till they win.

I hear that neither side can win in France. The report (private) here is that a little while ago the French, with half-a-million men, tried to break through the German line, that they advanced about five miles and had lost more than 200,000, and that they then gave it up. It is said also that the Germans have no expectation of breaking through in France. If these reports be true and for the present at least they seem true, the land war will be decided in Turkey, in the Balkans, or in Russia, though Russian defeat alone can decide nothing. This seems to mean a long struggle—through the winter and nobody knows how much longer. England is alive to the peril, and she'll spent her last shilling and (eventually) send her last man. She regards English civilization as at stake. And England is so slow that she'll not marshal all her strength till the other Allies are exhausted. No end, therefore, seems in sight.

"Legalized Starvation."

But following this war, as there followed all preceding great wars, will be great changes in the rules of the game as between belligerents. Men used to say that the machines of destruction would become so terrible as to make war impossible, for it would mean mere extermination. The war in France is already that—the only question is, which side will be exterminated? The trench, the machine-gun, the hand-mortar, the hand-grenade, and gas (yet in its experimental stage) are killing men in such numbers that neither the French nor the Germans report the number—to say nothing of explosive shells from howitzers.

Several British regiments now contain hardly a man—private or officer—who first went out. The gentle euphemism for this annihilation is "wastage." Fighting above ground is obsolete where both sides are "scientific." And annihilation is going on in France as fast as any theorist could wish. Of course it takes time to annihilate millions of men; the army unit has increased so enormously. And the population of parts of Poland is suffering annihilation, as a part of the population of Northern France and of Belgium did. Starvation and the use of gas will become conventionalized in future wars whether "legalized" or not. In fact, they are already accepted weapons in this war. The mistake made by those who predicted that the horrors of war with new engines would make wars impossible was not a mistake about annihilation but about the shrinking of men from being annihilated. No such fear stops them. In fact it looks as if war now means practical extermination.

War Horrors Come Closer

"Dishonorable New Weapons."

If the Belgians ever get into Germany or the Germans ever get into England or Italy, something very closely akin to extermination will follow. Men were once horrified by the use of the cross bow in war, and at the use of guns—all the old rules of sword and pike war were knocked out by these dishonorable new weapons of indiscriminate destruction. So the art of killing moves on towards a gas that will annihilate an army or devastate a province.

As for our controversy with Great Britain, this seems to me as good a forecast as can now be made: The blockade, as defended by Sir Edward Grey, rests on his citations of American action during the Civil War and on his willingness, if need be, to submit disputes to arbitration. Unless some influence that I do not now foresee comes in to play a part, this government will stand on that contention. It will conduct the blockade as favourably to us as they can bring themselves to do; but they are persuaded, perhaps overpersuaded, that the economic pressure on Germany is their strongest weapon. Public opinion here takes that view more and more decisively, and members of both parties that form the Coalition Government have committed themselves to this belief. Since they are willing to submit their action to arbitration—taking the risk of another Alabama award—they hope to get through on this basis. I think we did a good stroke in drawing from Sir Edward Grey his note declaring his willingness to submit to arbitration. This seems to me our real triumph so far in the controversy.

Predicts New Friendship.

The trouble that the controversy gives you they follow and share. They know the Hoke Smiths and the other agitators and they have their share of alarm. But (I think) they are going to keep up their economic pressure on Germany at all hazards. The public will rend the Government if it does not.

Yet thoughtful men here know that Great Britain will come out of this war at the best with great financial and commercial embarrassment, and at the worst practically bankrupt along with all the other European governments; and they know that the United States will have a prodigious advantage over any other country for a generation or two, which (barring some great misfortune to us) will mean a prodigious advantage for all time. They wish, therefore, to stand close to us, for selfish reasons, reasons of self-preservation, as well as for reasons of civilization—the preservation of Anglo-Saxon institution and aspirations.

If we get through this war amicably with the British, they will be more friendly to us than they have ever been, since we have not only the largest English-speaking white population but will have the start also definitely towards financial and commercial supremacy. Their predominant financial grip on the world, which is their main grip will be gone. And, tho' they have not lost their virility, they have never acquired our efficiency. They are slow and unadaptable and tradition-ridden and class-ridden yet.

Slow English Ways.

On any street corner in London you have to buy one afternoon paper from one man, another from another, and a third from a third. It has never occurred to any one man to sell two or more papers, I passed two men the other day in the country each trying to coax a horse hitched to a great load of hay up a steep hill. Each horse had more than it could pull. I said, "Why don't you hitch both horses to one cart, pull that up and then come back and get the other cart in the same way?" After a moment of surprised silence and deep thought, one of them answered, "We've never done that, sir," and he went on urging his horse up inch by inch. That night at a country hotel, lighted by electricity, they charged me for candles.

"But I had no candles."

"Yes, sir, but we've always done that."

These little experiences explain the lack of munitions six months after the munition works had been begging for orders. They explain the effort to take the Dardanelles without an army. They explain the postponement of conscription, although everybody knows that England will have to put her last available man in the army. The amazing thing is, the men who sell only one paper each continue to sell them, the men with the carts do get up the hill, the hotel landlady got my money for candles, the Government is getting munitions at last, and the Dardanelles will be taken even if all Egypt has become a vast hospital for English needlessly wounded. In none of these activities, however, has the Englishman had the direct competition of the Yankee. When he encounters that, good-by, John. And that's what he will encounter when the war ends and leaves him poor.

He understands that his financial primacy is in danger and he will do his utmost to keep close to us.

Leave London to Forget.

There come dull and depressing ruts in this road that we now travel, and we are now in such a rut. Everybody who can leave London is gone. Most houses where one meets people who know things or who think they know are closed. Members of the Government themselves—as many as can—try to find seclusion and a little rest in the country a few days in the week. Most of the diplomatic corps have gone to the country and come down into town for office hours every day—an utter delusion unless they have babies in the family; and the only diplomatic family here that has babies is the Chinaman's.

My house is as good a place as there is in England for me as long as this nightmare lasts—except, of course, every normal man hates a town. But this isn't a bad summer town. It isn't really hot, as you know; and there are golf links within 15 minutes of my office. House be hanged! His kind solicitude for me is a case of benevolence badly wasted. But it is a dull and depressing period.

Wounded Everywhere.

The streets and parks are full of wounded soldiers. So is all England, for the matter. I saw them in every village I drove through in the Midlands last Saturday and Sunday. The price of good food goes higher and higher. Women make the hay in the fields, punch your ticket at the railway stations, and take your fare in the street cars in some cities. My shoemaker sent only yesterday a pair of shoes that I ordered nearly three months ago: "My men have gone to the war." The uptown part of the city is nearly deserted. Shops and residences are to let on almost every street. The newspapers have little but Russian defeats and assaults by Hoke Smith—two curious sources of sorrow! Poor old John Bull, he pathetically looks to the United States for sympathy, and he's "muddling through," conscious at last of the fact that he didn't get on to his job anywhere near the beginning of it. But his strong point is—nothing "rattles" him and nobody can scare him—nor hurry him.

I cannot yet definitely find out the mistake that caused me to think that you thought it desirable for me to make a brief visit home for a consultation.

There's no such thing as a vacation while this earthquake continues. Fortunately I don't need one. I am, as occasion permits, driving out now and then into the country for Saturday afternoon and Sundays; that gets a change of air; and I drop the war and all its brood of woes at the third hole on a golf course.

Desperation in Berlin.

Many thanks for your kind letter about the marriage of my daughter. I am very content with it, since such things must be. But it's nevertheless "devilish hard on the old man." That girl has been the charm of my household here, and (if the truth were known) her mother and I need her worse than her husband does. But they are very happily paired, and that's all we have a right to ask. We all heartily appreciate your kind thought of her happiness.

No sooner had I written this than the news comes of the sinking of the Arabic. About this there's no use writing since all the information will promptly go by telegraph. Nobody here is in the least surprised—surely I am not. Some such thing has been expected, and more will come. Berlin is utterly desperate and it will become more desperate. The elation of success in Russia brings desperation, and so will a reverse—such a German reverse, for example, as I am now told will probably take place within a month or two at the Dardanelles. I hear that the Turks are showing unmistakable signs of exhaustion—of ammunition and of fighting qualities. The German machine has its qualities and character, which no event has yet in the slightest degree changed. It has that incurable disease — the Napoleonic ambition.

Yours sincerely,
WALTER H. PAGE.

Upholds Evolution, but Denies Ape Is Relation

they lived largely in trees. It is natural, therefore, that although they do not have four hands they should have developed feet capable of grasping things.

But what influence has this arboreal life had upon the ape's hand? It too has been modified and accommodated to tree-climbing functions by the partial atrophy of the thumb and its separation from the other fingers. All mammals show a tendency toward diminishing the number of fingers and toes. In the horse and the zebra, for example, this has gone to the limit: They have only one toe—the hoof. The same tendency has begun in the anthropoid apes with the partial atrophy of the thumb, which has been compensated for by the lengthening and strengthening of the fingers to make them better for climbing. With these long, strong, pliable fingers the anthropoid ape swings from a branch, hangs a moment in the air, and then seizes another branch with his grasping foot. Some classes of apes—for example, the African colobi—have practically no thumbs, and the sacred monkeys of Indian have none whatever. Accordingly the anthropoid apes have passed beyond the stage of hand-evolution where all five fingers are equally developed. An ape's hand, with its gradually vanishing and widely separated thumb, can never turn to the human hand. To the biologist that is positive proof that man is not directly descended from the ape, for such evolutionary tendencies never reverse themselves.

What conclusions may we draw, then, from this consideration of the head and the hand as determining differences between man and the man-like ape, and therefore between men and animals in general? In man the brainpan, with its content the brain, preponderates over the face and paws, while the retention of all the five original fingers as equally efficient organs preserves the unlimited and manifold utility of the hand. In case of the man-like apes the facial bones and the jaws preponderate over the brainpan and the brain, and the universal utility of the hand is lessened by the partial atrophy of the thumb.

But the significance of all this is not fully evident until we relate it with the further fact that man walks erect and the manlike ape only half-erect. The latter is able to assume a partially erect position because he has very long arms and very short legs and in walking supports himself upon his knuckles. He has, so to speak, only half-attained an upright posture. Only human beings—and this is one of their distinctive qualities as human being—walk on two feet. They thereby obtain the full use of the head and hands for the finer and higher functions which make the difference between men and animals. The hands and arms are entirely relieved of the duties of locomotion, which are taken over wholly by the legs and feet. This first step in the division of labor among the organs permits the hand in turn to relieve the mouth of all the work of providing food and of defense, whereupon the latter confines itself to the functions of masticating food and serving the brain in articulate speech. Thus the jawbones and their supporting facial bones, relieved of many of the duties they perform in an ordinary animal, are reduced in size, rendering possible the compensatory development of the brainpan and the brain.

That is what lifts man immeasurably above all other animals, including the anthropoid apes. The male gorilla, which is the largest animal of his class and exceeds man in weight, has a brain only as large as that of a new-born child. The brain of an adult man or woman weighs three times as much as the largest ape's brain ever dissected.

What light does modern microscopy, which had widened so remarkably our knowledge of brain anatomy, throw upon this subject? It shows that the number of elementary nerve-organs of the brain, or so-called 'centers,' which have been proved to have a direct relation with the functioning of that organ, are six times as numerous in case of a man as in case of an anthropoid ape. The principal organ in the brain, the so-called speech center, upon which intelligible language depends, with all the mental functions associated with it, does not exist at all in the anthropoid ape: it is an exclusive possession of human beings. That alone erects a definite and insurmountable barrier between man and other groups of animals. The fact that some birds can be taught to talk has no bearing on this subject. Rationally connected speech, which should be distinguished from purely emotional noises expressing fright or other solely nervous and physical reactions, is the exclusive gift of man. Those who find faith in an immortal human soul indispensable for their peace of mind need only make the seat of that soul and its organ of expression the speech center of the brain in order to have an inexpungable fortress for their creed.

These physiological facts place in proper perspective whatever we know and hear about the 'human intelligence' of animals. But they do not affect the fact that the man-like apes come closer in intellectual capacity to the human kind than any other animals.

A laboratory was established some years ago in the Canary Islands expressly to study the psychology of the anthropoid apes. It conducted a scientific and unbiased series of experiments, in the nature of intelligence tests, upon these animals. One of the present professors of psychology at Berlin University, Wolfgang Kohler, spent several years in this research with a number of chimpanzees and orang-outangs. These experiments showed that the anthropoid apes have a dawning consciousness of the use and even of the preparation of tools, and that they possess a certain amount of rudimentary intelligence in the strict sense of the word—that is, a certain insight into logical relations.

Furthermore, it was proved beyond question that the mental capacities of different individual apes varied widely. Among those at the laboratory was one who was clearly—measured by ape standards—a moron. The servants gave him a Portuguese nickname meaning as much. On the other hand, a male chimpanzee named Sultan gave proof of a high degree of intelligence, notwithstanding the fact that he was suffering from a disease of the bones very common in West Africa.

Significant differences in character were also shown to exist among the apes kept at the laboratory. In general, they exhibited what would be called in case of men social virtues. They never quarreled over their food. When one had had enough he gladly made way for another, and in case of actual or imagined danger all sprang unhesitatingly to the common defense. Whenever they did wrong they felt the need for forgiveness and reconciliation, and their gratitude for any special kindness shown them was really touching. Yet in my opinion we must be on our guard lest we attach too high a moral significance to these facts. My own experience leads me to believe that one of the principal differences between a man and an animal, even the most manlike animal, is that the former has far more free will. His acts are not so automatically determined by purely emotional states. It means more, consequently, when a man observes the moral law than it does when an animal, who reacts instinctively to the law of the horde, does so. Nevertheless, the so-called moral standards of the manlike apes are very much higher than those of the lower orders of monkeys, who, although they likewise live in communities, live under a regime of terrorism exercised by the stronger over the weaker.

I may mention one more important difference between the manlike apes and other apes, although unfortunately we have not complete scientific evidence as yet upon this point. Some zoological investigators who have resided for several years in Kamerun and have studied chimpanzees and gorillas carefully have come to the conclusion from investigating their nests that the anthropoid apes, although they live in communities, have permanent mates and a distinct family life; this is so, that practice distinguishes them clearly from the lower orders of monkeys, where the horde organization unquestionably prevails throughout.

'SPOOKS' TO HELP BABIES' ICE FUND

Several St. Louis Clubs Working to Make Success of Benefit Performance.

That thrillingest, chillingest, funniest comedy-mystery play "Spooks" which scored triumps in New York and Chicago, will be at the American Theater the entire week of Oct. 18—and Monday night, Oct. 19, has been designated as "Club Night," the entire net proceeds of the performance to accrue to the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund.

Members of various St. Louis civic organizations are arranging to attend "Spooks" together, and blocks of tickets have already been set aside for the following clubs: City, Rotary, Town, Missouri Athletic Association, Advertising, Kiwanis, Lions, and Optimists. Washington University students are arranging a gallery party.

Boxes for the performance have been reserved for theater parties by prominent citizens, including former-Mayor Henry W. Kiel, R. King Kauffman, John J. Dowling and others, and it is expected that the performance will be one of the most notable ever held in a St. Louis theater.

"Spooks" written by Robert J. Sherman, is a three-act mystery play said to have more thrills than "The Bat" or "The Cat and the Canary," with a liberal sprinkling of funny comedy situations. A special feature of the play, which has a capable cast headed by Robert Corness, will be the appearance of the world's youngest mind-reader, Miss Leona LaMar, known as the "Girl with the thousand eyes," who will give a demonstration between the acts of "Spooks," answering questions from the audience.

"Club night" will be a gala night at the American Theater, and the proceeds are expected to make up the $1600 still needed by the Babies' Fund. The regular American Theater prices will prevail and reservations should be made early.

DEDICATION OF NEW BRIDGE OVER MERAMEC AT FENTON

Exercises Saturday to Terminate With Barbecue and Dance at Farmers' Club Hall.

The new bridge over the Meramec River at Fenton, built by the State Highway Commission as a link in State Highway No. 30, will be dedicated and opened to traffic next Saturday, in ceremonies starting at 1 p. m. It replaces a dilapidated county bridge, slightly changing the route of the highway, which follows Gravois road. It is a structure of heavy steel, with concrete floor.

A parade, headed by a band, will go to the bridge from the Fenton Farmers' Agricultural Club in the dedication. Speakers expected at the bridge are County Judge Bobring, Sam M. Rudder, district State Highway Engineer [illegible] man Hawes, a good roads advocate; State Senator Ra[illegible] predecessor, A. E. L. Gardner. George S. Johns, editor of the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch, will preside.

A barbecue at the farmers' club hall will follow, with the following speakers expected: Mayor Miller, former Mayor Kiel, Roy F. Britton, president of the Automobile Club of Missouri; George F. Heege and State Representative Walter Wehrle. Stanley Wallach will be toastmaster. The program is to end with dancing.

State Highway No. 30 and Gravois road now are concreted for about 12 miles from the city limits to a point in Jefferson County near High Ridge. The highway leaves Gravois road at Cedar Hill and runs to St. Clair.

MANY NEW BUILDINGS FOR WASHINGTON U.

Projects Amounting to More Than One Million Dollars Approach Completion.

Washington University has on its main campus five new buildings and four under construction, representing a total cost of more than $1,000,000. In addition two buildings in the university's medical center at Barnes Hospital, to cost $750,000, are contemplated for next year, as well as three buildings on the campus.

The completed structures are fraternity houses, leased to Greek-letter organizations. The occupants are Beta Theta Pi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Theta Xi. The home of a sixth fraternity, Sigma Chi, is under construction, and the other structures planned for the main campus are for Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Nu. This group, corresponding architecturally with the university halls, is near Francis Field. It makes room for scores of additional students in Tower and Liggett dormitories.

Newton R. Wilson Memorial Hall, the geology building given by Mrs. Sarah Glasgow Wilson in memory of her husband, is in partial use now for classes and is expected to be completed within 60 days.

The new field house for indoor sports will be ready for occupancy about Jan. 1. Its cost, nearly $250,000, is to be defrayed by the profits from the athletic events. Covering 27,000 square feet, it will accommodate 8000 spectators, and exceed in size the field houses of Michigan, Iowa and Illinois Universities.

Bixby Hall, the new school of fine arts, is the third building under construction, at the southeast corner of the campus. It probably will be finished late this year. Unlike other buildings, which are of Tudor-Gothic style, this hall is of English renaissance design.

Buildings contemplated for next year in the medical center are a $250,000 addition to the Barnes Hospital nurses' home and a $500,000 plant for St. Louis Maternity Hospital.

In addition, alumnae of the university are seeking to complete the $250,000 fund, to which $175,000 has been pledged, for a women's building, as a campus meeting place and organization center for women students. It probably will be located between Cupples Hall II and McMillan Hall.

Chancellor Hadley pointed out that the university is in the midst of its greatest building activity, reflecting steady growth of the institution.

GIRL SCOUT TROOPS IN THE PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS

Council of Catholic Women Decides on Their Organization as One of Its Activities.

The organization of Girl Scout troops in the parochial schools of the St. Louis Archdiocese was adopted yesterday as one of the activities of the Council of Catholic Women. Miss Alice Conway, from the National Girl Scout headquarters in New York, explained the movement.

The first effort of the council, according to Mrs. Edward J. Walsh, Westminster place, who has been appointed chairman of the Girl Scout department of the Council, will be to secure Catholic girls to join the training class for leaders, which will be conducted by the council as soon as a sufficient number of girls volunteer for the class. As soon as girls receive their training in leadership, troops will be formed in those parish schools that desire them, she said.

St. Rose's School, Goodfellow and Maple avenues, has a large Girl Scout troop.

Dedicate New Organ.

A new organ at St. Elizabeth Academy, 3401 Arsenal street, will be dedicated at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon with a sacred concert, in which the participants will be St. Anthony's choristers, C. Hausner, Edgar L. McFadden and A. Seitzer.

THUMB-BOX EXHIBIT TO OPEN SUNDAY, NOV. 1

Show, Open to St. Louis Artists, to Be Held at City Art Museum.

The eleventh annual thumb-box exhibition, organized under the auspices of the St. Louis Art League, will be opened Sunday, Nov. 1 at the City Art Museum. Two galleries have been assigned for the display.

The coming display is the Art League's annual competition autumn exhibition. It comprises thumb-box sketches, small pictures, small sculpture and handicraft, recently executed. It especially presents the open air sketches studies and more intimate work produced during the summer by St. Louis artists at home and abroad.

Those Eligible.

All artists maintaining studios within 50 miles of the city, as well as those who are members of the St. Louis Art League, wherever located at the time, are eligible to exhibit if the work submitted meets the standards of merit maintained by the jury of selection. Last year's catalogue shows 213 exhibits, chosen by the jury from a much larger number submitted. The committee has issued a printed announcement with full information which has been sent to all who are on the artists' directory, compiled for the organization, and will be sent to any address upon application to the chairman of the Exhibitions Committee, 325 Locust street.

Pictures may be in any medium, oils, water colors, etchings, etc., but are limited in original works and in size no 11 by 14 inches or the equivalent, while sculpture is limited to 17 inches maximum height. Works for submission to the jury may be delivered to the Exhibitions Committee, or to the Noonan-Kocian galleries, Locust and Tenth streets, where they will be held for the jury.

Jury Chosen by Ballot.

The Thumb-box Jury of Selection is unique and represents a St. Louis idea, in being chosen by letter ballot by the artists intending to exhibit. After the collection is selected, a jury of awards in turn is elected by the exhibiting artists.

The Art League gives three first prizes of $50 each, and three second prizes of $25 each, for the best groups of exhibits shown in the three divisions, of pictures, sculpture and handicraft. A special prize of $50 for "the most distinguished work of distinctively thumb-box character," is also given by the league, the funds being provided by friends of St. Louis art. The awards will be distributed at a reception to the artists.

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 11, 1925. PAGES 1—20.

Miss Wallace a Bride At Church Ceremony

Veiled Prophet Queen of 1923 Wed to Marion W. Niedringhaus at St. Peter's Episcopal Church — An All-White Wedding.

ALMOST as interesting as her coronation is the wedding of a former Veiled Prophet Queen, for since the beginning of her reign all St. Louis has marked her every move. Each gracious characteristic has been discussed, and her parties, her gowns and her photographs have been admired and exclaimed over until as the time of her wedding approaches thousands of her former subjects await to watch or read about one of the greatest events in her life.

Yesterday, just after the sun had set, Miss Grace Whitelaw Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace, and consort to his Mysterious Majesty in 1923, became the bride of Marion W. Niedringhaus, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus of 10 Westmoreland place, at a beautiful, stately ceremony in St. Peter's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Dr. Edward Schofield Travers read the service.

It was an all-white wedding, one of the few in recent years. Even the flowers at the altar were devoid of color, and the 11 attendants might have been smart young archangels as they seemingly floated down the aisle in their filmy white chiffon gowns. Miss Janet Wallace was her sister's maid of honor, and Misses Rachel Lee Cuendet, Janet Wallace, Trimble Hoblitzelle, Katherine Steedman, Lucy Terry, Lela Edwards of Pittsburg, Mrs. G. Hayward Niedringhaus, Mrs. William Francis Niedringhaus and Mrs. Asa B. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr. were bridesmaids. Their skirts were full and circular, with the top layer slashed to reveal a dainty design of pearls and crystals embroidered on a chiffon slip. The same design was repeated on the bodice, with its full circular drapery which formed the sleeves. Large white felt hats, with the brim caught up at the side back with a silver-edged velvet rose and white velvet ribbon adorning the crown, completed the costumes, and each maid carried a few loosely gathered deep pink premier roses and maiden hair fern tied with trailing streamers in one hand.

The bride, a tall, slender blonde, looked almost ethereal in the cloud of tulle which enveloped her. Her gown was of satin, with the sheen of old ivory, trimmed with quantities of rose point lace. Made with straight lines, it had long, tight-fitting satin sleeves, with point lace at the hands and a satin girdle from which two uneven panels edged with the lace fell at the front. The lace-edged round neck was cut to a deep oval at the back, the decollete visible through a tulle court with wide satin bindings, which trailed six yards on the floor. As demi-trains, there were nar-

V. P. Queen Guest at Races

THE new Queen of Love and Beauty, Miss Maud Miller Streett, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Streett, was guest of honor in an especially decorated box, known as the Queen's box, yesterday at the races at Fairmount track. Mrs. Streett invited a group of her daughter's friends for a 1 o'clock buffet luncheon, one of a number of small parties which will mark her debut, and later the party motored to the track in four cars. The guests were: Misses Mary Carter Davis, Marion Stoner, Marjorie Little, and her guest, Katherine Stockwell, Elizabeth Hoblitzelle, Josephine Bates, her guest, Helen Abell Conley and Messrs. Jack Gordon, William Brown Goltra, Wayman Whittemore, Thomas C. Hennings Jr., Eugene Hawkins, Arthur Hoskins, Harris Cobb and Eugene Baker.

The Rev. A. C. Powell, D. D., of Baltimore, Md., who married Mr. and Mrs. William R. Compton of 18 Kingsbury place in Bellefontaine, O., years ago, will come to St. Louis to perform the same ceremony for their daughter, Miss Frances Hope Compton, at her wedding to Turner Clarkson in St. Peter's Church the evening of Oct. 22. Dr. Powell is an uncle of Mrs. Compton and will be a guest in their home. Mr. Compton's mother, Mrs. J. R. Compton, of Rockport, N. Y., and Miss Marion Harris of Cleveland also will be among the out-of-town guests.

Invitations Out for Debutante Parties

MISS ELIZABETH CUENDET, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Cuendet of 4 Hortense place, will make her formal bow to society at a tea to be given by her mother, Wednesday afternoon Oct. 28, at their home. The guests will call from 4 to 6 o'clock. Miss Cuendet is a graduate of Mary Institute and the Westover School in Connecticut. She recently returned home with her mother, and her sister, Miss Rachel Lee Cuendet, after traveling in Europe for more than a year. She was a special maid of honor to the Queen at the Veiled Prophet ball Wednesday night.

Miss Jessie Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peyton T. Carr of 60 Vandeventer place, will entertain the debutantes and their escorts at a dinner party at the St. Louis Country Club Saturday night, October 31.

Almost each day's mail carries with it an invitation to some debutante party or other. Among the latest to be received is a white booklet printed in red and blue lettering. The figure of a clown beating a drum, with the word "Come, Wednesday, October 28, 4943 Maryland avenue," decorates the cover, while on the inside is printed an invitation to what bids fair to be one of the most unusual parties of the autumn. The wording is as follows: "Coming! Mr. and Mrs. Richard Simrall Hawes' Great Circus Party, introducing first time in St. Louis Mlle. Susan Elizabeth Hawes, the original and only one of her kind. One night only, Wednesday, October 28. Doors open at 10 p. m., at their permanent arena, 4943 Maryland avenue." And in the corner each guest is asked to wear circus costumes. The young honor guest, who was a special maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball, will have a number of other parties given for her.

Invitations have been received from Mrs. William Maffitt of 4315 Lindell boulevard, for the tea she will give Wednesday afternoon, October 21, to present her niece, Miss Josephine Bates, and the latter's guest, Miss Helen Abell Conley of Fredericks, Md., to the social world, and from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Overton Watts for a dinner at the Country Club, October 24 in honor of Miss Eugenia Edmunds, Miss Katherine McCluney, Miss Elizabeth Douglass and Miss Marion Stoner.

Miss Chouteau Scott, debutante daughter of Mrs. Pierre Chouteau Scott of the Forest Park Hotel, will be honor guest at two parties to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Overton Watts Jr., of 4937 Laclede avenue. Mrs. Watts will give a luncheon for her and later they will have a dinner party at the St. Louis County Club.

Miss Juliette Reyburn, daughter of Mrs. Amadee Valle Reyburn of Lindell boulevard, has chosen Nov. 7 as the date of her wedding to Hunt Benoist. The ceremony will take place at noon at the New Cathedral, and a reception will follow. Mrs. Wilkins Jones will be her sister's matron of honor, and Misses Helen Reyburn, Marian Franciscus, Eleanor Knapp, Katherine Clayes and Ethel Hammond of Detroit, bridesmaids.

IT IS estimated that 70% to 80%, or about three-quarters of the shoe-wearing public, suffer from some form of foot trouble, says the "Boot and Shoe Recorder" (August, 1925).

Are you one of them?

The time to correct most shoe ills, it points out, is when the Shoes are obtained.

By getting correctly made Shoes which fit properly.

Isn't that reasonable? True, anyway. The

The 20th Anniversary Sales

Begin Monday at 8:30 A.M.

SENSATIONAL UNDERSELLING TRIUMPHS YOU WILL REMEMBER FOR ALL TIME

Two hundred thousand dollars in new merchandise will give you an idea of how gigantic the preparations have been for our 20th Anniversary Sales! In extensive preparations and sensational values this event takes rank with the very greatest merchandising celebrations ever held, anywhere at any time! . . Facts and values are our proof!

Our buyers have spent weeks in preparation for these great Anniversary Sales. They have fine-combed the markets. They have fairly pleaded with manufacturers for special values. And the manufacturers have responded magnificently with such sacrifices of profit that these 20th Anniversary Sales bring the very newest, the very freshest and the very smartest apparel at sensational savings. These sales will be long talked about as one of America's foremost demonstrations of value-giving.

Our greatest sale in 20 years retailing! Nothing has been left undone to provide the greatest values St. Louis has ever known. Marvelous coats that we have induced manufacturers to give us so we can give them to you at $48, $68, $98 and $118. And literally thousands of brand new dresses—every one at a special low Anniversary price. You will gasp at those at $18, those at $28 you will find it hard to resist, the $38 selection will enchant you! And as for the rare gems at $58 it will seem to you that we have destroyed every higher priced ticket in existence! And so it goes through the store! Surely the season's very greatest opportunity to save on apparel.

Pages would be necessary to describe the remarkable apparel of all kinds which we have secured for these 20th Anniversary Sales. Only by seeing it can you do it justice. These values will fairly take your breath away—so sensational are they! And mind you, we speak not of a few groups—front row beauties, so to speak! We mean every piece of the thousands and thousands of dollars worth of new Apparel of all kinds with which this sale abounds. Every department overflows with unusual values.

Twenty years of service to St. Louis women has created a great Establishment—an establishment whose size reflects the regard in which Kline's is held by St. Louis women. And how correct this opinion is, is attested to by the fine eastblishments and great patronage enjoyed by Kline's in Kansas City, Detroit and Cincinnati. Mercantile monuments, whose forerunner was a little twenty-five foot store at 509 Washington Avenue twenty years ago! The first year's business is often done now in a single day!

The reason? Just unquenchable ambition has fired us with the determination to make these 20th Anniversary Sales a demonstration of our merchandising power, our ability to provide greater and greater value. In fact, these 20th Anniversary Sales demonstrate why Kline's are PRE-EMINENT as Apparel Specialists, why they are one of the largest ready-to-wear organizations in the United States.

RECENT ENGAGEMENTS AND WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Neville of Wellesley Farms, Mass., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Natalie, to Dr. Samuel B. Grant of St. Louis.

Miss Neville is a graduate of Dana Hall and of Miss Madeira's School in Washington. In September, 1924, she graduated from the Training School for Nurses at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston, and since then she has been traveling and studying in Europe, where she previously had spent three years of earlier school life.

Dr. Grant, who is a son of Mrs. John M. Grant and the late Dr. John M. Grant, is a graduate of Washington University, where he received his B. S. and M. D. degrees. Following his graduation he spent three years in post-graduate study at the hospitals associated with the Harvard Medical School in Boston, and at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Dr. Grant is a member of the faculty of the Washington University School of Medicine, and a member of the staffs of the Barnes Hospital end of the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium.

Of interest in St. Louis is the news of the engagement of Miss Dorothea Sodemann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Sodemann of Los Angeles, formerly of St. Louis, and Howard E. Sproull of Cincinnati, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sproull of Bedford, Ind. The prospective bride resided in St. Louis until a year ago. She is a graduate of Lindenwood College and is the sister of the late Capt. C. J. Sodemann. Mr. Sproull is an alumnus of Purdue and is a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. The wedding will take place in December.

A wedding uniting two old army families took place Friday evening Oct. 2, at 8 o'clock, when the Rev. K. T. Hary of 3634 Juniata street united in marriage Miss Amy R. Miller of 4467 Ashland avenue, and Carlos Francois Bennett, formerly of Cleveland, O.

Miss Miller is the youngest daughter of the late Maj. William H. H. Miller, Ninth United States Infantry, retired, and Mrs. Miller, and the sister of Lieutenant-Colonel Archie Miller, air service (Sixth United States Cavalry) to whom was awarded the congressional medal of honor for bravery and who was killed in the line of duty in 1921.

Owing to recent bereavements in both families, the wedding was quiet, the bride dispensing with attendants. Miss Miller wore some rare jewels, heirlooms in the bridegroom's family, one, a Russian Ikon three inches long, and a wonderful example of early Russian beadwork, which 200 years ago formed the covering of the scabbard of a Russian court sword worn by an ancestor at the coronation of Peter the Great in St. Petersburg. The diamond engagement ring more than 100 years old, is an heirloom in the de Beney family, being his grandmother's wedding ring.

Miss Miller was formerly the wife of William A. Mosberger, who died in 1923.

Carlos F. Bennett is the son of the late Carlos and Lydia Ada (de Sokoloff) Bennett. He is a nephew of the late Nicolas de Sokoloff, who was made Governor of Irkuisk, Siberia, and later placed him in charge of all fire departments in Russia by the late Emperor Nicholas. Through his father, Mr. Bennett is descended from an old American army family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will reside at 4467 Ashland avenue.

Oct. 14 has been chosen as the date for the marriage of Miss Maybelle Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Morris of Geyer avenue, to Richard William Merkle, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Merkle of 2601 Louisiana avenue. The bride is a graduate of Harris Teacher College and Mr. Merkle of Washington University. He is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity. After a home wedding they will tour Wisconsin, visiting Chicago and Milwaukee en route. They will be at home after Nov. 1 at 4146 South Grand boulevard.

The marriage of Miss Catherine Myers, daughter of Frank G. Myers of Webster Groves, and John Frier of Amherst place, took place last evening at the home of the bride. There were 100 guests. Mrs. Frier wore panne velvet trimmed with duchess lace and orange blos-

GERMANS BUY LONDON HOUSE

Embassy Group, to Be Largest of Foreign Nations.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Frederick the Great, who was known as one of the "closest" monarchs that ever reigned in Prussia, probably would turn in his grave if by some means of communication with the spirit world he could be informed that the German embassy in London is to become the largest building group of its kind in the British capital.

The German Government recently purchased another of the enormous houses in Carlton House terrace, next door to the embassy near Buckingham Palace. This building will house the German consulate and other offices of the diplomatic service. This move indicates that present-day Germany, in spite of her reparations obligations and other war debts, has a much higher scale for her representatives abroad than was maintained by Frederick even when Prussia was at the height of her power. Frederick's ministers at foreign courts, it is recalled here, walked afoot or drove shabby old carriages until the axle trees gave way, while even to his highest diplomatic agents at Paris or London the King of Prussia never allowed more than £1000 a year.

GERMANS BUY LONDON HOUSE

Embassy Group to Be Largest of Foreign Nations.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Frederick the Great, who was known as one of the "closest" monarchs that ever reigned in Prussia, probably would turn in his grave if by some means of communication with the spirit world he could be informed that the German embassy in London is to become the largest building group of its kind in the British capital.

The German Government recently purchased another of the enormous houses in Carlton House terrace, next door to the embassy near Buckingham Palace. This building will house the German consulate and other offices of the diplomatic service. This move indicates that present-day Germany, in spite of her reparations obligations and other war debts, has a much higher scale for her representatives abroad than was maintained by Frederick even when Prussia was at the height of her power. Frederick's ministers at foreign courts, it is recalled here, walked afoot or drove shabby old carriages until the axle trees gave way, while even to his highest diplomatic agents at Paris or London the King of Prussia never allowed more than £1000 a year.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—President and Mrs. Coolidge returned from what was practically a second honeymoon journey to Omaha to attend the American Legion convention starting on Sunday, the twentieth anniversary of their wedding and returning on Thursday to find the national capital and all Washington society literally wor.d series mad.

The Marquis Pierre de Chambrun, a member of the French Debt Mission and descendant of Lafayette, has gone to St. Louis, where he will stay for a few days, after which he will go to Cincinnati to visit relatives of his wife, a daughter of the late Bellamy Storer of that city.

Members of the diplomatic colony, Missouri circles and society generally were interested in the marriage here of Princess Bertha Cantacuzene, great-granddaughter of President and Mrs. Grant, to Mr. Bruce Smith of Louisville, Ky. The ceremony was performed in the Bethlehem chapel of the national cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul by the Dean of Washington. A reception was held later at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, on New Hampshire avenue. For the actual ceremony only members of the two families were invited. Princess Ida Cantacuzene was maid of honor for her sister and the bridesmaids were the bride's cousins, Miss Paulina Palmer and Miss Bertha Palmer of Chicago, Miss Edith Grant, Miss Clara Frances Grant and Miss Judith Grant and Miss Alice Mann of Washington. Mr. Floyd Smith was best man for his brother.

Former Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby and Mrs. Colby have returned to Washington after a trip through Missouri. Mr. Colby's native State, for he was born in St. Louis. It was recalled here the other day that the former Secretary of State once acted as counsel for Mark Twain, Missouri's favorite literary child.

Dr. Richard A. Bolt of St. Louis, who is now a lecturer at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, arrived in the national capital last Tuesday to spend a fortnight here in research work at the Library of Congress.

Miss Beasie Parker Bruggemann, chairman of the Employes Compensation Commission, was one of the guests at the dinner given by the women executives of the Government at the little tea house of the Grace Dodge Hotel last week.

The Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis have opened their home in Washington for the winter. Mrs. Davis, who has been abroad all summer and early fall, will be welcomed back to Washington by the little coterie of official women of whom she is the leader.

The resignation of Leigh C. Palmer as chairman of the United States Shipping Board has been of deep interest to Washington society as Mrs. Palmer and her daughter, Miss Bessie McKeldin, a debutante of last year, have been very prominent in the official set here. Admiral and Mrs. Palmer will doubtless remain in Washington even though he has no official position here. Mrs. Palmer and Miss McKeldin recently returned to Washington from a visit in Elkins, W. Va., with Mrs. Arthur Lee. Mrs. Palmer and Miss McKeldin went to New York for one day on Friday to view the Pulitzer air races.

Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and dirtying of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Bobbed Hair

How to Keep it Healthy, Thick, Beautiful!

Modern style in hair dress, particularly constant curling and waving, is slowly burning the color, lustre and very life from the hair, leaving it dry, faded, brittle, streaked with gray; often the hair roots shrink, then the hair falls out fast. A 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" will do wonders for any girl's hair. This vitalizing beauty-tonic acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Try this for one week! While combing and dressing your hair, moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair—the effect is startling! Your hair immediately takes on new life and that healthy, youthful lustre, becomes incomparably soft, wavy and appears twice as thick and abundant.

Exhibition and Sale of Original Paintings

Antique and Modern

FRENCH Canvases—originals, some of which are more than one hundred and fifty years old—executed by French artists of merit, are gathered in a collection appealing to lovers of the beautiful and rare. Individually selected by our personal representative in Europe, the collection presents exquisite studies mellow with age and intriguing in subject. Bits of old-world beauty—glimpses of life in bygone generations—characters unique are themes to capture the fancy of all who behold.

Interesting in treatment and subjects is the extensive groups of paintings by modern artists. Larger canvases, these, on which the brush has convincingly depicted the splendor of a scene at court, the tranquil beauty of ships at rest in London Harbor and other themes, all done in charming manner.

The exhibition is arranged in a manner that invites your leisurely inspection—the only way in which a canvas may be judged and selected. If you enjoy authentic art, decorative in the home, you will find pleasure and satisfaction in this exhibit.

This Exhibit Is Now on View in Our Interior Decorating Salons, Sixth Floor

$2800 PAYROLL STOLEN AT I. C. FREIGHT OFFICE

Seven Employes Forced to Lie on Floor While Robber Batters Open Safe in East St. Louis.

Payroll robbers early yesterday visited the freight office of the Illinois Central Railroad, 308 South Front street, East St. Louis, compelled seven employes of tthe railroad to lie on the floor in an ante-room and forced open a wall vault and an inner safe from which they took $2800 in currency and silver and a number of street car tokens.

Although twice interrupted at their work, which required more than 30 minutes to complete, the robbers made their escape unmolested in an automobile.

An office force is maintained all night at the freight office to check out perishable shipments, chiefly produce, which is claimed during the night by commission merchants. When two young men, both wearing cravanet raincoats, entered the office shortly before 1 a. m. Joseph Huber, chief clerk, supposed they were employes of some commission concern.

Clerk Covered With Revolver.

"Are you calling for some fruit?" Huber inquired.

"Yes, we want fruit," one of the men answered, drawing a revolver.

Huber, three assistant clerks, and F. L. McHugh, a night watchman, who was eating his lunch in the office, were quickly marched into the ante-room and told to lie down. McHugh was disarmed before being placed in the room by the robber displaying the revolver, who then stood guard over the employes. The other robber began an assault on a wall vault with a sledge hammer, and, after 30 minutes' effort, succeeded in knocking the combinations from the vault and an inner safe.

The money obtained by the robbers was to have been used yesterday morning in paying yard employes of the railroad. It was received at the freight office last Thursday by express and placed in the wall vault. During the time the robbers were at work a negro messenger and yard employe came to the office and were ushered into the ante-room by a third man, apparently a lookout. The negro, Albert Hall, and the other man were made to join Huber and the others on the floor.

One Suspect Arrested.

Police were notified immediately after the robbers' departure and began a general search, in the course of which they arrested James Michaels, alleged Cuckoo gangster, who recently moved to East St. Louis. Michaels was ordered held when $280 in silver and currency and 27 street car tokens were found in his room at 305 South Eighth street, East St. Louis. He denied knowledge of the crime and none of the persons held up were able to identify him.

'HEIRESS' IN NEED WAS A MAN AND HE GOES TO JAIL

St. Louisan, Passing as Woman, Who Must Marry to Get Estate, Held for Using Mails to Defraud.

HAD ADVERTISED IN "MARRIAGE BELLS"

Frank Admissions of Walter H. Allen That He Was "Broke" Lead to Early Arrest.

"Marriage bells" didn't ring for "Wallie," but that wasn't "Wallie's" fault. All that advertising for a husband in a matrimonial paper could do, "Wallie" did. But the bells did not ring out.

The nearest to their ringing was a tap—the tap of a postal inspector on the shoulder of Walter H. Allen, 39 years old, of 805 North Fifteenth street. "I want you," said the inspector.

Allen was wanted on complaint of a former State Superintendent of Instruction of Delaware, on complaint of a New York business man and on complaint of various and sundry others who had answered "Wallie's" advertisement in "Marriage Bells," which is a matrimonial newspapers published in Connecticut. The complaints explicitly charge the use of the mails with intent to defraud.

Posed as Beautiful Heiress.

He had posed, he has admitted, as a beautiful heiress, who, through the advertising columns of the matrimonial newspaper, was seeking a husband.

It wasn't hard for Allen to pose as a beautiful young woman. He offered in evidence as to youth and beauty newspaper pictures, printed in rotogravure, of St. Louis Veiled Prophet maids. The pictures he had carefully clipped from the newspaper and mounted on cardboard.

The advertisement had prepared the way for the pictures. It said that "Wallie" was 24 years old, the heiress to a 500-acre farm and $5000, and that, under the terms of a will, she must marry by Oct. 15 or lose her money.

The New York merchant read, and the 500 acres of Missouri land looked good to him. He wrote to learn a bit more about "Wallie."

By next mail came the rotogravure picture. There was a letter also, scribbled in lead pencil.

If it meant anything, it appeared to mean that "Wallie" was most willing.

"I must hurry; excuse my lead pencil," it read. "I'm sending you my picture. I'll be a sweet, loving, little wife, true to the end.

"I am a minister's daughter," it continued, "but jolly and full of fun. I sing in the choir and love the theater. I must marry by Oct. 15 or lose my money and my farm. You can save this for me and share in it."

Then came the would-be bride's blushing confession.

"I'm financially embarrassed," said the letter, "so could you send me $35 for railroad fare so I can come to New York and marry you?"

A frank, and open question. So open that the New York merchant thought he'd talk it over with postal inspectors. So also thought the former State Superintendent of Instruction of Delaware. But before he did he had written a letter to "Wallie" which set forth to a cent his own bank balance. Romance might have its place in the story, but good business was to be represented, too.

The postal inspectors looked up the renter of the postoffice box in St. Louis to which all replies were directed. It was in Allen's name. Inspectors waited until he came to call for his mail and tapped him on the shoulder.

Allen admitted having sent the letters. He told inspectors he had not received a cent. He said he had been making a living by distributing handbills from door to door. The Florida fever caught him. He needed money "for investments to make him rich." So, having read of some Omaha man's success in getting money from gullible males by posing as a heiress who wished to wed, he tried the advertising plan.

There were plenty of would-be wooers. But the cash, he said, did not materialize.

Mantell, Penniless At 44, "Came Back" As Classical Actor

Tragedian, Who This Week Bids Farewell to St. Louis, Once Plunged From Darling of Broadway to Obscure Barnstormer.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

IN bidding hail and farewell to Robert Bruce Mantell this week at the American, St. Louis theater-goers will also say their adieus to the crafty and majestic Cardinal Richelieu, tigerish Louis XI and meandering King Lear. Other actors will sustain our acquaintance with Hamlet, Romeo, Macbeth and Shylock, but those three roles have been without rivalry Mr. Mantell's. Years may pass before they revisit the glimpses of the stage.

This the veteran assures us, is the last of his innumerable tours, which, in their time, have covered the United States to the minutest of tank towns. Statistics confirm him. He is in his seventy-second year, his forty-ninth as an actor and his fortieth as a star. During that protracted period he made two separate reputations—first, as the prime romantic actor of the day; and second, as a classic tragedian whose Lear won from William Winter, the intimate of Forrest, Booth and Irving, an accolade of praise as "the leader of our stage." The second phase of his career followed that bitter day in Philadelphia, when, at the age of 44, he found himself with a single half dollar in his pocket and debts of $10,000.

First Played "Louis XI" Here.

HIS activities have frequently impinged upon St. Louis. His first visit to this city was in 1879, as leading man to Mme. Modjeska. In his diary he noted that "St. Louis is a very important city. Some say that the population is larger than Chicago." On Nov. 6, 1901, during his first adventure as his own manager, he undertook here the premiere of a play called "The Louisianian." Both his leading women took ill, and he wired to New York for an actress. She arrived just as the curtain was to go up, and went on at once, having dressed in her stateroom. The stage manager, who had gone to the station to meet her, rushed in later, exclaiming that the train had come but the actress was not on it. "She's been playing for two weeks," rejoined Mantell.

His first performance in Casimir Delavigne's "Louis XI" occurred in St. Louis on Nov. 6, 1903. It was a member of the company headed by Margaret Anglin, which christened the Municipal Theater in Forest Park during the fall, and on that occasion played for the first time the role of melancholy Jacques. And it was in this city, on Dec. 13, 1901, that he negotiated a compromise in legal proceedings which had exiled him for 10 years from New York and plunged him down from the darling of Broadway to an obscure and impecunious barnstormer. This transaction led to his resurrection as an actor, and to his historic emergence at the Princess Theater, New York, in "Richard III."

Father an Inn Keeper.

THE future tragedian was born Feb. 7, 1854—according to his biographer, C. J. Bullett—at the village of Irvine, in Ayrshire, the country of Robert Burns. His mother was Elizabeth Bruce, and, as all Scots of that name, she traced her lineage to Robert Bruce. His father was James Mantell, an Englishman, who had risen from a waiter to a tavern keeper.

A visitor to Mantell's hostelry, the Wheatsheaf Inn, was Phineas T. Barnum, who, until driven out by the irate villagers, enticed their customers by exhibiting "the famous horse with its tail where its head ought to be" and "the great Red Indian Picture." The one was an ordinary horse reversed in its stall, and the second was a huge capital "C" painted in crimson. Barnum took the 3-year-old Robert on his lap and pronounced the dubious prophecy: "Some day, my lad, you'll be a great showman, too."

When the child was 5 years old his parents removed to Belfast, Ireland, and here the Scotch youth acquired a rich Hibernian brogue. After several turbulent years at school, where he learned nothing, he was expelled from one institution after another and gained some local celebrity as a runner and pugilist, he was apprenticed to a liquor dealer—recalling David Garrick's occupation as a wine-seller.

While serving his apprenticeship, Mantell began taking lessons in an elocution class. Here, finally, was something he could learn. Recitations given in public and the organization of a dramatic club in Belfast led to his first stage appearances in various amateur productions, and to his decision to make acting his profession.

Four of 15 Orchestral Programs Lack Soloists

FOUR of the 15 pairs of regular concerts to be given this season by the Symphony Orchestra will be without soloists, by way of a compromise between the usefulness of individual artists as box-office reinforcements and the cultural view that soloists, and particularly singers, have no place on symphony programs. The latter idea is consistently practised by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

However, there is a particular form of composition, the concerto, which has no opportunity for a hearing except at symphony concerts. The concerto calls for an orchestra and a solo instrumentalist. In recognition of this fact, the Symphony Society has engaged nine instrumental players for appearances with the orchestra—five pianists, three violinists and one violoncellist. There are only two singers, but these are luminaries of the operatic firmament—Mme. Florence Easton, dramatic soprano, and Clarence Whitehill, Wagnerian baritone. Both are members of the Metropolitan.

Key and Finger Boards.

THE pianists engaged are E. Robert Schmitz, an exponent of modern music and also a redoubtable player of Bach; Josef Hofmann, one of the sovereigns of the keyboard; Rudolph Ganz, director of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra; Miss Myra Hess, eminent English pianist, and a newcomer in this country, Walter Gieseking of Berlin, who has been hailed as a successor of Liszt.

The violinists will be Albert Spalding, an American artist of distinction; Joseph Szegeti, a Hungarian, who is making his first visit to the United States this season, and Michel Gusikoff, concert master of the orchestra. H. Max Steindel, also of the orchestra, will be the sole violoncellist presented.

Soloists and Their Dates.

THE list of concert dates and soloists is as follows: Nov. 6 and 7, orchestral program; Nov. 13 and 14, Florence Easton; Nov. 20 and 21, H. Max Steindel; Nov. 27 and 28, E. "Hay Fever" Is Sneezed At by Critic

Premier of Noel Coward's Comedy Points Moral That Author Often Fails as His Own Stage Director.

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.

RECENT events, both grave and gay, have renewed in me a dark suspicion that a play is likely to be better off when its author is sternly banished from the theater at the first rehearsal and forcibly kept out until after its first performance.

Then, as a preliminary to his reunion with his masterpiece and on the familiar principle of the hot-and-cold-bath therapy, he might first be uplifted by access, over his rolls and coffee, to that portion of the morning "American" in which Alan Dale has described his play as "a swell li'l drammer for the gells to read up in the Bronnix."

Next he should be immediately plunged into the icy depths of Percy Hammond, who, in the "Herald-Tribune," will doubtless have denounced it tranquilly as "a measly and frenetic charade." Thereafter, it will do no great harm to the play if he sneaks in and watches a performance of it.

Optimist and Pessimist.

AS THE American theater at present happens to be constituted, its playwrights are a far brighter and more discerning lot than its producers, but I take it that any playwright is too nervously involved in the scenes he has dreamed and set on paper, ever to recapture enough detachment to realize whether or not the company engaged is making his dream come true there on the lighted stage.

Mind you, the danger is not that such a playwright will necessarily be too fond and oblivious a critic of its performance. As often as not the peril lies up just the opposite road. No, your harried author broods over the rehearsals and writhes at the performance with his hopes and his fears rather than with his judgment.

If his be an optimistic soul, the performance may go wildly askew and yet his own hopes will see there on the stage only what he had wished to see from the first. Having dreamed, perhaps, a shy, dewy, virginal little heroine, he does suffer a slight twinge of misgiving when he discovers at the first rehearsal that the producer, for old times' sake, has engaged for the part some opulent, blowsy, improbable and middle-aged blonde. But before long, the invincible optimist will mentally recast the part and thereafter see in the performance only what he had wanted to see in the first place.

If, on the other hand, his be a pessimistic soul, he will attend every rehearsal in such an agony of apprehension that the company will find him as easy and helpful an audience as a spectator torn with the toothache.

"The Butter and Egg Man."

SUCH contrasting responses were both amusingly in evidence on the night that "The Butter and Egg Man" began its prosperous career at the Longacre. That is George Kaufman's gay and sagacious comedy of the show-shop in which Gregory Kelly is giving so artful and ingratiating a performance.

It is, within itself, a hilarious anecdote about the production of a play. The second act, at once harrowing and unforgetably comic, unfolds in a hotel room on the opening night of that play in Syracuse. It is with a compassionate heart that you watch the innocent youth from Chillicothe, O., who has been induced to invest all his little patrimony in the impending play's production.

He bustles about happily, struggling with his dress tie, nursing his silk hat, ordering the supper to be served to the rejoicing troupe in his rooms after the premiere, even commanding the illicit champagne in which bumpers will be drunk to celebrate its certain success. Yet you, and everyone else, sense that the play will be an almost historic disaster.

Sacred Innocence.

THE curtain falls to indicate a lapse of a few hours. When it rises again, the play has opened and closed. Its antique leading lady has gone down for the third time. Such Syracusans as had not already sneaked out into the night remain only to boo. The members of the company, the stage manager, the producer—they can no more than crawl back to the hotel.

But not the young Butter and Egg Man. Not the lad who has so staked his all on the success of the piece that there is simply no room in his mind for the evidences of failure. Not that incorrigible optimist. Not he. He comes whistling cheertully back to the hotel, trots happily to the closet to hang up his coat and put away his rubbers and then fairly beams

Russians to Offer Novel Version of "Carmen"

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.

As a result of cable negotiations since his return from Europe early last month, Morris Gest announces that he has completed arrangements with Vladimir Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, co-founder of the Moscow Art Theater, whereby the Moscow Art Theater Musical Studio will open its first and only American engagement, limited to seven weeks at a theater yet to be determined, with a gala premiere on Monday evening, Dec. 14.

The profound and lasting impression made by Stanislavsky and his associates of the Dramatic Company of the Moscow Art Theater is indicated by the fact that the entire committee of patrons in connection with its two seasons in America enthusiastically agreed to serve in the same capacity for the Moscow Art Theater Musical Studio.

In view of the broader scope of the new company, however, several important new names from the musical world have been added to the list. The committee as announced consists of Otto H. Kahn, honorary chairman; Mrs. Vincent Astor, George Pierce Baker, Mrs. August Belmont, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Paul D. Cravath, Walter Damrosch, John W. Davis, Mrs. Newbold Edgar, Mrs. Marshall Field, Giulio Gatti Casazza, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Thomas Hastings, John Grier Hibbon, Arthur Curtiss James, Frederic A. Juilliard, Thomas W. Lamont, Clarence H. Mackay, Mrs. Charles E. Mitchell, Dr. Eugene Noble, William Lyon Phelps, Frank L. Polk, Edward Robinson, Leopold Stokowski, Mrs. William Straight, Augustus Thomas, Mrs. Henry Rogers Winthrop and Mrs. H. P. Whitney.

Repertory of Five Productions.

IN the course of the limited New York season, the Moscow Art Theater Musical Studio will give its entire repertory, consisting of the 5 productions it has made since its opening in May, 1920. In all likelihood the five productions will be given at intervals of a week, in the same manner as the repertory of the dramatic company of the Art Theater.

The repertory includes Lecocq's "The Daughter of Madame Angot," Aristophanes' "Lysistrata," with music on Greek themes by a modern Russian composer, Reinhold Gliere; "Carmencita and the Soldier," with the Bizet music for "Carmen" and a wholly new libretto drawn direct from Merimee's story by a Russian poet, Constantin Lipskeroff; Offenbach's "La Perichole," and a triple bill from Pushkin, entitled "Love and Death," featuring Rachmaninoff's short opera, "Aleko," and including also Arensky's "The Fountain of Bakhchi-Sarai" and Gliere's mimodrama, "Cleopatra."

The original stage settings for all these productions, which have set the entire Russian theater into discussion, will be brought intact with the company. Among these settings will be represented the work of Maria Gortinskaya, Pierre Kontchalovsky and Isaac Rabinovitch. The last, particularly, through his designs for "Lysistrata" and "Carmencita and the Soldier," has pointed the way to a new and revolutionary stage architecture, marking a departure from the realistic methods of the artists associated with the Art Theater's dramatic company.

Executives and Cast.

AMONG the leading players in the company will be Olga Baklanova, who had her training and served her novitiate in the Art Theater's dramatic company. Other figures will be Vladimir Lossky, one of Russia's celebrated regisseurs in lyric drama and a well-known character actor and singer; Leonid Baratoff, another assistant to Nemirovitch-Dantchenko as the regisseur's staff, and an eminent comedian; and Ivan Velikanoff, who appears in many leading roles opposite Baklanova.

The company, which includes a total of 105 persons, will bring its own conductors, Vladimir Bakaleynikoff and Constantin Shvedoff, and its own chorus-master, Yelena Skatkina. Notable in the executive staff will be the presence of Yakoff Gremislavsky, called the greatest living master of make-up who has been associated with the Moscow Art Theater since its foundation in 1898. The administrative staff will be headed by Dr. Sergei Barthenseon and Dr. Leonid D. Leonidoff, who served in a similar capacity with the dramatic company during its two seasons on the American stage.

The Leningrad season of the company is now drawing to a close, and preparations are under way for transferring the personnel and productions to Berlin, where a season of 20 performances will begin in the middle of October. Nemirovitch-Dantchenko will arrive in advance of the company to conclude all vital arrangements for the season here.

Blind Organist to Play Here.

Dr. Alfred Hollins, blind organist of the Free Church of Edinburgh, Scotland, will give a recital at the Third Baptist Church on Dec. 2. He is the first of a series of artists to be invited here during the season by the Missouri Chapter of the National Association of Organists. Dr. Percy B. Eversden of St. Louis was named State President at the recent national convention in Cleveland.

leading member of Augustin Daly's company in New York, was wont to relate years afterwards that the very worst actor he ever saw was Mantell at this period.

However, he was a youth of handsome face and figure, long curling blond hair and a pair of brilliant eyes which still retain much of their splendor. Alice Marriott employed him to play King Richard in a production of "Ivanhoe" at Liverpool, and his success led to an engagement to support Mme. Modjeska during a tour of the United States, at a salary of $25 a week, which was then a princely emolument. His American debut occurred at Albany, N. Y., on Nov. 18, 1878. He took the role of Tybalt in "Romeo and Juliet," and won the star's approval by appearing in his own fair curls instead of the traditional black wig. "You are charming," said Modjeska. "You are a stunner, and should not be killed."

Stage Superstition.

IT was on this occasion that he first played under his own name. Out of deference to his mother's prejudices, he had acted in England as Robert Hudson. However, he did not bill himself as Robert Mantell. This name consists of 13 letters, and to avert the luckless omen, the actor listed himself then and ever afterward as Robert B. Mantell.

Returning to England, Mantell married the first of his four wives, all of them actresses. Her name was Marie Sheldon, and she was his evil genius. Prior to the crash, however, Mantell played juvenile leads to Dion Boucicault and Marie de Grey, created his first leading role in America, that of Sir Clement Huntington in "The World," and suddenly found himself involved in a blaze of glory as a result of his performance of Loris Ipanoff in Sardou's "Fedora."

As leading man to Fanny Davenport in this production, which occurred at the Fourteenth Street Theater, New York, on Oct. 1, 1883, Mantell was pronounced by an enthusiastic lady to be "the handsomest figure that ever greeted a feminine eye." Offers of engagements rained upon him, and one, made by Daniel Frohman, included the almost fabulous salary of $10,000 a year.

Star Since 1886.

THIS was his last appearance in support of a star. Thereafter, and until today, he has himself been a star. His stellar debut was made at New Haven, Conn., on Sept. 16, 1886, in "Tangled Lives." Thereafter came the plays which established him throughout the length and breadth of the land as a romantic actor. These were "Monbars," in which he played a French pirate; and "The Corsican Brothers," a dramatization of Dumas' thrilling novel.

The turning point came when Mrs. Mantell obtained a divorce in New York, with an award of $100 a week alimony. The actor paid a few installments, and then fell behind. He was adjudged in contempt of court and a warrant was issued for his arrest. Ten years passed before he was once more permitted to cross the borders of New York State. By that time the back alimony, with interest, amounted to the imperial figure of $60,000. By means of the St. Louis compromise, the actor was able to settle the matter forever with a cash payment of $10,000.

But first he was to fall into almost total eclipse. There was scarcely a town in the country so small that at one time or another it didn't have a view of the fallen star. Nadir was reached in 1898 at Rockford, Ill., where the company disbanded, and Mantell's share of the cash remnant was $10. He got to Philadelphia with only 50 cents, and then despised vaudeville came to the rescue. It was considered a disgrace for a legitimate actor to appear in the varieties. But Mantell's sensations of ignominy were soothed by his first week's salary, which was $800.

Subdues a Stage Crew.

LIKE most actors of those ambitious and lamented days, Mantell had always hankered after the classics. He had stealthily tried some of them out in obscure towns — "Romeo and Juliet" in Dayton, "Othello" in Reading, "Hamlet" in Troy, and so on. So it happened that, on his reappearance in New York, he had the hardihood to undertake his "comeback" with "Richard III."

None of the critics who hailed his performance as an event of the American stage was aware that he was simultaneously fighting another battle. The property men at the Princess were enraged because he refused their demand for a scenery rehearsal, and determined to wreck the performance. One and then another "accidentally" tripped back-stage, lunged against the drop and nearly struck the actor from his feet. The third time Mantell thrust a dagger through the curtain, stabbing a would-be assailant in the thigh.

When he went off stage he sent to his dressing room for an iron-studded gauntlet which he wore in the last act. Brandishing this weapon, he announced that he could fell an ox with it, and that he proposed to brain the next man who attempted a disturbance. Thereafter peace and quiet reigned.

Married to Fourth Wife.

SINCE that night of triumph, Mantell has ranged up and down the land at the head of his own company, upholding the old standards in a day given over to musical comedy and revue. He has had a penchant for marrying actresses in his company and making them his leading women. So it happened with his second and third consorts, Charlotte Behrens and Marie Booth Russell, both of whom died; and so it also happened with the present Mrs. Mantell, who, as Miss Genevieve Hamper, got a job as "extra" girl with Mantell's company in Detroit some years ago, and won a regular appointment, though she had never before been on the stage.

Mr. Mantell has himself remarked that "No one is competent to play Hamlet before he is 50, and then he is too old for the role." Many of us in late years have not found ourselves wholly able to esteem his Hamlet or his Romeo, but we shall long remember, with admiration and gratitude, his Richelieu, his Louis, his Shylock and particularly his Lear. We proffer a respectful salute to the battle-scarred warrior in the cause of good, and a hope that his first genuine vacation will endure long and happily.

CRITIC SNEEZES AT "HAY FEVER" FOR ITS ASTHMATIC DIRECTION

on the crestfallen actors as they drag themselves up to his room. And the sight of his innocence is, I think, one of the most touching things I have ever seen in the theater.

"The Butter and Egg Man" itself is a resounding success. Fantastic prices are asked by the speculators for its better seats. Even at the second performance, hundreds were turned away from the complacent box office. No signs of this were wanting on the opening night. The first audience fairly howled with laughter and entered so eagerly into the spirit of its slender plot that when the Butter and Egg Man triumphed at last, there were salvos of applause as at the melodramas on the Bowery long ago.

Mr. Chaplin's Hysteria.

I KNOW that even I myself gave vent to a smile from time to time, and that those sitting next the great Mr. Chaplin were in some fear that they would have to lead him out, so enraptured was he with Mr. Kelly's performance. so hysterical did he grow during the tremendous complications of the final act. If ever a playwright received notice that the work of his hands was being welcomed by an audience, that playwright was George Kaufman on the night that "The Butter and Egg Man" opened.

But Kaufman's is a pessimistic soul, and up in the gallery that night he glowered down on the unconscious company. He glowered and fidgeted and even maddened his neighbors by getting up to pace up and down. His ears were deaf to the laughter, his critical sense alive only to the shortcomings in the performance. While the audience stood after the final curtain to applaud, he came downstairs, went blackly back-stage to assure the company that the piece was a failure, and then staggered home wrapped in impenetrable gloom—a pall which began to lift only after the box office statement of the first week's receipts.

Plague of "Hay Fever."

WHEREFORE, I doubt if Mr. Kaufman will ever be a good director of his own comedies; and I doubt, too, if Noel Coward should ever be allowed near the theater where one of his pieces is being produced. Among the 14 new plays proffered to New York this week, none was more arousing than his "Hay Fever." For, of course, in any week nowadays when 14 new plays are being produced in New York, at least one of them is sure to be by Michael Arlen and another by Noel Coward.

Five of the Coward plays have been published and I have read them all. The best, I think, is "Hay Fever," yet, at its first night in our town, it was not so much performed as violently assaulted. It had been clumsily and execrably directed throughout, and in its central role so adept an actress as Laura Hope Crews was permitted to give one of the most disastrous performances I have ever seen in all my life. I looked hurriedly at the program to learn the name of the director Mr. Coward would presumably take out into the street next day and strangle to death. And I noticed that the piece had been staged by Mr. Coward and Miss Crews in collaboration. Between them, and with only the best intentions, they slaughtered "Hay Fever."

I WILL feel more comfortable the next time I attend a performance by Miss Crews if I have some assurance that her instinct and taste has been subjected during the rehearsals to revision by someone other than herself. For Mr. Coward, as a playwright, I have hearty admiration and the highest hopes. Of Mr. Coward, as an actor, I know only that he has been on the stage since he was a mere tot and that in his play, "The Vortex," in a role tailored to his measure with almost low cunning, he gives a superb performance. Of Mr. Coward, as a director, I know only this—that he leaned on and revered Mr. Basil Dean. Now, after "Hay Fever," I know also that, like most authors, he ought never be allowed near the rehearsals of a play of his own.

"Hay Fever" avoided the stampede of new plays by tiptoeing into town on Sunday night, giving its first performance before an invited audience that included everyone of importance in the theater who can still walk. It has been meanly said that there was more acting in the aisles than on the stage that night. At any rate, Miss Crews looked down into a first row dotted with such personages as Walter Wanger, Ethel Barrymore, Elisabeth Marbury, Elsie De Wolfe, Michael Strange, Francois de Croisset and so on and so on. And thus it went all the way to the uttermost reaches of the house. It has been suggested that the reek of celebrity from the auditorium threw the expert Miss Crews off her balance, but after all every first-night audience is something like that.

The "Buccaneer" company at its premiere bore up splendidly under the strain of playing before Gov. Smith, Louis Mann, Dr. Frank Crane and Eddie Foy all in one night, and when Mr. Cohan returned to the stage on Monday in his own acutely unimportant little comedy called "American Born," he must have been constantly aware of the sedate amusement with which his performance was being followed by an alert playgoer of 13 who sat in the stage box and whose name, I learned later, was George M. Cohan Jr.

I half hoped that his youngster would make the curtain speech at the end of the play. He need have done no more than rise in his seat and begin: "My father thanks you....." to have brought down the house in a tornado of fond and happy laughter.

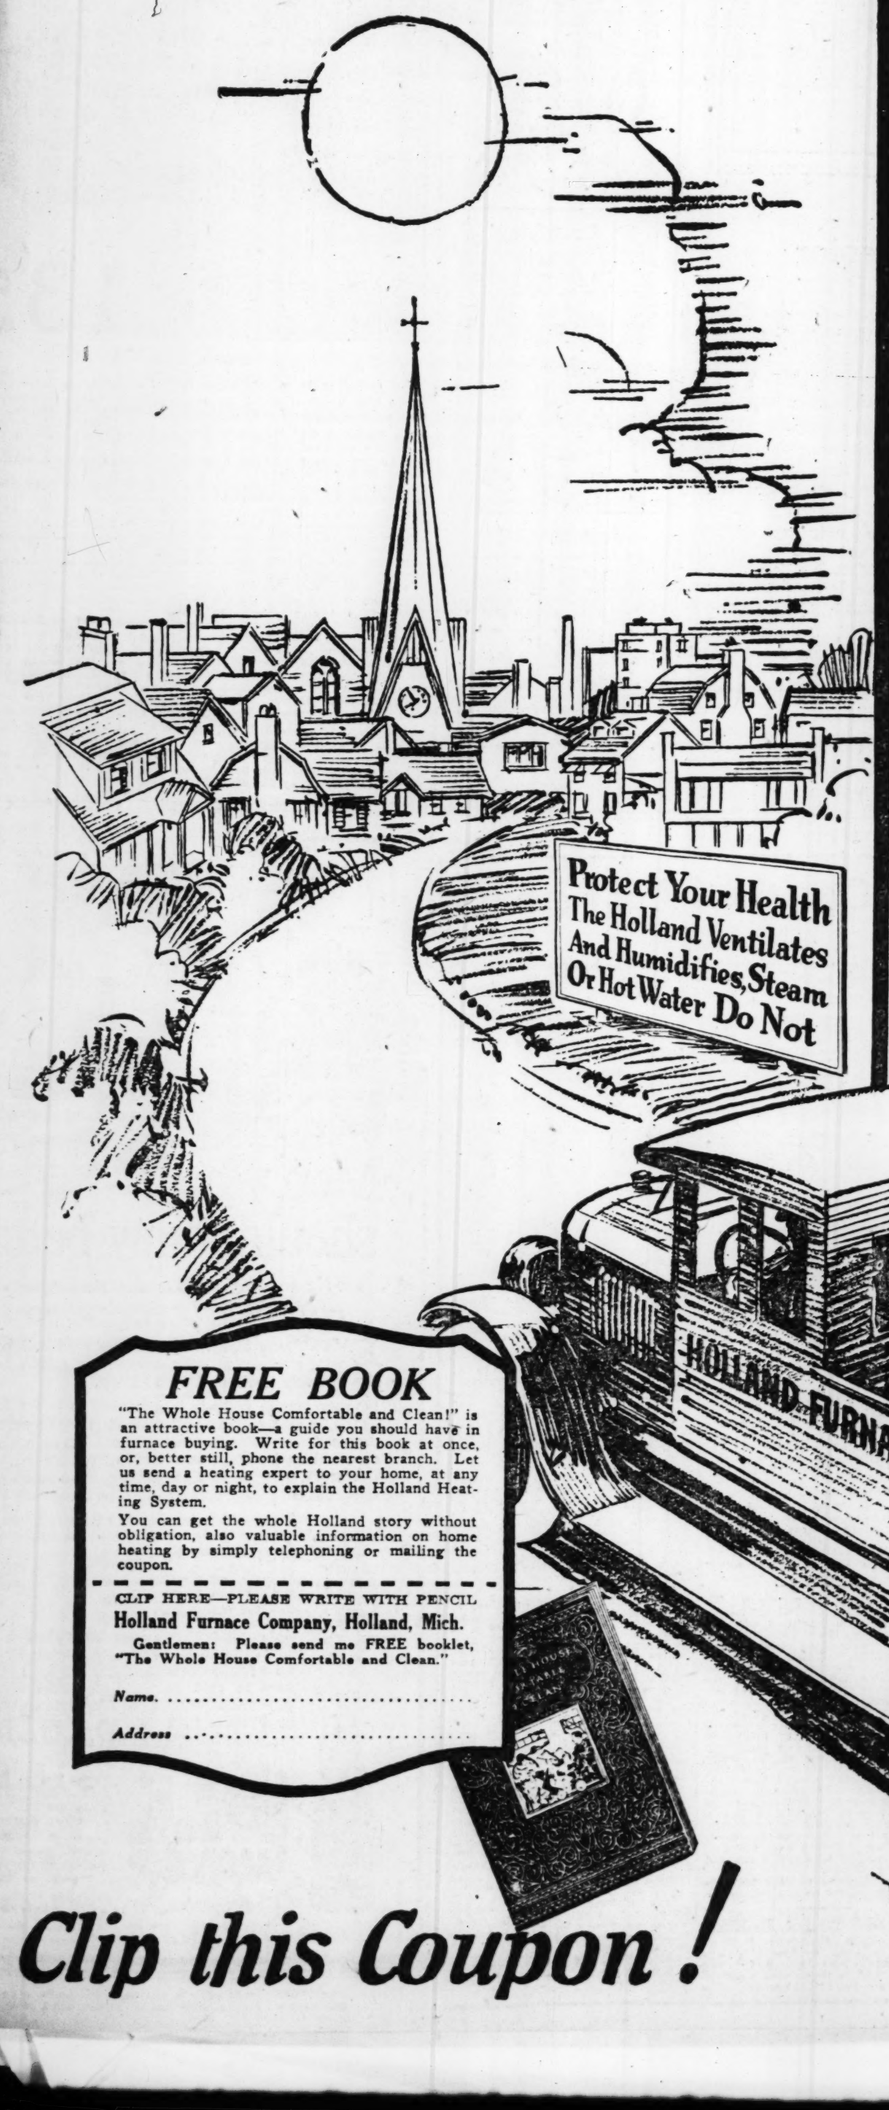
Buy the Holland Heating System because of its Record

"The sun has risen unfailingly for countless ages—a record of constancy. And so, having the record, the world has faith in the sun."



There are a few employers who believe that they can judge a man entirely by appearances—shape of head, or manner of walk—or by the answer to some trick question. But the wise employer asks for a true account of what a man has accomplished. And whether it be a man, an automobile or a heating plant, the record is all that one can use as a positive basis for confidence. Nothing is fairer than that the world should ask any man or any product to make a record. And then let the reward for the record be confidence. And let confidence bring success.

"Nothing Succeeds Like Success," of course.

Every time a thousand families are added to the great list of Holland Users a thousand new records are made, and it is from these success records that our business is multiplied.

This company began business only eighteen years ago—and in a very small way. Yet, today it is by far the largest concern of its kind in the World.

Your Home Comfort Positively Guaranteed

Just as you'd expect, you get a guarantee covering the Holland Heating System which more than equals that of any other furnace. 100% factory installation makes that possible.

But what is more important is that you get a POSITIVE GUARANTEE covering the comfort of your home. That is what you pay your money for—comfort.

What good is a furnace that will last—a grate that will not burn out—unless the temperature of your home, the circulation, and humidity are all correctly provided for?

With the Holland you have an abundance of clean, warm, moistened air constantly in circulation. The installation as well as the furnace is right.

And there is no heating system of any description that provides more heat with the same amount of fuel.

The Holland burns soft coal just as efficiently as hard coal. The Holland burns ANY fuel.

Ask any Holland Man to show you the proof. Ask him for the names of users conveniently near by. And don't fail to let him show you how moderate the cost of a Holland Heating and Ventilating System will be for your own individual home.

Perhaps you will find the simple, new Holland Humidifier one of the most interesting features of all.

Why not get Holland Comfort NOW with 20 months to pay.

SAYS SHAKSPEARE IS LIKE ROCK ON WHICH NEW IDEAS BREAK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—"Plus fours" and blank verse do not mingle well, Sir Martin Harvey, famous as a Shakspearean actor, has declared in reference to the production of "Hamlet" by actors in modern attire at a London theater.

Sir Martin, addressing members of the British Shakspeare Society, had little to say in commendation of the costuming of the productions of Shakspeare's plays in the dress of the present day. In regard to the recent production of "Hamlet" he expressed sympathy with the ideas of the producer, admitting that some of the classical dramas become hackneyed, but the Bard of Avon, he declared, was a rock against which new ideas broke. He said "Hamlet" in modern attire could be regarded only as an interesting, but not artistic, experiment.

HERE AT LAST IS REAL RELIEF FROM EXCESS FAT!

Silph Reducing Chewing Gum—

latest scientific discovery takes New York by storm—Everyone is chewing it and POUNDS of FAT ARE ROLLING OFF!

No longer need you suffer from excess fat. No longer need you be humiliated by sarcastic looks or remarks. No longer need you starve yourself to distraction or tire yourself out with exercises. With Silph Reducing Chewing Gum, the latest and most wonderful discovery ever made, every man, woman and child can today safely, quickly and easily reduce. Silph Reducing Gum is the result of years of scientific study and experiments—it is different from anything ever advised to take off FAT. It is simple, safe, cheap and easy. It is almost like telling you to eat candies to reduce. It is just as pleasant and as harmless.

Silph Reducing Gum is not a drug nor a laxative—it contains juice extract of sea plants known for years to possess wonderful reducing properties but until now it was impossible to obtain sufficient quantities of these plant extracts to supply a public demand. Today a group of scientists have found a way to obtain it and to incorporate it in a delicious, refreshing chewing gum. When mixed with the gastric juices, through the flow of saliva it eliminates fat forming elements in the system—at the same time it is great for stomach or intestinal trouble. The quick and amazing results already obtained with Silph have simply been overwhelming. Silph sells for 50 cents a box, enough for one week, at all good drug stores. Remember that to "CHEW SILPH IS TO BE SYLPH-LIKE," that's New York's latest slogan.

"I am the shadow of my former self," writes Mrs. N——, beautiful Brooklyn girl. "Silph Reducing Gum is wonderful!"

In case your druggist is out of Silph you can get it from the Silph Medical Co., 9 W. 60th St., N. Y. City. Silph sells for 50c per box, or two full weeks' supply, $1.00. On sale at any of Spockart Bros., Enderle's, Walgreen Drug Stores, Wolff-Wilson's, Krauson Bros. or Johnson Bros. Drug Stores.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

Silph is the name of the original and genuine reducing gum, THE ONLY ONE WE PERSONALLY GUARANTEE TO BE SAFE AND HARMLESS.

DECREASE IN AUTO DEATHS IN ST. LOUIS

From July 1 to Sept. 30 There Were 35, or 23 Less Than in Same Period Last Year.

Thirty-five persons lost their lives in motor vehicle accidents in St. Louis during the period July 1 to Sept. 30, according to records compiled by the St. Louis Safety Council. This number is 23 less than the number of persons killed in motor accidents during the same period last year.

The total number of automobile fatalities here in the period Jan. 1 to Sept. 30 this year was 120, as compared to 123 last year. The decrease of two deaths for the nine-month period was accomplished despite an increase of 19 deaths during the first three months of this year over 1924. The notable decrease in automobile fatalities in the three-month period, July 1 to Sept. 30 this year is attributed by officers of the Safety Council to the education of the public to the dangers of reckless automobile driving and "jay walking," and to stricter law enforcement and better law observance.

In addition to the fatal motor accidents there were 13,218 other motor vehicle accidents reported between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30 this year. This is an increase of 933 over the number reported in the same period last year. Remedial recommendations by the Safety Council include continued education of both motorists and pedestrians, unrelenting activity on the part of police and Police Court Judges, and the sustaining in the Court of Criminal Correction of sentences imposed in the Police Courts.

BERLIN HAS MOST MODERN OPERA HOUSE IN GERMANY

Charlottenburg Theater Taken Over by the Municipality and Renovated.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—Berlin now boasts the most modern opera house in Germany. The Deutsches Opernhaus in the Borough of Charlottenburg, which last spring went into receivership, has been taken over by the city and so renovated as to make it the equal in mechanical appointments of any similar building in the world. It was opened with a performance of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," attended by the Mayor and the City Council. Mayors from other cities and representatives of the Reich and state governments. Bruno Walter, well-known in America as an orchestral conductor, is general musical director.

The lighting arrangements of the made-over theater are especially noteworthy. From a battery of 120 searchlights any color of the rainbow can be thrown on the stage. Eight men are required to handle the lights alone while another battery of lights directly above the curtain illuminates the stage so that no shadows are visible to the spectators. The stage floor is constructed in four parallel removable sections which enable stage hands to set scenes in advance.

As a democratic measure flower decorations and other adornments are equally distributed through the galleries and the orchestra.

The Berlin municipal opera promises to be a worthy sister to the state opera and the Kroll Opera, both operated by the Prussian Government. Public approval of the new city enterprise is shown by the fact that all season tickets, reserving 60 per cent of the capacity of the house, have been subscribed for.

LONDON PLAY REPRESENTS THE MESSIAH AS WOMAN

"Fires Divine" Drawing Much Comment in British Capital—Written by Woman.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—"Fires Divine," a play in which the Messiah is represented as a woman, is drawing much comment in London. Miss Maude Royden, the well known preacher, and many other prominent women have given their approval of the performance.

The play is a theosophical melodrama in which a young woman works many miracles and finally ascends with her lover to heaven. The first performances were private and the play was much pruned before the general public was admitted. In the original version the young woman and her lover were killed by a bomb and made their ascent on high in view of the audience. This was eliminated, and the murdered pair are now supposed to make the ascent off stage.

Mrs. Rosalind Rossmer, the author, does not pretend to be an experienced playwright, but she says the play is merely the expression of a great thought and resents the disposition of men to claim a monopoly of the Holy Spirit. She says there is no sex in soul and God does become manifest through women.

Lady Grey of Falloden is one of the backers of the play, which also has the support of Lady Lutyens the wife of the architect of the Cenotaph.

Permanent Yiddish Stock Co.

St. Louis is to have a permanent Yiddish stock company this season, with performances each week at the Odeon. It consists of a cast of 14 actors from New York, a chorus, a ballet and an orchestra. Dramas and musical plays will be produced. The troupe's second offering, an operetta entitled "A Home for Mother," was presented last night.

New Opera for Tamaki Miura.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Mme. Tamaki Miura, Japanese prima donna, whose fate it has been to sing in nothing but "Madame Butterfly" for many years, now has a new vehicle. It is a grand opera entitled "Namiko San," and it was composed by Aldo Franchetti. It will be produced by the Chicago Civic Opera Co. in December, and is to be staged by Sassue Hayakawa, Nipponese movie star.

FOUND SOLUTION TO HER PROBLEM

For Years She Was at a Loss for Something Which Would Relieve Her Constipation, Stomach and Kidney Trouble Until She Found Herb Juice.

MRS. L. SAUNDERS

"It certainly is a pleasure to know that there is relief for sufferers from constipation, nervousness, stomach and kidney trouble such as I have suffered for a number of years, and though I could never find anything to help me. But I have learned that relief can be had and health enjoyed through the use of your great remedy, Herb Juice," said Mrs. L. Saunders, who resides at 8943 Burton avenue, St. Johns Station, Mo., when she called to interview the Herb Juice man a short time ago.

Continuing, Mrs. Saunders said: "No one knows what I have suffered with my stomach, to say nothing of my kidney trouble and constipation. I was nervous—yes, very nervous—as I guess most every one is who is bothered with gas on the stomach and indigestion. I had no energy and spent many restless nights. Nothing I could find ever gave me the slightest relief from these ailments. It seemed that I just couldn't get the seat of my trouble. One day a friend of mine told me of the wonderful relief she had obtained through the use of Herb Juice. I decided to try a bottle. Before I had finished my first bottle I felt that it was all that it was recommended to be. Not only have it destroyed my constipation but my bowels into better condition than they have been in years. In fact it has relieved me of the trouble and that nervous stomach trouble. I never suffer any more from that bloated feeling after eating which was caused from gas. I have lots of energy now—in fact more than I have had in years, and I just feel like a new person. I am proud to make this statement in hope that some sufferer will try Herb Juice and be benefited greatly as I have been. And I feel that no matter how much I praise it I cannot say enough for it."

Hundreds are now calling daily to see the Herb Juice man, who has established headquarters at Judge & Dolph Drug Co., 814 Washington avenue, giving statements for publication and praising Herb Juice, that their friends may be induced to try the great remedy which is relieving so many sufferers in St. Louis.

Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolone, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

Mrs. McK. R. writes: "Our family has used Mentho-Laxene for coughs and colds for many years and think it the best. My oldest son is afflicted with rheumatism in muscles, and I am asking you for a remedy which might help him."

Answer: I suggest that your son try Cardiol tablets to help in relieving the system of the acids and poisons which cause his trouble. Where the pain becomes agonizing also take 3 grain Su-thol Tablets.

W. D. asks: "Two years ago I had a sickness and have never been strong since. I catch cold easily and often. I am nervous, don't sleep well and seem to be weak, tired and full of aches. Am thin and pale with cold hands and feet. What do you think would help me?"

Answer: Many who have gone through a siege of sickness or surgical operations are beset with an anemic condition of the blood, causing much distress and symptoms which may be corrected by the aid of Cadomene tablets as a blood and nerve tonic to be taken regularly for several months if necessary.

R. K. B. asks: "I have backache pain, and I tire easily and am quite pale and not much ambition. What do you recommend?"

Answer: I suggest Balmwort tablets for relief of the kidney and bladder irregularities, to be taken in conjunction with Cadomene tablets as a general system tonic.

Mrs. D. L. A. asks: "I frequently have painful little pimples on my tongue and seem to be bilious, which causes severe headaches. Have a bad breaking out between shoulder blades which itches and nearly drives me frantic. Have been troubled with boils, too. Can you help me?"

Answer: Begin taking three-grain Sulpherb tablets and continue taking regularly as a laxative blood and skin medicine. To relieve headache use 5-grain Su-thol tablets.

M. C. D. asks: "Will you please tell me of a good fat reducing treatment? I am much too large in arms, shoulders, stomach and hips."

Answer: I suggest you adopt the calorie system of diet. Arbolone tablets are very effective in most cases, and being a non-secret formula, are very widely used by intelligent, cultured people.

Mrs. V. G. asks: "I have a large family and many relatives, too, so that almost every day we have need of a remedy to stop some kind of pain such as toothache, neuralgia, headache, grippe and rheumatic pain also. Is there safe pain remedy free from habit-forming drugs?"

Answer: Yes. Scientists have found a simple formula which is very quickly effective in the relief of such pain, and it leaves no weakening after effects. Ask for 5-grain Su-thol tablets (pronounced soothe-all); inexpensive; with full directions.

O. M. M. asks: "What is good to loosen up stiff, sore joints? Ordinary liniments don't help me."

Answer: The peculiar pain-relieving quality of Mentho-Laxene Salve is widely used and gives very quick relief after anointing any painful spot.

Mrs. K. L. B. asks: "My children, age 6 and 8, are often subjected to spasmodic croup every week or two in winter and spring. Then they cough and cough night after night. Please advise a remedy."

Answer: Use essence Mentho-Laxene and triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve. The former used as per directions is generally quickly effective, stopping the coughs due to colds and the wards off repeated colds and coughs which culminate in spasmodic croup. Apply the Salve to chest and throat, lightly, twice daily.

Answer to Miss P. J.: I have repeatedly recommended plain yellow Minyol to correct scaly troubles, such as falling hair, itching scalp and dandruff. Many grateful persons testify to its goodness.

NOTE. For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method. The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit-forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist. Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book, "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to anyone sending ten cents (coin).

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

FARMINGTON, MICHIGAN: Mrs. R. S. Perry, R. R. 2, Box 136, writes: "For nearly two years was in a very run-down condition. Could not sleep, no appetite, irritable and at the least bit of noise or excitement, could scream, because of my nerves. I had tried many things to no avail, when a lady advised me to try Cadomene. Have taken two boxes and can truthfully say that I have not felt better in two years. Can eat anything, sleep well and no noise bothers me. Have gained 6 pounds and everybody notices the great change in me, etc."

ROSE CREEK, MINN.: Geo. B. Smith, Box 48, writes: "I have been troubled with a bad case of dandruff and falling hair for some time, and after using several varieties of scalp and dandruff remedies to no avail, I ordered plain yellow Minyol and I am highly pleased with it as a scalp treatment. In my experience Minyol is the only one that has given me relief. Yours, etc."

LAWRENCE, MASS.: Stanley Glotch, 52 Woodland St., writes: "Before using Casca Royal Pills my bowels moved only once in two days and my stomach seemed to weigh a ton. It is great relief. Also used Mentho-Laxene Salve and it took just one day to get rid of a bad cold. I never used anything half so good, as this Salve for a cold. I think every person should have one of your Health and Beauty Books, etc."

Men who should know better are the worst offenders against the simplest laws of health. Why pneumonia gets them.

EVERY year about this time we read and hear of fatal sickness striking apparently robust people. But we only know part of the story.

No man whose body is in condition to resist disease ever gets pneumonia or other serious cold weather ailments. It is the man who thinks he is as healthy as others think he looks—the man who believes he can overwork, overeat and undersleep, who looks lightly upon the dangers of constipation—he is the easy victim.

Your protection this winter should be Pluto Water. Take it the moment you feel out of sorts. Gently but thoroughly this safe water physic flushes away the poisonous intestinal waste that robs the blood of vitality and disease resistance.

Let others entrust their health to the "maybe" cathartics. When you need a physic, take Pluto Water and get action in 30 minutes to two hours' time. Prescribed by physicians, sold by all druggists and bottled at French Lick Springs, Pluto Water is real cold weather health insurance.

When "Tired Feeling" Hangs on—Beware of Chronic Fatigue

In thousands of cases that continual weak, tired, wornout feeling, which rest doesn't banish and sleep doesn't correct—is an almost sure sign of debility due to chronic fatigue.

Don't confuse chronic fatigue with the ordinary "healthy" fatigue you feel after hard work. Ordinary fatigue is natural. But chronic fatigue—the serious kind—comes from within. Your nerves, muscles, organs, etc., have become debilitated and cannot function properly. This condition, if not corrected, may lead to far worse.

To conquer chronic fatigue you must get at its cause—in the blood. As you know, it is your blood that supplies nourishment to all the nerves, muscles and tissues of your body. And doctors say that it is almost invariably when your blood is thin and pale, lacking in sufficient organic iron, that you become run down and suffer from that miserable tired feeling, weakness, nervousness, dizziness, palpitation, headache, backache, poor appetite, etc.

In this condition what you need is to strengthen your entire system by getting more organic iron into your blood. But don't take the old-fashioned mineral iron medicines, which many doctors now say do little good. Take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the organic iron in your blood and like that in spinach and lentils. Unlike ordinary mineral iron, it will not injure the teeth or upset the stomach. Furthermore, being like the iron in your own blood, it is quickly assimilated and begins at once to put strength into feeble muscles, new life into exhausted nerves, and good, healthy color into pale, sallow faces.

Take Nuxated Iron for just two weeks and you'll be astonished how every weak, tired feeling vanishes and you feel stronger and better in every way. Money back if not improved. At all good druggists.

Simple Home Mixture Darkens Gray Hair

Cincinnati Barber Tells How Any One Can Prepare It in 5 Minutes.

Any man or woman can easily look twenty years younger by simply darkening their gray, faded, or streaky hair. This is now easy to accomplish with a recipe given by a well-known Cincinnati barber.

Simply take a half-pint of water, add one ounce of bay rum, ¼ ounce of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound. Shake and it is ready to use. These ingredients can be bought at drug stores at trifling cost.

Applied to the hair twice weekly this delightful mixture quickly gives the desired shade. It is easy to use, is not sticky or greasy, will not color the scalp and does not rub off.

CELTIC STRAIN BLOOMS IN "THE DEBUTANTE"

Second Portrait by Haskell Coffin Displays Another Kind of Beauty.

With a hint of Celtic blood in the face of his "The Debutante," Haskell Coffin, one of the most popular of American portrait painters, challenges his own theory that America is producing a distinctive type of beauty. Post-Dispatch readers who saw in his "The Out Door Girl" of last Sunday an evidence of the theory's truth may well pause before the second portrait he contributes to that symposium, which is reproduced today in another part of this newspaper as a partial answer to the question which arose when Flo. Ziegfeld out of 400 London applicants could pick but one beauty to be placed as an English rival to the American girls of his "Follies."

Through the movies and in life most of us are familiar with the Spanish type, the Italian type, the Hebrew type, the French type, the German, English and Irish types of beauty. Whether, as American beauty has budded and blown we have familiarized ourselves with the American type and would recognise it is another question.

But even though a trace of Celtic ancestry betrays itself in the "Debutante" through the red gold hair, the frank blue eyes, and the tip, tilted nose that accident of blood need not shatter the painter's belief in his theory. There are, down in the Carolinas where Haskell Coffin comes from, those whose ancestors fought in the Revolution, yet were of Celtic blood. And after all it is the admixture of the different racial strains which is producing, to the artists' eyes, a new and independent type of beauty. One is not less American because a hint of blood betrays an ancestor of pre-Revolutionary times, and the piquant beauty of the features of Mr. Coffin's "Debutante" but serves to emphasize the portrait's charm when imposed upon a background as of antique red velvet, and with the scarlet evening coat the sitter wears.

It is then evident that in this portrait the painter has not with his brush denied the challenge of his theory. Other artists represented in those eight ideal portraits from New York's autumn exhibitions which, taken together, attempt to answer the question with brush and pigment may have something else to offer in their painted comment, for it is a subject over which there has been violent debate in many studios by portrait painters and illustrators. Meantime, readers of the Sunday Post-Dispatch who have written this paper protesting that Mr. Coffin is all wrong, or asserting that his theory is correct, will watch with interest for the next of the series to be reproduced next Sunday.

KING'S WHISKERS ALONE ARE SACRED IN ENGLAND

All Other Chin Decorations in Danger Since "Beaver Game" Became Popular.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 10. George's whiskers may be but all other bewhiskered England are in danger. "beaver game" was p several years ago in th halls, the public has little r for chin decorations. And the police force has practically issued an ultimatum that men who wear whiskers do so at their own risk.

It is true that an unruly listener at Hyde Park corner was fined for pulling the whiskers of a speaker with whom he had a religious discussion, but the fine was very slight and the smiles in the courtroom indicated clearly that officers and spectators alike agreed there was contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff.

Anybody in London whose whiskers are not extremely closely cropped is likely to be dubbed a "beaver" by street urchins who shout after him and may shy some bricks. As the Hyde Park orators frequently have long hair as well as long whiskers which afford an inviting hand hold, policemen are hard put to restrain listening crowds, to which the flowing hair acts as a red flag to a bull.

PRINCE OF WALES TERMED PORRIDGE 'BEASTLY STUFF'

Thought He Was Dodging It in Naval Service but Found It on the Table.

OXFORD, Sept. 21.—The Prince of Wales did not like porridge any better than thousands of other children who make wry faces over their oatmeal in spite of all the Scotch manufacturers can do to popularize it in the British Isles.

In an address before the Industrial Welfare Society, Mrs. M. A. Cloudesley Brereton told an anecdote of the prince's youth. On his last morning at home before he was to go into the naval service, when the porridge was set before him he said: "Well, thank goodness there is one thing about going into the navy. I won't have to eat this beastly stuff every morning of my life." But to the surprise of the prince his first breakfast in the navy began with stiff porridge handed about in wooden bowls. He knew what his duty was when he saw the knowing look exchanged by the two senior officers, and swallowed the inevitable oatmeal.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured in One Day by Use of Virex, Formerly Known as Rattle Snake Oil.

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. M. Lopez, a Pennsylvania man, says: "I used the treatment at night before retiring. The following morning I could hear the 'ticklings' of the alarm clock that I was unable to hear before. Now my hearing is restored perfectly after many years of deafness."

Mr. Ben Jackson, who lives in Indiana, says: "Before I used Virex I could hear nothing. After ten days I could hear my watch tick."

Angeline Johnson, a Mississippi resident had been stone deaf for eighteen years. She says, "Virex has stopped my head noises, and I can hear the train whistle 2½ miles away."

Roy Fisher, Iowa man, says, "I hadn't heard a watch tick for seven years—now I can lay my watch on the table and hear it plainly."

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Oklahoma, says, "After being deaf 25 years, I used your treatment only a few days and hear fairly well."

Mr. Anthony Chapman, of Michigan, says, "The terrible head noises have stopped entirely and my hearing is practically back to normal."

Deaf Baby Now Hears.

Mrs. Ola Vest, of Arkansas, says, "My little boy, now 5 years old, had been deaf since about 4 months of age. Now he hears very well and is learning to talk."

Mr. Mather Pelleys says, "My young son, deaf for years, has used Virex for only three days and he hears almost as well as ever before."

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and Canada. The prescription which is known as Virex, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that Virex will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatment to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2.00 treatment for only $1.00, by collect on delivery mail, to test, delay free trial. If the results are not satisfactory the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Dale Laboratories, 2115 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.

Save the Drunkard

Sunshine vs. Moonshine

(Written by a woman who saved her husband from the drinking evil)

My man is very good to me,
So loyal, kind and true.
He never comes home really drunk,
As other husbands do.
But sometimes, when he's "got too much,"
I wish that I were dead;
For there's no sunshine in my heart,
When moonshine's in his head.

Some folks can laugh at such a plight
Of some poor drunken fool,
To me there's naught but aching hearts
And pity for Satan's tool.
And, when he's had just "one too many,"
I fear that we must part;
For when there's moonshine in his head
There's no sunshine in my heart.

Within the garden of my life,
Love bloomed in every thought,
But now I fear 'tis wilting fast,
And love must come to naught.
I pray before it is too late,
He'll think how oft I've said,
"There's no sunshine in my heart, dear,
When there's moonshine in your head."
* * * * *
I read the book "The National Curse"
Sent me by Dr. Haines,
And used the "Golden Treatment"
To break the galling chains.
The splendid manhood underneath
Is freed from Satan's snare,
Since there's no moonshine in his head,
Our hearts have sunshine there.

I gave the powder secretly,
He never even knew;
Oh, woman do the same today,
The act you cannot rue.
Our lives are very different,
Since that first ad I read;
In our hearts are floods of sunshine,
And no moonshine in his head.

Save those near and dear to you from a life of degradation, poverty and disgrace. You can do it by cutting out this coupon

The drunkard will stop drinking without knowing why.

HAVE YOU HALITOSIS?

Unpleasant breath—Halitosis—as the medical dictionary terms it—may arise from various causes. It may be due to fermentation of food particles lodged between the teeth or in neglected cavities—to a generally diseased condition of the mouth or tonsils—tartar deposits—inflamed gums—uncared-for bridges, or to such minor causes as smoking or neglect of the tooth brush.

In the first place, Listerine used daily as a mouth wash or gargle, full strength or diluted, affords relief through its agreeable and efficient deodorizing properties. It immediately purifies the entire mouth.

ANCESTRAL ESTATES ON REALTY MARKET IN ENGLAND

Burden of Taxation Is Cause of Active Change in Ownership of Large Properties.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Great slices of England are changing hands every month, and owners of family mansions, whose forefathers would have been aghast at the thought are placing their ancestral homesteads in the hands of real estate agents for sale. It is said by experts that 1925 will be remembered among other things for "the great shuffle of property in the "shires" and in recent months nearly 50,000 acres belonging to old estates have been disposed of in eight sales.

The burden of taxation, heavy death duties, higher interest rates on mortgages and highest costs of maintenance are among the principal reasons for these changes of ownership, and whereas the old county families are unable to meet their present day expenses, some of the newly rich are able to step in and secure bargains.

In many cases large estates have been split up, enabling buyers to obtain possession of small farms and villages or portions of fairly large towns. It is no uncommon thing for a real estate broker to dispose of £8,000,000 ($38,400,000) worth of property in three months and one large West End firm is credited with having sold 2,000,000 acres in the United Kingdom in less than seven years.

Will Study Porcelains and China.

The art section of the Wednesday Club will make a study of porcelains and china at the first fall meeting of the club at 10:30 a. m. next Wednesday. Moving pictures illustrating the manufacturing processes in the production of china will be shown. Following 12:30 luncheon Prof. John J. McGeoch of Washington University will address the educational section of the club on the "Newer Aspects of Psychology."

WARNS AGAINST FAKE STOCK SALE SCHEMES

Manager of Better Business Bureau in Radio Address From KSD.

"The axiom, 'once a sucker, always a sucker' is worked to the limit by oily-tongued individuals," said H. W. Riehl, manager of the St. Louis Better Business Bureau, in a radio talk on get-rich-quick frauds, from Station KSD (Post-Dispatch) Friday night.

"Persons who have at one time or another purchased fake stocks or become the victim of one of the tricks, are known as 'suckers,'" Riehl explained. "Now the term 'sucker' is not necessarily a term of ridicule. It simply tells stock gamblers that you have the speculative germ, the gambling instinct, the fatal weakness so essential to the realm of high finance. In other words, if you bit on a highly speculative venture once, that you probably will bite again.

Names Are Kept.

"If you have ever bought stock in any company which has since passed out of existence, your name is carefully treasured by these men and turned into a common pool in such centers as Chicago and New York. There, all of these names including your own are carefully classified with name and address, the kind of stock you previously purchased, whether you are a one-dollar, ten-dollar or hundred-dollar sucker, whether you fall for mining schemes, oil schemes, automobile and tire promotions, mechanical monstrosities, or any of the other tempting bait upon which fraudulent stock schemes are based.

"It is commonly known among financial pirates that they can go to one of these places and buy so many suckers in St. Louis and its surrounding territory or in any other territory, at so many dollars per hundred.

Stockholder Lists Sold.

They buy and sell your name, among hundreds of others, just like so much cattle.

"Remember when you invested that $100 in the No-Name Oil Co. down in Oklahoma? How the company went into the hands of a receiver, and your stock became absolutely worthless? Several years later you received a very beautifully written letter from New York, or Chicago, or Texas, or California and you wondered how this man got your name. Nine chances out of 10 when the oil company down in Oklahoma went broke the stockholders' list of that company was sold at a price to the compilers of sucker lists.

Many Kinds of Schemes.

"I wish I had time to tell you about the many kinds of schemes which we come in contact with in our organization, about the fake lot schemes, fake fur peddlers, work-at-home scheme, enlarged picture scheme, suit and furniture clubs, fake auction sales, mail illtests, etc., or, in the financial field, blind pools, reloading and merger schemes, bucket shops and all of the various artifices employed by the nimble-witted to suck the life blood out of thousands of savings accounts all over the country.

"The officials of the Postoffice Department estimate the annual toll paid by the American public of these gentlemen who live by their wits reaches the monumental sum of between $700,000,000 and $1,000,000,000. Practically this entire sum is contributed by those persons who buy spurious stocks. The worst thing about these crooks is that they usually give you nothing in return for your money except a lot of glorious promises and highly ornamental stock certificates."

$1200 FOR BOY SCOUT CAMP

Clarence H. Howard Gives $600 at Meeting to Raise Fund.

Clarence H. Howard spoke before the South Side Lions Club, Thursday noon, at Anschuetz Mission Inn. Howard, with Paul D. Brown, Harry F. Schollmeyer and W. J. See, spoke in behalf of obtaining a Boy Scout camping ground for St. Louis scouts.

A resolution was passed to buy such a site within 15 miles of the city, and $600 was subscribed by the members of the Lions Club. Howard then gave an additional $600. A campaign will be conducted for additional funds.

DULL HEADACHES AND BILIOUSNESS

Poisons that are not properly carried out of the system and are reabsorbed by the blood often cause many distressing, and sometimes dangerous, disorders. Mrs. Jeanette S. Carneale, of Elevon, Va., tells below how she suffered from such disorders and how she learned to obtain relief from them.

"I have suffered from constipation," says Mrs. Carneale. "I get in such bad condition sometimes that I do not know what to do. My head aches with a dull kind of ache, and I get bilious.

"I have found Black-Draught to be the best relief for this I have ever tried. We have come to depend on it in my family as a family friend. Black-Draught is very convenient to take. I take half a spoonful in cold water as long as I need it and it is the finest regulator for the bowels.

"I used to have regular attacks. I suffered with very bad gas pains. I had a full, swollen feeling through my stomach. Sometimes I would even faint, they would get so bad. Now, when I feel myself getting the least bit constipated, I immediately begin the use of Black-Draught.

"I have given it to my children and grandchildren. Everybody here takes it, from the littlest to the biggest. Sometimes my granddaughter eats too much and this is followed by a sour stomach. She runs at once for the Black-Draught. I am glad to recommend it."

Thedford's Black-Draught is a pure, mild, vegetable, product of nature. It is made only of medicinal roots and herbs that have been carefully selected, and then scientifically combined in clean, up-to-date laboratories. It contains no dangerous, or harmful, mineral drugs.

Black-Draught acts gently on the liver and bowels, helping them to rid the system of poisonous impurities and then aiding them to return to their normal healthy state. Price 25c. JA-10

ANNIVERSARY OF GREAT SPEECH BY BENTON

His Famous "There Is the East; There Is India" Speech Was Delivered in St. Louis.

The following article was compiled by Floyd C. Shoemaker, secretary of the State Historical Society of Missouri:

This week commemorates the best known and possibly the greatest speech delivered on Missouri soil. The date was Oct. 16, 1849. The place was the old Courthouse in St. Louis. The subject was a railroad to the Pacific. The orator was Thomas Hart Benton. The keynote struck by a master hand was these words: "There is the East; there is India."

The national railroad convention of 1849 was sitting in St. Louis. Its purpose was to select a route from the valley to the Pacific. Waterways, the economic salvation of the Middle West, were in their heydey of glory and service, but could not meet the new condition. The ports of China had been thrown open in 1843 to world commerce. The rich trade of the Orient was waiting exploitation.

Significant events characterized this fourth decade of nineteenth century history in America. Texas had been annexed. The Oregon country had been added. The close of the Mexican War had brought under the flag a domain stretching to the Pacific, and the North and South were deadlocked over dividing the spoils. Cholera had ravaged the land and taken its thousands in St. Louis. And gold had been discovered in California. But the West was "more interested in the Pacific Railroad than any other subject of the time." It was this subject which drew 339 delegates from 12 states to the St. Louis railroad convention of 1849.

Three Routes Proposed.

Four rival routes were before the nation. The northern route was to cross the continent from Lake Michigan to Puget Sound. The southern route was to connect Memphis with San Diego. The central, or Benton route, ran from St. Louis to San Francisco. The compromise, or S. A. Douglass route, had its eatern terminus at Council Bluffs, with privately built branches to Memphis, St. Louis and Chicago. All were to be built with Federal aid.

Benton, the greatest statesman west of the Mississippi, was rounding his famous six Roman lustrums in the United States Senate. He had dominated the Democratic party in Missouri for nearly 30 years. His hold on her people was almost without parallel. The peer of Webster, Clay and Calhoun, he stood out as a great national leader from a Western border state.

On the second day of the convention, Senator Benton was loudly called upon. Despite the undercurrent of rivalry among the delegates, the great statesman was greeted with "rapturous applause." Benton wisely refrained from openly urging the central route, although his appeal for a Pacific railroad was bottomed on the St. Louis line. His speech, which brought the convention "up to the highest pitch of enthusiasm and was greeted with great applause," closed with these words:

"Let us rise to the grandeur of the occasion. Let us complete the grand design of Columbus by putting Europe and Asia into communication, and that to our advantage, through the heart of our country. Let us give to his ships, converted into cars, a continued course unknown to all former times. Let us make the iron road, and make it from sea to sea—states and individuals making it east of the Mississippi, the nation making it west. Let us now rise above anything sectional, personal, local. Let us beseech the National Legislature to build the great road upon the great national line which unites Europe and Asia—San Francisco at one end, St. Louis in the middle, the national metropolis and great commercial emporium at the other; and which shall be adorned with its crowning honor—the colossal statue of the great Columbus—whose design it accomplishes, hewn from a granite mass of a peak of the Rocky Mountains, overlooking the road—the mountain itself a pedestal and the statue a part of the mountain—pointing with outstretched arm to the western horizon, and saying to the flying passengers, "There is the East; there is India."

Seal Rupture With a Quarter

Now you can throw away forever steel bands, chafing leg straps and other heavy makeshift devices. For a well-known American scientist has found a new easy way to support rupture assisted by means of a wonderful little invention weighing less than 1-25 of an ounce. Not only do you do away with the objectionable pressure and tight strapping, but you eliminate the "coming down" of rupture—when running, straining, exercising, sneezing, etc.—which too frequently leads to strangulation. So great has been the success of this wonderful device that it is being offered to ruptured people for free inspection. GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Almost Perfect Road — Ideal Scenery—Easily Reached by Motorists From St. Louis.

MOTORISTS who wish to traverse an almost perfect road, furnishing virtually every variety of scenery, rich in historic interest, where fish and game abound, and the wild, sparsely settled conditions of Revolutionary days exist, will find almost ideal the 450-mile stretch of paving known as the Susquehanna Trail, connecting Niagara Falls with Washington, D. Never is this stretch of road more attractive than at this time of the year, when the dark green of laurel and hemlock, and the black and gray of basalt and granite contrast with the gorgeous scarlet and blood-red and gold which the October forests put on for the tourist among the mountains of New York and Pennsylvania.

Susquehana Trail Gorgeously Beautiful in October

LOOKING NORTH FROM SUNBURY, ON THE SUSQUEHANNA TRAIL

RIVER VIEW FROM SUSQUEHANNA TRAIL

MOTORISTS who wish to traverse an almost perfect road, furnishing virtually every variety of scenery, rich in historic interest, where fish and game abound, and the wild, sparsely settled conditions of Revolutionary days exist, will find almost ideal the 450-mile stretch of paving known as the Susquehanna Trail, connecting Niagara Falls with Washington, D. C. Never is this stretch of road more attractive than at this time of the year, when the dark green of laurel and hemlock, and the black and gray of basalt and granite contrast with the gorgeous scarlet and blood-red and gold which the October forests put on for the tourist among the mountains of New York and Pennsylvania.

The Susquehanna Trail is easily accessible to motorists from every point of the compass. For St. Louis motorists there is a choice of two routes. Probably the better is over the National Old Trails through Indianapolis, Columbus and Uniontown, to Hagerstown. The Trail also can be entered at the north end by way of Indianapolis, Columbus, Cleveland, Buffalo and Niagara Falls, and from there through Batavia, Avon and Coshocton.

Tourists from here who wish to return from New England or New York points via the Susquehanna trail may go through Binghamton and Elmira to Corning and then south.

St. Louis tourists who are in Virginia and wish to return over this trail may, after leaving Washington, go either via Baltimore and York, Pa., or direct through Frederick and Gettysburg to Harrisburg, Pa. This latter route takes the tourist at once onto historic ground, following, as it does, the route of the Confederate Army which met defeat at Gettysburg in the summer of 1863. Almost the entire distance is dotted with monuments commemorating heroic deeds, while the battlefield of Gettysburg, now a National Park, is well worth a visit.

From Gettysburg the route traverses one of the loveliest and most fertile farming regions in Pennsylvania for 36 miles to Harrisburg, the State capital since 1812, and once known as Louisburg, in honor of Louis Seize, King of France. The tourist desiring to break the monotony of motor travel by sightseeing will find much to cause him to linger in Harrisburg for a day or more. Its splendid Capitol building is adorned by paintings by Abbey and Oakley and statuary by Barnard, while it has 1100 acres of parks, three golf courses and a waterfront changed into a garden.

At Harrisburg, the trail enters the Susquehanna Valley, traversing it for more than 100 miles. In all the distance the valley is never more than a few miles in width, and often narrows into gorges where, as at Bald Eagle Range, the mountains rise abruptly from the water's edge 1000 to 1500 feet. Here for miles the motor highway follows the route traversed by the Southern tribes of Indians on their trips to the council seat of the Five Nations at Onondago, and later by soldiers in the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars.

After leaving Harrisburg, the trail clings for 15 miles to the eastern bank of the river, past the Kittatinny Mountains and to Rockville, whose almost inaccessible crest once bore the Indian Fort Hunter. Duncan's Island is passed, and then, just before reaching the old-time covered bridge to the western river bank at Clark's Ferry, the motorist needs must pause, arrested by the glimpse across the river of a valley so lovely that he knows instinctively, without consulting his guidebook, that he is looking at the far-famed "blue Juniata" where it enters the Susquehanna, 150 miles from its source. So beautiful is the valley, so primitive the surrounding hills, so wildly lovely the whole setting, that the tourist, sitting there in the warm October sunshine, almost expects to catch a glimpse of "bright Alfarita" or of the snowy plumes of her bold warrior lover, or to hear a snatch of her gay song.

The trail here crosses to the western bank, and continues four miles to Buffalo Valley, famous in pioneer history. From there on the mountains are frequently broken by little valleys, every one rich in historic interest.

On the hills of Selinsgrove, 26 miles farther north, are to be seen the buildings of Susquehanna University, founded in 1858. Near here is Penn's Creek, the scene of repeated Indian massacres during pioneer days.

At Sunbury, the north branch of the Susquehanna River enters from the Wyoming Valley, another valley made famous by the Indian massacre in which "Queen Esther" of the Senecas, reputed great-grand-daughter of Count Frontenac, is said to have tomahawked 14 victims in revenge for the killing of her son in a fight with white settlers.

At Sunbury, the trail once more crosses the river and continues up the West Branch Valley, and from here every mile is marked by in-

Rickenbacker

A • CAR • WORTHY • OF • ITS • NAME

"Caviar to the general" perhaps—but 'tis The Car for the Connoisseur

There's no gainsaying the fact that not all motor car buyers appreciate those distinctive qualities which are possessed only by Rickenbacker Automobiles—Sixes and Vertical 8's.

Ordinary persons—the general crowd—do not appreciate superfine workmanship nor super-performance.

So, while it is perhaps true that the finer phases of performance which distinguish this car from those of the average run are "caviar to the general"—it is for that very reason, the accepted "Car of the Connoisseur."

The sweet silence, the effortless ease with which its tremendous power is applied—the quickness of acceleration and the amazingly smooth, yet rapid de-celeration—these are qualities which are appreciated only by the elect—whose past experience has been with fine automobiles.

One must have a high standard for comparison if he would appreciate the superlative degree of performance attained by Rickenbacker cars.

Your average motorist is satisfied with the type of car which we in the trade term an "iron horse."

If you are one of these—if the gait, the visible effort and the audible shuffle of a draft-horse suffices for you—then you would not fully enjoy this thoroughbred.

If, in a word, you are satisfied with mediocrity either in construction or performance—then a Rickenbacker is not for you.

If price is the sole consideration—if you are impressed by mere bigness and bulk and weight—then you would derive no joy from holding the wheel of this light, lithe, silent, super-powerful thing.

For this car is built for men and women who know most about motor cars.

They know that a 1926 model car means hill-climbing ability.

They know it means better than 60 miles per hour on the road without effort.

They know it means absence of vibration.

They know it means 7 bearings on the crankshaft.

They know it means force feed lubrication in the fullest sense of the word.

They know it means cradle springs, Rickenbacker design.

They know it means an 8-inch frame.

They know it means 1 5-8-inch spokes in the wheels.

They know it means 4-wheel brakes of the internal expanding type.

They know it means 7 cross members in the frame.

This car makes its irresistible appeal to persons who derive pleasure from super-performance and revel in pride of ownership.

This car is distinctive—individual—exceptional.

And yet—and yet—representing as it does, the most advanced engineering features—indicative of the car of tomorrow rather than of today:—

Making, as it does, a stronger appeal to the engineer and the expert, than to the tyro—still its price is that of an ordinary car.

That's the most amazing thing about this Rickenbacker.

After you have sensed a phase of performance you never knew before, you find you may possess this wonderful thing for the same price you would pay for an ordinary car such as everybody—and anybody—may drive.

If you are one who appreciates the finer things of life—if you crave the best and are not content to be one of the "general"—even in the kind of car you drive:—

If, in addition to this desire, you also appreciate intrinsic value and judge a car not by its price but by its high performance:—

If you want the best for the least money—then you belong in a Rickenbacker.

AVOID KENTUCKY, MOTORISTS TOLD

Longer Route to Florida via Memphis and Nashville Recommended by Tourist.

With the exception of bad sections through Kentucky, roads from St. Louis to Miami, Fla., on the shortest available route, are in good condition, according to George Dunville, veteran St. Louis automobile dealer, who recently completed a 1551 motor trip to Florida in an Essex. In place of the route through Kentucky, Dunville suggests that motorists take the longer but better way from St. Louis to Nashville via Memphis.

Dunville drove on paved road to Belleville, took Highway No. 15 to Ashley and No. 2 to Carbondale and Mound City, where he crossed the Ohio River. From the river to Paducah by way of La Center and Maxon, a distance of 20 miles, Dunville said, there is an all-weather gravel road, but it is rough. A 41-mile dirt road from Paducah through Benton to Eggners Ferry on the Tennessee River, Dunville declared to be almost impassable under any conditions. Across the river for 30 miles through Canton and Cadiz to Hopkinsville, the bad section of the road continues. From Hopkinsville to Clarksville the first 15 miles of the 26, Dunville said, is hard-surfaced but rough in places. A section between Clarksville and Adams was described as being the worst on the entire route, especially in wet weather.

From Adams to Springfield, where the Dixie trail is met, the roads are in first-class condition, Dunville reports. There is pavement virtually all the way from Nashville through Smyrna, Murfreesboro, Shelbyville, Tullahoma, Winchester, Eagle, Jasper, Whitwell to Chattanooga. From Chattanooga to Atlanta, Ga., via Lafayette, Summerville, Rome, Cartersville and Marietta, pavement and gravel road are found in equal proportion. Ten miles of the 20-mile road between Atlanta to Griffin are paved, the other half is graveled. The same condition prevails between Griffin and Barnesville. The most beautiful gravel road in the State, Dunville said, lies between Barnesville, through Fort Valley to Perry, a distance of 58 miles.

Except for a 30-mile paved section south of Tifton, the road is of well-graded clay from Perry through Cordele and Tifton to Adel. Although the road from Adel through Vandosta and Jasper, Fla., to Lake City, is graveled for the most part, there are stretches of pavement between each of the towns. The road is paved from Lake City, High Springs, Gainesville, Ocoela, Leesburg, over a direct road to Mt. Dora, between Lake Eustis and Lake Harris and south to Orlando. For the remainder of the drive from Orlando to Miami by way of Indian River City, Cocoa, Ft. Pierce, West Palm Beach and Ft. Lauderdale, the road is paved.

ST. LOUIS MAN PATENTS CUSHION PISTON RING

A new air cushion piston ring said to save gasoline and oil and increase power has been invented and patented by Henry Miller, 4736 Delmar boulevard. The ring is pushed out to the walls by the compression and does not depend on spring as do other piston rings.

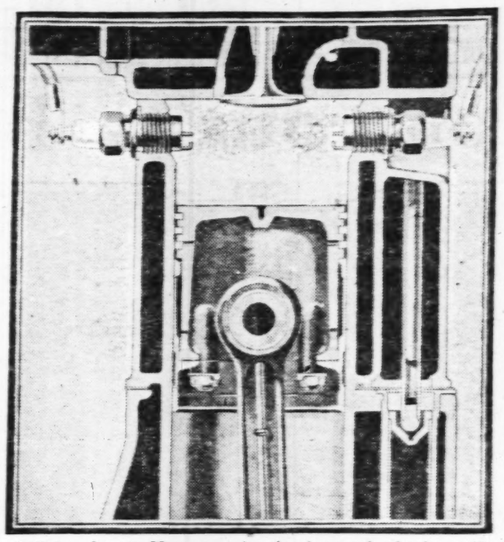
SECTIONS OF THREE CITY STREETS ARE OPENED TO TRAFFIC

SECTIONS of Magnolia, Mississippi and Gustine avenues, which for two weeks have been closed for repairs, were opened to traffic Thursday. Magnolia avenue is open approximately half the distance from Grand boulevard to Kingshighway. Mississippi from Chouteau to Lafayette avenue has been opened on the east side, and Gustine avenue for one block of the three between Utah and Potomac streets is available. The list of other streets closed is the same as appeared Sept. 20 in the automobile section of the Post-Dispatch.

Kingshighway boulevard from Arsenal street south to Devonshire avenue was closed during the last week.

New Marmon Double-Fire Ignition

By Means of Two Sets of Spark Plugs Marmon Engine Gets Increased Power, Acceleration Out of Gasoline, and Waste and Oil Dilution Are Greatly Reduced.



Cylinder of a new Marmon engine showing overhead valve and how the double fire ignition system works through two sets of spark plugs.

THE new Marmon double-fire ignition is the application of an old principle, which, when combined with the Marmon system of manifolding and the approved valve-in-head type construction, results in a performance and gasoline economy that could hardly have bene hoped for. The automobile industry and automobile owners are confronted with a fuel situation that is constantly tending to lower grade fuels. Today we have far better engines than we had 15 years ago, but the ravages of crank case dilution, spark knock or detonation, and incomplete combustion cause constant experimentation by manufacturers.

How It Works.

To illustrate what is accomplished by double fire ignition, take a strip of paper an inch wide and six inches long and light it at one end, observing the time required for burning. Then take a similar strip and light it at both ends, observing the time of burning. The time required will be considerably less than half as that when burned from both ends as when burned from one end only. The reason is that when the paper is caught between two fires, the kindling temperature of the paper is increased very quickly and so the fire travels at a much higher rate of speed. This principle is exactly the same when applied to the combustion chamber of an engine.

In the single fire system, the flame travel of the fuel is slow and by the time all of the fuel charge in the cylinder has been fired, the piston is at the bottom of its stroke and the exhaust valve has opened. The result is that a large percentage of gas is passed out the exhaust manifold in the form of heat or unused power. A consequence of this incomplete burning of gases is loss of power, formation of carbon and adherence to the cylinder wall of the lower grade fuel particels. This unburned fuel gets into the crank case and creates oil dilution.

Description of System.

The double fire ignition system consists of a battery and generator, which furnish the current. On the rear of the generator is mounted the distributor and distributor drive mechanism. Two coils are mounted on the left side of the engine, one on each cylinder block. A single distributor head having 12 contact points, carries the six pairs of spark plug wires to the 12 plugs. There are two plugs per cylinder, placed exactly opposite each other in the combustion chamber.

The operation of the ignition system is similar to that previously used, but is duplicated to take care of each set of six plugs.

A single source of current—a generator and battery—is used, and this source feeds two breaker points, one for each set of plugs. These breaker points are synchonized, so that each pair of plugs in each cylinder will be fired simultaneously. Each breaker point controls the primary low voltage current to each coil.

Each coil then feeds the high voltage current to the contact points in the distributor head, the forward coil being connected to the center point and the rear coil being connected to a point slightly offset from the center and operating through a carbon brush running on a metallic ring in the distributor head.

The two high tension contact points in the distributor head carry the current to each of the two rotor buttons on the rotor, and these two buttons in turn determine the cylinder that is to be fired when the breaker points make contact.

The high voltage current is then carried through the spark plug wires to the combustion chamber in the cylinder, and the gas under compression in the cylinder is fired from two sides of the cylinder at exactly the same instant.

The car is equipped with roller bearings similar to those in automobiles.

How To Go

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau: Please publish best route from St. Louis to Alton. H. J. N.

The best route from St. Louis is to cross McKinley Bridge, Ninth and Salisbury streets, and go via Madison and Granite City, to Mitchell, Ill., and there pick up No. 3 markers north to Alton.

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau—Please publish best route to Sacramento, Cal. Are roads good and what is the distance? Thanks.

You would better go over No. 2 to Fulton, then No. 15 to Jefferson City, west on No. 12 to Sedalia, then No. 3 to No. 2, then west to Kansas City. From Kansas City go west on concrete to Topeka, Kan., then follow U. P. Trail to Salina, the road being mostly gravel and dirt. From Salina turn south to McPherson, picking up National Old Trail and following it through Little River, Lyons, Great Bend and Dodge City. From Dodge City go west to Lamar, La Junta and Las Animas. Near Las Animas is the first view of the Rocky Mountains. Continue southwest on gravel and dirt road to Trinidad, then to Raton Pass to Springer, N. M. There is graded earth to Watrons and graveled road to Santa Fe to Bernalillo, and pavement to and through Albuquerque to Isleta, then to Socorro on fair dirt and gravel, Springerville and St. John's, Ariz., to Holbrook on good gravel, then up steep grade to Flagstaff, from Peach Springs, Needles, Cal., through Daggett and San Bernardino into Los Angeles. From Los Angeles you have choice of two hard surface roads, the Pacific Highway, through Naples, Paso Robles, King City, San Jose, San Francisco, Vacaville into Sacramento, or the alternate route, which is shorter, the National Park-to-Park Trail, through Bakersfield, Fresno, Stockton into Sacramento. Distance is 2625 miles.

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau—Is there any way to go from St. Louis to Fairmount race track at Collinsville, via McKinley Bridge? Yours, 1001, Troy, Mo.

You should cross McKinley Bridge and turn south through Venice and Brooklyn, on St. Clair Avenue road, then turn left on Tenth street and continue on to the Collinsville road which passes Fairmount.

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau: Kindly tell me whether there are ferries at Brasfield and Devall's Bluff on the Memphis-Little Rock highway, and how much is the fare on the ferry from Cairo, Ill., to Bird's Point, Mo.?

There are no longer any ferries on the Memphis-Little Rock highway, bridges having replaced them. The Cairo-Bird's Point ferry charge is $1.50 for car and driver and 25 cents for each additional passenger.

SCENIC HIGHWAY SYSTEM LOSES AIRDALE MASCOT

For the second time within a year Truman Pierson, president of the Mississippi River Scenic Highway System and veteran driver of Scout Car No. 1, has lost an official mascot of the trail. Grumpy, an Airedale, second cousin to the late President Harding's Laddie Boy, was poisoned recently at Minneapolis on the night of his return from a Canadian tour. Grumpy's predecessor, Scout, was killed accidentally several months ago at St. Paul. Pierson and his wife, on their trip advocating road improvement, have carried with them pets of all kinds. Scout, a fox terrier, was the veteran; Dixie, a Persian cat, was next, and Grumpy was third. Dixie now is the only mascot remaining.

PAVING OPEN FROM FESTUS TO DESLOGE

Concrete Road on No. 9 to Flat River May Be Available by November.

An additional three miles of pavement on the new route between Festus and Flat River on State Highway No. 9 has been completed and is opened to traffic. Except for a short detour by way of No. 25 around the new concrete immediately south of Festus, the road is open as far south as Desloge. Within the next three weeks, it is expected, the entire distance, from Festus to Flat River will be paved. Before November, state highway engineers say, there should be concrete road on No. 9 from St. Louis to Flat River, except for a gravel section between Pevely and Festus.

The new bridge over the Meramec river at Fenton on Gravois Road will be opened to traffic next Saturday. Although pavement on the road, which is State Highway No. 30, has been open for three weeks to a point east of High Ridge, motorists have been obliged to turn off the concrete and use the old bridge into Fenton.

SUSQUEHANA TRAIL IS GORGEOUSLY BEAUTIFUL IN MONTH OF OCTOBER

creasing wildness and grandeur until Montoursville is reached and the trail crosses Loyalstock Creek. This creek rises nearly 60 miles north, and cuts its way almost the entire distance through wild and rugged mountains, almost inaccessible to any save hardy woodsmen. It and its tributaries are noted in the East for bass and trout fishing. Four miles farther is Williamsport, a city surrounded by beautiful scenery. Here fish and game abound. This is a favorite stopping place for tourists who enjoy fishing or hunting, as well as nature lovers who wish to hunt with the camera.

At Williamsport, the trail turns sharply to the right, following the Lycoming, crossing a dozen or more of its tributaries, that come leaping down from the mountains, every one famous among fishermen. Hoagland's Run, Gray's Run, Pleasant Stream and Trout Run are among the number.

At Trout Run, the trail leaves the creek, and follows the Williamson road, hewn through virgin forest by the pioneers and still bearing the name of the man whose faith and persistence made the road possible.

At Painted Post, oldest settlement in the Chemung Valley, the scene of another Indian massacre is passed. The town is just outside the city limits of Corning, often called "The Crystal City" because of its leading position in the glass industry. Here some of the finest and oldest brands of American cut glass are made.

At Painted Post the trail swings northwest through bold and rugged scenery to Batavia, and from here the trail is downgrade to Williamsville, where the road forks, and the tourist may take the road to the right, leading direct to Niagara Falls, 25 miles away, or may turn to the left and reach Niagara via Buffalo.

The most startling virtue of this greater is its new and different kind of power flow

You will find in the Greater New Marmon

—a superb dramatization of the word, "Go"

—a pleasant illusion of coasting—due to unparalleled quietness, smoothness and mechanical co-ordination

—a quietness and responsiveness of acceleration which even a Marmon has never before possessed.

—a new resourcefulness and quietness on difficult hills

—a new feeling of assurance due to exclusive built-in safety features

—an atmosphere of adequacy and vogue

—an assurance of prolonged value

YOU know how your car sometimes feels on a damp evening when the moisture in the air gives that last finishing touch of power and for the moment transforms it into a moving miracle. This Greater New Marmon gives you this super-smoothness permanently—any hour of the day and under all conditions.

Unlike most advertising claims, this amazing quality of the New Marmon is supported by unmistakable performance, made possible by easily understood engineering facts.

A new system of Double Fire Ignition, making use of two spark plugs in each cylinder, instead of one, blasts every atom of gasoline into service. Caught between two fires, every particle of vaporized gasoline is exploded instantly and completely. The result is a new quietness and silky smoothness of power flow—yet with a new economy of gasoline.

Three-Way Oil Purifier These results are further insured by the New Marmon Three-Way Oil Purifier which keeps the pistons sealed at all times with a film of pure, unadulterated, grit-proof oil which doesn't allow an ounce of power to escape. This ingenious device not only keeps the oil pure but relieves the owner of the annoyance and expense of frequent oil change.

New Self-Lubricator By means of the Self-Lubricator the owner can now keep the chassis oiled simply by pushing a conveniently located pedal. You push the pedal and the system does the rest—forcing a predetermined amount of oil to all parts of the chassis which require frequent lubrication. It saves time, annoyance and money.

In the full knowledge of what other worthy cars will do, we confidently and happily present the Greater New Marmon to all who surround themselves with the fine things of life and strongly suggest that they drive it for themselves, even though it be for purposes of comparison only.

Luxurious, roomy and richly appointed Standard Closed Cars including two new body styles at exactly open car price. Also, Standard Seven Passenger Sedan only $75 more than the open car and comprehensive selection of De Luxe models.

New models now on display. We shall be pleased to place a demonstrating car at your disposal.

DUST MAY TAKE PLACE OF GASOLINE AS MOTOR FUE

Use of dust as a possible motor fuel to replace gasoline is being investigated by the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture.

With the development of an internal combustion engine using dust, the possibility of the exhaustion of the nation's gasoline supply will be remote, it is said, since carbonaceous dust exists in great quantities.

A device, corresponding roughly to a one-cylinder combustion engine, is fed small quantities of carbonaceous dust, such as powdered sugar, cornstarch, cocoa, pulverized wood, and even finely ground spice or coal dust, which are confined by the mechanism, thoroughly mixed with air and exploded with an electric spark.

It was in the investigation into means of preventing disasters in coal mines, flour mills and industrial plants, caused by explosions of inflammable dust, that the Bureau of Chemistry hit upon the plan of using waste dust in many industries as a motor fuel.

OLD STUDEBAKER CARS ALL COMPLETE ECONOMY R

The fourth annual "reserve mileage economy run" for Studebaker cars with more than 50,000 miles on their speedometers brought to the starting line in Los Angeles 19 entrants. Every car completed the 172-mile course from Los Angeles to Lake Arrowhead and return without a mechanical mishap and without being late at a control. The average "age" of the 20 was 93,657 miles at the start. The "youngster" of the lot had gone only 59,259 miles; the oldest had done 266,152. The winner of the Big Six class had 186,815 miles behind it at the start, yet it made the 172 miles, rising a mile in altitude to Arrowhead Inn, with an average of 18.1 miles to the gallon. The winner in the special six class was a 61,221-miler, which averaged 16.5 miles to the gallon. The car first among the standard or light six class had gone 75,895 miles, and made 20.5 miles to the gallon with no coasting. The test was one of economy in operation and freedom from mechanical troubles. All the cars were privately owned.

DODGE CREDIT PLAN GIVES LOWER FINANCING RA

A new credit purchase plan, to give lower financing rates [illegible] insurance charges recently announced for time-payment purchasers by Dodge Brothers Motor Co. and Graham Bros. Motor Co. in conjunction with the Commercial Investment Trust Co. Under the plan a buyer, by paying a dollar and cents charge equivalent to 8 per cent on the unpaid balance, plus an amount approximately per cent of the local charge for and theft insurance, has his car insured against fire and theft to the amount equivalent to 90 per cent of the f. o. b. price. Adoption of the plan makes it unnecessary for a buyer desiring credit to pay more than the rates quoted.

Pierson and his wife, on their trips advocating road improvements, have carried with them pets of all kinds. Scout, a fox terrier, was the veteran; Dixie, a Persian cat, was next, and Grumpy was third. Dixie was third. Dixie now is the only mascot remaining.

Champion is the better spark plug because of its double-ribbed sillimanite core, its special analysis electrodes and its gas-tight, two-piece construction.

ST. LOUIS DEALERS TO RECEIVE TRAINLOAD OF OLDSMOBILES SATURDAY

Shipment of 100 Coaches and Sedans Consigned From Factory to De Luxe Co.

A trainload of Oldsmobile coaches and sedans, consigned to the De Luxe Automobile Co., St. Louis distributors, from the Lansing, Mich., factory is to arrive here Saturday, George T. Willett, general manager of the St. Louis concern announced yesterday. The shipment is the largest ever received by the local Oldsmobile distributors, and one of the largest ever received by a St. Louis automobile firm. The entire load already has been sold.

Geo. T. Willett.

In spite of a shortage of cars at the factory, and a demand from distributors in every section of the country, Willett was able to assure delivery of his shipment, after a conference with factory officials last week.

Two months ago 84 Oldsmobile cars were driven from the factory to St. Louis by members of the De Luxe Co. sales force who made a special trip to the factory to get the cars. Before the new models arrived, Willett said, orders were taken by salesmen who displayed photographs to prospective buyers.

With the arrival of the new models, Willett said, the company would be able partly to supply its large demand. The concern is oversold 300 cars.

FRANKLIN CO. TO BEGIN FALL SHOWING THURSDAY

The St. Louis Franklin Motor Car Co. will open a ten-day automobile "salon" Thursday at its headquarters, 3949 Lindell boulevard. The exhibit, which is a part of a nation-wide showing by Franklin dealers, will show custom-featured standard Franklin types and, it is said, will be one of the largest of its kind ever held in the city. Franklin dealers in the adjoining territories are expected to attend the showing, the purpose of which is to acquaint motorists with future style trend in American automobiles.

DUCO FINISH USE ON NOTED FOREIGN AUTOS

Manufacturers of Renault, Voisin, Bugatti and Daimler cars are using du Pont Duco. Interesting color schemes have been prepared for these cars.

Eugene A. Weber of Webster Groves, who formerly was chief engineer of a local automobile factory, has joined the sales force of the Kardell Motor Car Co. He was with the Kardell Co. for several years in the past and has a broad acquaintance with Reo owners.

INDEPENDENT GAS STATION OWNERS FORM ASSOCIATION

Owners of independent gasoline filling stations in St. Louis have formed the Independent Filling Stations Association, an organization of privately-owned stations.

Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, speaking at the first meeting Monday at the American Annex Hotel, stressed the efficient manner in which a recognized association could deal with legislative, court and civic matters in which the individuals would be ineffective.

J. B. Grotewiel of the Claxton Filling Station, is president of the association, and Fred Nerginan of the Florissant Filling Station is secretary.

FRED CAMPBELL CO. TO OPEN ESTABLISHMENT AT DECATUR

The Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co. of St. Louis will open a jobbing business about Jan. 1, 1926, at Decatur, Ill., according to an announcement by Frank Quan, secretary of the concern. Al C. Ehrhard will be active manager of the Decatur establishment. The Decatur house will handle a complete line of wholesale automotive supplies, the same as is handled here and at Terre Haute. The company sells only to dealers. Fifteen persons will make up the office force at Decatur. Quarters are to occupy 7500 square feet of space.

ROBERSON-BRADFORD CO, MOVES TO NEW QUARTERS

The Roberson-Bradford Motor Coach Co., distributors of Duco auto finish in the St. Louis territory, moved Thursday from its old quarters at 1900 Locust boulevard to its new building at 2822-24-26 Pine street. The new structure has a frontage of 75 feet on Pine street, is 150 feet deep and two stories high. The first floor will be given over to refinishing cars, and the second floor for offices and stock rooms.

MOON SALES THUS FAR IN 1925 EXCEED 1924 TOTAL

Moon Motor Car Co. sales for the first nine months of 1925 were greater than for the entire year of 1924. Moon and Diana DeLuxe sedans and roadsters led in the sales. A large demand for the new Diana "Phaeton" was reported. Sales were particularly numerous in South Atlantic states and in California, according to F. H. Rengers, general sales manager, who recently returned from a 4000 mile motor tour of the East. The volume of business probably will be maintained for the remainder of the year, Rengers says.

HUDSON-ESSEX OUTPUT FOR 1925 PASSES 200,000 MARK

More than 200,000 Hudson and Essex cars have been manufactured to date this year, according to figures given out recently by the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., St. Louis dealers. This total, said to be the largest number of six-cylinder cars ever produced in a similar length of time in the history of the industry, is growing at the rate of 1200 cars a day.

Hudson-Essex production was 60,000 cars in 1922; 88,000 in 1923, and 128,000 in 1924. Indications are that 1925 will double the business done in 1924.

HUDSON-ESSEX WORLD'S LARGEST SELLING "SIXES"

BIG PRODUCTION PLAN FOR NEW G. M. C. AUTO

Glancy Says 60,000 Will Be Turned Out First Year at Plant in Pontiac, Mich.

By a Special Correspondent.

DETROIT, Oct. 10.—The part which the new 6-cylinder car to be built by the General Motors Corporation is expected to play in the industry is indicated by the fact that about $15,000,000 has been spent by General Motors on experimenting, trials and subsidiary concerns preparing for its debut, and market 60,000 of the new automobile the first year. As has been told, the new car is to be made by the Oakland division of General Motors, and will be a companion to the Oakland six, which is distributed in St. Louis by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co.

New Car to Have Fisher Body.

Prices of the new line are being withheld, as are the car's name and specifications, until its official launching, which is scheduled for just before the New York automobile show. But the understanding is that it will fit in between the Chevrolet and the Oldsmobile and that it will have a Fisher body.

"We expect to build 60,000 cars the first year," says General Manager Alfred R. Glancy of the Oakland Co. "This in itself will constitute a new record in the automotive industry, for never before in all the history of this great industry has a new car been marketed the first 12 months on so gigantic a scale. We will need 2000 more men to handle the first schedule."

Oakland dealers throughout the country will be given the franchise of the new car in addition to their present automobile.

It had been the intention of the General Motors Corporation to announce the new car earlier this fall, but the demand for the Oakland car has continued at such a rate that the new car was delayed to allow the Oakland factory to catch up with orders.

$3,000,000 for Plant.

Work has been under way quietly for some time at the Oakland plant to make room and arrange manufacturing facilities for the huge addition which the new car means. More than $3,000,000 will be invested in Pontiac immediately for machinery and new equipment to permit production of an entirely new car on a large scale.

"The increased popularity of the Oakland, and the additional work which it has entailed, has set us back slightly," said Glancy, "but we are beginning to see the light of day and can definitely assure the public that the General Motors newest automobile will be in small scale production in the middle of December. Shortly after the first of the year this will be steadily stepped up until we reach the speed necessary to carry us through to the 60,000 goal we are going to reach the first 12 months."

HE WILL BUILD NEW AUTO FOR THE G. M. C.

A. R. GLANCY,
General Manager of the Oakland Motor Car Co.

Tests Show Ford Can Run 60 Miles on Gallon of Gas

The amazing fact that a Ford can run 60 miles on a gallon of gasoline was recently brought to light thru tests conducted by America's foremost engineers. Great strides have already been made in this direction by the recent invention of a simple attachment which can be installed in a few minutes without any alterations to motor. A. C. Winterburn made 41.4 miles on 1 gallon of gasoline after this device was attached. B. O. Weeks, famous aviator and inventor, wants agents and will send samples for trial. Write him today at 426-1551 Eleventh St., Milwaukee, Wis.

What's New in Cars

CLEVELAND ANNOUNCES TWO NEW COUPE MAKES

"In answer to demand for a compact three-passenger enclosed car, Cleveland announces two new coupes, one listing at $975 and the other on the special six chassis at $1178," says E. C. Meissner, president of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co., local Cleveland six distributer.

"These models are destined to find favor with business and professional men in all kinds of weather. The bodies are completely paneled in metal and finished in Cleveland blue dupont duco. Windows in the doors are automatically regulated and a special type ventilating windshield provides satisfying ventilation. "Hung low on the chassis, with streamline body of new design, these coupe models present a pleasing appearance.

"Upholstery is genuine leather, but gray corduroy is optional. The controls are very accessible. Doors are wide and allow easy entrance and exit to the interior.

"A feature appreciated by women drivers and professional men is the snug carrying space for doctor's medicine case or other small incidentals, which is directly back of the driver's seat. When more storage room is required, the rear deck opens and provides ample space. It is waterproof, and securely guarded by a lock.

"These coupes, like all Cleveland cars, feature 'one shot' chassis lubrication. Balloon tires are standard equipment, but four-wheel brakes are optional at slight extra cost."

CHRYSLER DEVICE DESIGNED TO PREVENT THEFT OF CAR

The Fedoo a patented theft prevention numbering system for automobiles has been introduced by the Chrysler Motor Corporation and is being used extensively on its cars. The device consists of a nickel and copper serial number plate, anchored to the car's instrument board in such a way that it cannot be removed or changed without defacement. Extensive use of the Fedoo, it is believed, will effectively check automobile thefts.

STUDEBAKER FUNERAL CAR AND AMBULANCE.

Standardized Studebaker funeral cars and ambulances are now in production and have just made their appearance in the market. Their introduction has been influenced by the popularity among funeral directors of the Studebaker Big Six chassis. More than 1200 of these chassis have been lengthened in the past six years for mounting special hearse and ambulance bodies. Accordingly, Studebaker has developed and perfected its new funeral car and ambulance chassis of 158-inch wheelbase. The chassis is powered by the Six Six 75-horsepower engine. Both the new Studebaker ambulance and the funeral car are 18½ feet long over all, 6 feet 9 inches high, and 8 feet 8 inches wide. The patient's compartment in the ambulance is 8 feet 9 inches long, 59 inches wide and 50 inches high. On the funeral car, the casket compartment is of the same dimensions. The floors of both cars are 31 inches from the ground. Both are made with metal back or, where landau-type of equipment is in use, the backs are furnished in bright finish, genuine leather. The patient's compartment in the ambulance may be loaded either from the side or the rear, through wide doors. It is fitted with a folding chair cot, two removable attendants' seats, a dome light, two quarter lights, electric fan, cut glass flower vases and curtains. This compartment is finished in two-tone leather.

CHEVROLET OFFICIAL TALKS TO SALESMEN BY PHONOGRAPH

A unique address to more than 20,000 members of the Chevrolet selling organization scattered throughout the United States was made recently by R. H. Grant, general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co. Grant announced the opening of the Chevrolet fall selling campaign by means of duplicate phonograph records which reproduced his voice in the showroom of every Chevrolet dealer.

In each of the thousands of Chevrolet salesrooms was gathered at the same hour a group of salesmen. Their ranks were augmented by numerous members of the Chevrolet organization not directly interested in selling, who attended because of curiosity.

At a previously established hour the thousands of records were started simultaneously and Grant's voice was heard in every state.

"The present selling campaign, the most ambitious in Chevrolet history, is of such importance that I wished to attend personally every meeting of every sales group," said Grant. "This being impossible, I chose the best substitute—the phonograph."

BALLOON TIRE SALES FOR 1925 DOUBLE 1924 TOTAL

Twice as many balloon tires have been sold thus far in 1925 than were sold in 1924. Use of balloons on passenger cars and trucks and busses is growing, according to manufacturers. Figures for the first half of 1925 indicate balloon tire shipments for the entire industry in the United States amounted to approximately 3,000,000, as compared with 5,000,000 for the entire year 1924.

Improved methods of construction, which include the flat-tread principle, permitting longer, wider, uniflex structure, reducing internal heat, and the fewer-ply type eliminating heaviness and bulkiness, are given as reasons for increased popularity of balloon tires.

BACK OF A GOOD NAME

Rarely in manufacturing history has a name entrenched itself so firmly in the confidence of the entire world as the name Dodge Brothers.

Everywhere and to everyone this name means but one thing: a product built honestly of the best available materials and sold at a just price.

Behind this product, this price and this enviable reputation lie certain impressive and fundamental facts.

So important is a knowledge of these facts to the motor car buyer that Dodge Brothers, Inc., have determined to publish them, from time to time, until every newspaper reader in America may be presumed to have read them:

Dodge Brothers, during the past eleven years, have built and sold more than one million four hundred thousand motor cars—and more than 90% of these cars are still in service. This record requires no comment. It stands impressively alone in motor car history.

It has never been Dodge Brothers policy to build yearly models. When an improvement, that is really an improvement, is discovered, it is made at once. Their slogan, "Constantly Improved But No Yearly Models" is familiar the world over.

Dodge Brothers build one chassis and only one. This policy materially lowers manufacturing cost. It also enables Dodge Brothers engineers to concentrate their entire time and thought on the betterment of this one type.

Dodge Brothers have never had an "off year" or an "off car." This is because they have never used the public as a testing ground for "new models" or lowered the quality of their product in the slightest degree. Every change has been an improvement on the original design.

Dodge Brothers pioneered in building the first all-steel open car and the first all-steel closed car. These epochal developments have saved Dodge Brothers owners many millions of dollars by materially prolonging motor car life and by effecting marked economies in manufacture. This construction has also reduced incalculably the danger from accident and fire.

Dodge Brothers sell directly through their dealers to the purchaser. There are no sectional distributing agencies to increase the cost of distribution and the cost of the car.

Dodge Brothers have never given so-called "free service." The car is sold at a fair and honest price. Nothing is added to this original purchase price to pay for service that the owner may never need.

Dodge Brothers Dealers were pioneers in unanimously adopting the flat rate service system. By this system, the owner knows in advance what any service job will cost. There are no unpleasant surprises in his bills.

The sturdiness and long life of Dodge Brothers Motor Car is reflected in its resale value. Comparatively few Dodge Brothers Motor Cars are advertised in the resale columns of the newspapers. The values they bring testify unanswerably to their goodness—and the public's belief in their goodness.

The time has passed when transient novelties can lead a thoughtful buyer to overlook the great essentials of motor car worth. A few of these essentials, outlined above, go far to explain why Dodge Brothers name is accepted, the world over, as the hall mark of dollar-for-dollar value.

Growth and development of the rubber industry in America through the last two decades was depicted recently when Harvey S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entry into the business. A pageant at Akron, O., where the principal Firestone factories are located, showed uses of rubber products.

A feature in the Firestone transportation pageant was a truck load of rubber from the Firestone plantations in Liberia, West Africa.

The Firestone Company was founded in 1900 with a capital stock of $50,000 and for four years produced only carriage tires. At the close of 1924 the capital and surplus of the company had increased to $53,587,430 and the number of tires produced annually to 6,627,973. In addition to its main plant at Akron, the company maintains a factory at Hamilton, Ont., a footwear factory in Massachussets, cotton mills at Fall River, Mass., and warehouses and branches throughout the United States and foreign countries.

ST. LOUISANS CAN DRIVE 700 MILES ON PAVEMENT TO TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.

THE concrete roadbed of the West Michigan Pike, along the Lake Michigan shore, has been pushed 50 miles farther north. Except for 20 miles of excellent gravel north of Bensonia, a concrete road more than 400 miles long now extends from Chicago to Traverse City, Mich. With the concrete highways from St. Louis, Mo., to Chicago, Missourians now have over 700 miles of concrete for their journey into North Michigan.

CITY BUSSES RUN WITH SUCCESS BY TROLLEY SYSTEM

All Motor Coaches at Decatur, Ill., Operated by Traction Company—Carried 3,704,896 in Year.

By a Special Correspondent.

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 10.—This city, the first in Illinois to adopt motorbus transportation as auxiliary to trolley cars, has, after one year's trial, testified to the project's success, judging from a 3,700,000-passenger patronage. The street railway company purchased all the independent bus lines Aug. 1, 1924, substituted modern equipment and built up a utility system now generally regarded as a model of its kind.

In 12 months, the 15 motorbuses in operation as feeders for the trolley car lines carried 2,907,359 passengers from whom revenue was secured and 897,537 on transfers from other busses or trolley cars, giving a grand total of 3,704,896 passengers. Trolley cars during the year carried 1,400,000 less passengers than in the preceding year. The busses absorbed this loss and added approximately 1,500,000 new passengers. Street car and bus cash pasengers for the year totaled 7,553,976, while for the preceding year, without busses, the number carried was but 6,033,605.

In a year the 15 busses have traveled a total of 1775 revenue miles per day, with an average gasoline consumption of a gallon for each 6.7 miles, and 225 miles per gallon of lubricating oil. Because drivers have become more experienced and a premium is placed upon conservation, gas consumption has been steadily lessened, until the average is one-fourth mile per gallon greater than at the outset. Every 10 days, a table is posted, showing the consumption of gas per bus, enabling each driver to learn how much he is burning in relation to that burned by fellow drivers. This has resulted in a friendly rivalry to see who can show the greatest economy.

At the outset, the average mileage for each tire was 29,251. In the closing half of the year, some tires have recorded a mileage of 36,667.

Motormen and conductors of the trolley cars are privileged to handle the busses if their seniority permits, but it has bee nfound that the older employes favor the trolley cars, while the younger seek the busses.

The company has installed a bus maintenance force to keep vehicles in perfect condition. The average speed of the motorbusses is 9772 miles per hour. Except for two instances, in which persons were slightly injured, the busses have not been involved in serious accidents.

Decatur is not yet ready to follow the example of Streator, the first city in Illinois to abandon the trolley cars and substitute the motorbus, but may do so within the next decade. Bloomington, Peoria, Springfield, Danville Galesburg, Quincy, Champaign and Rockford have introduced motorbusses as subsidiary to the trolleys.

HIGH OUTPUT LEVEL MAINTAINED BY ST. LOUIS CARBURETOR FACTORY

Carter Co., Said to Rank Second Among Similar Firms In Production.

The Carter Carburetor Co., 2483 North Spring avenue, is said to rank second in production among establishments of its kind in the country. Controlled and operated by the American Car and Foundry Company, New York, the St. Louis factory, despite comparatively small quarters, had an August output of 65,526.

By specializing in a plain tube type, with simplicity of design and efficiency as the basis of excellence, and taking only large volume business, this concern that employs 200 persons and uses scarcely 21,000 square feet of space has established for itself a national reputation as producer of carburetors for all Chevrolet cars, and for Oldsmobile, Star and Ajax motors from middle west branch factories.

More than fifty processes are employed at the factory from the time raw material is brought in until the finished product is tested and packed for shipment. The local plant, its managers say, is the only one in the country to make an automobile motor test of finished carburetors.

H. H. C. Weed is general manager, W. M. Ewart, factory manager and G. M. Bicknell, chief engineer. The concern, the only one of its kind here, was established six years ago, and has been owned by the American Car and Foundry Company for three years. Before spring, officials say, larger quarters, probably will be taken.

Nowhere else can you find so many fine car characteristics for so little money. Chevrolet gives you more quality features of construction than your automobile dollar can buy anywhere. The following features of the Chevrolet Coach indicate why Chevrolet offers greater value than any other low priced car.

This is what you get in a Chevrolet:

Body Construction
Fisher built bodies of wood and steel construction with the flexibility and strength which enable them to withstand hard driving over rough roads—every joint in the hardwood frame carefully glued and screwed together—every door hinge attached with a through bolt in addition to wood screws—every steel panel carefully fitted—a rigid top construction—roomy, comfortable seats upholstered in rich corduroy velour—all evidences of Chevrolet quality and the type of body construction used on all of America's finest cars

Appointments
Everything for your convenience and comfort. An automatic windshield wiper—operated through a copper tube built into the body—a turn of the dash control button and clear vision is automatically maintained in any weather. A motor driven Klaxon horn. Cowl lamps. A dome light—always convenient and often a necessity. A dash light—with its simple control switch illuminating the instrument panel whenever desired. Quick-acting Ternstedt window regulators on all windows. Windows and windshield of clear, heavy, plate glass. A silk shade over the rear window—protecting you from the reflected glare of cars coming from the rear.

Windshield
The Fisher VV one-piece windshield—undoubtedly the greatest step forward in automobile body construction in recent years. Easily raised or lowered by a Ternstedt regulator—absolutely watertight in all kinds of weather. No adjusting nuts to bother with. Full ventilation across entire cowl—a feature you should become acquainted with.

Instrument Panel
The instrument panel is complete. On it are mounted the windshield wiper control, the lighting and ignition switch, the speedometer, the oil gauge, the ammeter, and the choke rod. Paneled type instruments are used and the instruments are neatly grouped. The panel itself is finished in Duco.

Motor
The powerful, well known valve-in-head Chevrolet motor, unusually high in its efficiency and therefore economical in its operation. Carefully balanced running parts made of fine materials give that smooth flow of power desired by everyone.

Lubrication
Combination splash and force feed lubrication is used. An oil pump maintains a continuous supply of oil, and the oil gauge located on the instrument panel tells the driver that the system is working properly.

Cooling
Few cars are as efficiently cooled as the Chevrolet. A Harrison honeycomb radiator with ample area not only insures efficient coolin,. but, in combination with its polished, non-rusting airplane metal shell, adds greatly to the beauty of the car. A water pump cooling system provides ample circulation and minimizes the possibility of freezing in cold weather.

Alemite
The Chevrolet chassis is equipped throughout with Alemite fittings, making the necessary job of lubricating thoroughly simple and easy.

Duco Finish
Chevrolet cars are all finished in Duco—a finish that retains its luster and color indefinitely. There are many imitations but only one Duco.

Springs
Chrome vanadium steel springs, extending over 88% of the wheel base, give you riding comfort that is unexcelled.

Chassis Construction
The foundation of the Chevrolet car is its long, rugged 4½" channel steel frame with its five sturdy cross members. This construction provides unusual strength and adds materially to the life of the car. Chevrolet's sturdy yet simple frame design reflects the application of obviously correct engineering principles. Units are thoroughly modern in design and perform with the maximum of efficiency.

Vacuum Fuel Feed—Gas Tank in the Rear
The gasoline tank is located at the rear of the chassis and all models are equipped with the Stewart vacuum fuel feed system—insuring the utmost convenience and safety.

QUALITY AT LOW COST

NO DROP IN TIRE PRICES EXPECTED

Factories Working 20 Per Cent Under Schedules Due to Lower Replacement Demand.

By a Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—No reduction in the prices of tires or other rubber products may be expected before Jan. 1.

Tire factories, chief consumers of crude rubber, are working at 12 to 20 per cent under schedules, due to diminished replacement demand. This will not serve to influence prices, since original equipment demand is high and tire manufacturers are not too well covered on crude supplies.

Output Satisfactory.

The output continues well ahead of that of last fall. A year ago rubber was quoted at 29½ cents a pound. Today it has advanced nearly 70 cents. At this time last year stocks of rubber in storage at London, the chief world market, totaled 43,238 tons. Today they are less than 5000 tons.

Under the Stevenson plan by which exports of rubber from the East Indies, the main source of supply, is governed by the average selling price in world markets for the previous three months, according to whether it is above or below 26 cents a pound, the export supply will be increased by 10 per cent Nov. 1.

In answer to tire manufacturers and other consumers seeking additional supplies and complaining of conditions, the Department of Commerce made unofficial protests in vain to the British Government and investigated possible sources of supply. This was followed by promotions involving rubber growing in various parts of the world.

One firm in the industry turned to the United States as a source of supply. It found a supply in guayule rubber, which has been known for years as a product of North Mexico. When rubber prices dropped in world markets and revolution encompassed Mexico its production fell off. Charles T. Wilson, of the Charles T. Wilson Co., Inc., finding that the growth of the shrub extended into the Big Bend district of Texas, built a factory at Marathon for production of guayule rubber and is putting it on the market in large amounts. All that is necessary to production of rubber from the shrub is to pull it up with teams, carry it to the factory, lacerate it and solidify the crude rubber under running cold water.

SPONGE RUBBER BEING USED IN ENGLAND FOR AUTO SEAT UPHOLSTERING

More Comfort and Freedom From Shocks Said to Be Given by New Method.

Upholstery in automobile cushions by sponge rubber is being tried in London. Additional comfort and freedom from road shocks are said to be given by the new method.

The cushion is filled with strips of sponge rubber placed at equal spaces in layers, each layer being laid at right angles to the one below it. A sheet of sponge rubber is laid over the uppermost layer and the whole is inclosed by an external covering of leather cloth. While sponge rubber upholstery is more expensive than other kinds, the cost is said to be offset by the comfort given.

PAIGE FIRM TO ANTICIPATE REDEMPTION DAY OF NOTES

Directors of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. have decided, in view of the company's strong cash position and favorable business outlook, to anticipate redemption date of $500,000 of its outstanding serial gold debenture notes by calling for pay Dec. 1, this year, the block of notes that would fall due June 1, 1926, according to information just received by the St. Louis Paige distributor, the Wilson Motor Car Co.

The company's cash resources as of Sept. 25 were $5,429,000. Profits for the first eight month of the year, including branches, but before preferred dividends and taxes, were $2,834,186.06. Profits for August were $532,281.48.

The company on Dec. 1, this year, also will retire $500,000 of the notes, coming due at that time. Of the originally authorized issue of $3,000,000, dated March 1, 1924, and mauturing $500,000 June 1 and Dec. 1, to June 1, 1927, the company already has retired $1,000,000 as the notes fell due.

HOW OZARK TOWN BUILDS ITS OWN HIGHWAY SYSTEM

One Man Gives 45 Days Labor Free as His Contribution to Community Project to End Isolation.

The town of Snowball, Ark., is building a good roads system through free will offerings of its citizens, independent of State or county aid. While nearby communities awaited completion of State roads in their districts, this little Ozark mountain town, 80 miles southeast of Eureka Springs, went steadily ahead building its own roads and today has finished one part of the good roads program and is well on the way toward beginning other projects.

Snowball's determination to be the center of a good roads system was the outgrowth of a spirit of independence engendered in the community by nature herself.

Community Spirit Developed.

Six years ago, Snowball was a typical mountain town, surrounded on all sides by lofty hills. What roads there were in favorable weather little more than cow paths, after rains became impassable. At times of high water, Snowball was completely cut off from surrounding country by mountain streams. An intense community spirit thus was developed.

With the coming of a good roads era in Arkansas, Snowball was to be benefited by having a road to Marshall, the county seat. But Snowball, not satisfied with this, determined to have good roads, and knowing that State and county aid would be too slow in coming, decided to do what perhaps never had been done before. They would build a system of roads entirely by free will contributions.

Snowball merchants, farmers and timber interests promoted the enterprise. Every person in the community, in one way or another, participated in it. Large sums were contributed by W. A. Perry and Ross McDaniel, merchants, and Love Hensley, owner of one of the largest farms on the Buffalo River. Wealthy timber interests, to be benefited most by good roads, did their share.

Free labor was called for. Seldom, it is said, has there been more generous and spontaneous respose by citizens to a public project.

Each person vied with his neighbor in good roads work. One farmer, John McIntire, put in 45 days last year on the new project without pay. Others were almost as generous. Right of way was freely given. Fences were removed without dispute when those in charge of the movement decided that a better road could be built thereby.

One Road Completed.

Within a year, one road, said to be the equal of any in the section, has been completed, 15 miles from Snowball to two miles northwest of St. Joe. At this point, the road forks, one prong going to St. Joe where it will meet the new State highway under construction, and the other prong to the Jefferson Highway at Western Grove.

Snowball's good roads enthusiasts declare that the newly built highway is only one item on their program. Roads branching in all directions are planned. The principal highways are to be surfaced with materials from nearby gravel hills.

OLDSMOBILE PROVES WORTH IN 44,000-MILE TIRE TEST

How tire manufacturers, like car manufacturers, do not wait for results obtained by the public, but continually test in advance various kinds of tires under all kinds of actual road driving to determine where weaknesses are liable to develop and where betterments can be made was shown in a test with an Oldsmobile six sedan.

The Oldsmobile was driven night and day by two drivers, each man driving 10 hours and covering between 150 to 200 miles, making a daily average of 300 to 400 miles. Sacks of sand equivalent in weight to that of three persons are carried in the back of the car.

In eight months the Oldsmobile has covered 44,028 miles at a cost of .076 cents the mile, including depreciation, repairs, gasoline, oil, driving and operating expenses, drivers' time and tires.

Although the average car, after it has gone 25,000 miles, begins to cost money and delays, the Oldsmobile is said to run as well now as when it was purchased. Paint and upholstery are in good shape.

Previous to the purchase of the Oldsmobile, the Pennsylvania Rubber Co. used exclusively one of the heaviest and most expensive cars made in this country.

BROWN SUCCEEDS BRITTON AS A. A. A. LEGISLATIVE HEAD

The resignation of Roy F. Britton of St. Louis, president of the Automobile Club of Missouri, from the chairmanship of the Legislative Board of the A. A. A., is announced. His successor at the head of this important committee is Oscar Brown of Syracuse, N. Y., president of the New York State Automobile Association.

Britton was chairman of the Traffic Control Committee of the Hoover Conference and also a member of the Committee on Uniformity. He is now working on drivers' examinations, a question which will be submitted to a referendum to A. A. A. clubs.

TERM 'PHAETON' BEING USED FOR TOURING CAR

The term "phaeton" is coming into increasing use for the type generally known as touring car, manufacturers say, because with the use of all types for touring, the designation touring car has lost its significance. The question of standard names for car types will be considered by the Society of Automotive Engineers at a coming meeting.

NEW "SILVER BACK" PATCH SAID TO PREVENT AGING

A "silver back" cold patch, said to give high tensile strength, prevent aging and permit free action of the tube in the tire, is made by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. The cured back of the patch is laminated, built ply upon ply, finished in silver to prevent aging, and lubricates the surface of the patch next to the casing.

MANY AUTO MAKERS FAVOR STANDARD BALLOON TIRES

That many automobile manufacturers favor balloon tire standardization, as advocated by the Society of Automotive Engineers, is shown in answers to a questionnaire on the subject. Manufacturers declare that there are too many sizes and types, that this condition causes waste, that tire design should fit car design, and that a 20-inch wheel is preferred. Improvement of tread contour and rubber mixture, more plies and a compromise between high pressure and extremely low pressure and standardization of tire and rim weights as well as sizes be adopted were other suggestions that will be taken up by the society.

THREE DECK TRUCK MADE.

A three deck truck with ramps and collapsible sides is made in England especially for the farmer. It is believed likely to prove useful for carrying lambs to market.

CAR RUN 6484 MILES IN EXACTLY SIX DAYS

Ansaldo, Driven by Five Men in Turn 45 Miles an Hour for 144 Hours.

Driven by five men alternating at the wheel, an Ansaldo car has just run 6484 miles in six days, averaging more than 1000 miles a day. The average speed for the 144 hours, making allowance for stops at the pit, was 45 miles an hour.

The feat was performed on the Miramas track, near Marsailles, France.

Official observers reported that the car ran with wonderful regularity from start to finish, stops made being only the scheduled ones for refueling and tires.

BALLOON TIRES USED IN RECORD MOUNTAIN CLIMB.

The Chandler six that recently climbed Pike's Peak in record time was equipped with Goodrich Silvertoon balloon tires. The tires gave better traction on the steep grades than was obtained with standard pressure tires on previous climbs, greater control on curves and aided in the maintainance of high speed, it was said.

"I NEVER KNEW I COULD GET SO MUCH MOTOR CAR VALUE FOR SO LITTLE!"

INVOLUNTARILY you'll think thus as soon as you learn of the surprising reductions in the prices of the famous Stearns-Knight Motor Cars.

For the prices on all models of this world renowned car have been substantially reduced—in most cases many hundreds of dollars.

These reductions have in no way affected the fine quality of these high-grade motor cars—the same Stearns-Knight Quality is present at every point. And in addition to these lowered prices is the factor of added equipment that costs you not a dollar extra!

At the end of any test you may want to give this thoroughly good, thoroughly efficient car you'll be impetuous to own one. There's something about the performance of a Stearns-Knight that people never forget. It's the sensation of unconquerable power, of supreme flexibility, of uncanny smoothness given by the remarkable power-plant, that "gets" you.

Remembering the much lowered prices now in effect, you'll be the loser if you fail to ask us to make this experience possible. We'll provide the opportunity gladly. Just telephone us or call at our sales rooms. "You'll know when you sit at the wheel."

ANOTHER CITY FIGHTS FOR PLACE ON ROAD

Business Men of Springfield, Mo. Opposes Routing Highway No. 14 Just Outside Its Borders.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 10.—A proposal by the State Highway Department to construct a by-pass on Highway No. 14, the primary road between St. Louis and Southwest Missouri, so that autoists need not go through Springfield but can travel along the northern city limits, has caused protest by "south side" business men and threatens to revive a sectional feud that has flamed at intervals for more than 50 years.

The protest was lodged by a delegation of bankers, wholesalers and retailers who called upon H. P. Mobberly, Division Highway Engineer at his headquarters here. Mobberly told them the protest would be considered before final action.

He also said it was the policy of the department to have the principal highways skirt towns whenever possible, to obtain a greater margin of safety by lessening traffic congestion.

To understand the conflict, one must know something of Springfield. The city was founded nearly 100 years ago a short distance south of the "Jordan," as Wilson Creek is known locally. With the extension, in the '70's, of the Frisco railroad from St. Louis southwestward, Springfield residents, confident the road could not afford to miss the town, refused to pay a bonus. As a result, the railway was built along a ridge a mile north of the town and a new town, North Springfield, was established.

For some years the rival towns were bitter rivals. Then came a boom period, and the two were merged under the name of Springfield. The rivalry, however, recurred in municipal elections, distribution of public improvements and in efforts to obtain any enterprise regarded as a community asset.

As at present designated, Highway No. 14 follows a due east and west course, passing through the public square, hub of the south side business district and missing the north side business district by more than a mile.

Should the proposed by-pass be constructed, tourists who desired to avoid congestion would pass a mile and a half north of the square and a few blocks north of the north side business district.

The south side business men, in conferring with Mobberly, based ther protest on the fact that rerouting necessary for the by-pass would mean improvement of 20 additional miles of highway.

On the other hand, it is contended by representatives of the Highway Department, congestion will be lessened in a district where already the traffic problem is the bane of the city government, and the number of grade crossings be reduced from four to one.

NATIONAL MONUMENTS AND PARKS VISITED BY 2,073,684 PERSONS THUS FAR IN 1925

Gain of 39 Per Cent in Attendance. Annual Government Report Shows.

A total of 2,073,684 persons visited national parks and monuments during the travel year ending Sept. 30, according to a statement issued by the Department of the Interior. This is a gain of more than 39 per cent in two years.

Hot Springs headed the list with a total of 265,500, while Rocky Mountain was second with 233,912 visitors—a reversal of last year's order. Other totals were Yosemite, 209,166; Mount Rainier, 173,004; Yellowstone, 154,282; Platt, 143,380; and Grand Canyon, 134,053. Travel to Zion National Park was doubled, the 1925 figure being 16,817.

aNtional monuments showing the greatest number of visitors were Muir Woods, with 93,643, Pinnacles with 63,522 and Petrified Forest with 55,227. Papago Saguaro travel jumped from 10,000 last year to 30,000 this year. The monuments as a whole showed an increase of almost 22 per cent. No reports have yet been received from the Scotts Bluff, Verendrye, and Colorado Monuments, which last year had a combined visiting list of 51,800.

VICTORY HIGHWAY BODY TO HOLD ELECTION AT TOPEKA

The annual election of the Victory Highway Association, with headquarters at Topeka, Kan., will be held Nov. 11, at that city. Ben Blow, formerly of St. Louis, is secretary and manager of the organization.

The Victory Highway is the only national coast-to-coast highway passing through St. Louis. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, has been nominated as a director of the Victory Highway Association.

TOURING BUSSES TO HAVE BERTHS AND SHOWER BATHS

A novel motor bus, for transcontinental touring, is soon to be built by Ward B. Hiner at his Red Ball truck factory at Frankfort, Ind. The bus is to have a number of berths, kitchenette, shower bath, and an observation platform at the rear.

MADDEN SUPPORTS EFFORT TO REPEAL TAX UPON AUTOS

Declaring that the so-called luxury tax, particularly on automobiles, should be replaced, Representative Madden of Illinois, in a statement, points out that of a possible tax reduction of $350,000,000, at least $122,000,000 could be saved to motor car and truck owners. The gasoline tax levied by the states and applied to road building, the Congressman said, is almost an ideal form of automobile taxation, since the motorist levies his own taxes in proportion to his use of the roads.

St. Louis' Biggest Radio Exposition Opens Tomorrow in the Coliseum

Most Elaborate Display of Its Kind Ever Attempted West of the Mississippi River Will Have Many Novelties and Attractions for the Fans.

The first Southwest National Radio Show is all set and ready for the public to "tune in" at the Coliseum. The official opening will be made by Victor J. Miller, Mayor of St. Louis, Monday evening, October 12th at 7:45 o'clock. However, prior to this, a matinee will be held Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

The big Coliseum has been especially decorated with a canopy of purple and ivory bunting and the same colors used in artistic festoons and formal designs. In addition to the already brilliant illumination, a 50,000 watt lighting unit has been added, to make the Coliseum brilliant and scintillating.

The booths are uniform in size with spacious aisles permitting a free paseage of the visitors and giving ample opportunity for the inspection of the various exhibits. The show is open, that is booths are so installed as to afford perfect vision of the entire exposition.

This is the first and largest display of its kind ever made west of the Mississippi River. It is a testimonial to the strides made by America's new billion-dollar-a-year-industry, the radio. The The booths will contain displays of extraordinary interest to the veteran wireless engineer and particularly to that enormous and enthusiastic army known as "the radio fans or radioists." The devotees of broadcasting will be thrilled at this exhibition. There are 122 separate booths, showing and demonstrating everything that is new and much that is historic in the radio field. The value of the exhibit is estimated to be approximately $250,000. The leading radio manufacturers of the country will present their new lines of receivers, amplifiers, loud speakers, rejuvenators, eliminators, batteries, etc. The cabinets containing the sets represent the highest skill of the cabinet maker, the radio now vieing with the piano in grace of design, finish and material.

Months of Preparation.

This superbly installed show has been the result of months of hard labor and careful thought and study on the part of the officers and directors of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association under whose auspices the show is being held. The committee has worked untiringly to give to the Southwest, a radio exposition second to none held throughout the country. The plans and scope of the proposed show for St. Louis has received the sanction of the National Association. Credit for this achievement is due Colin B. Kennedy, president; Melville B. Hall, first vice-president; Robert W. Bennett, second vice-president; William Borghoff, third vice president; Harold J. Wrape, treasurer; Loren M. Wood, secretary. The board of directors: Colin B. Kennedy, Melville B. Hall, Robert W. Bennett, E. A. Reutner, William Borghaff, Harold J. Wrape, Loren M. Wood, J. S. Cuming, W. A. Ward, George Niekamp. Radio Show Committee: Harry Sachs, chairman; Colin B. Kennedy, Robert Bennett, W. A. Ward. Membership Committee: J. S. Cuming, chairman; S. A. Whitten, Walter H. Dyer, William Borghoff. Publicity Committee: Loren M. Wood, chairman; L. A. Benson, R. F. Novy. Convention Committee: H. C. Priesmeyer, chairman; S. A. Whitten, Scott Gardner, Geo. Van Sickle, C. W. Lockhart, A. H. Leu. Thomas P. Convey, show manager.

The Willard Storage Battery Co. will exhibit a miniature broadcasting station which was one of the features of this company's exhibit at the Radio World's Fair recently held in New York.

A novel display which will be of interest to set owners will be that made by the National Carbon Co. in booths No. 28-29. It will consist of a large demonstration board in charge of experienced operators from the engineering department of the company, who will demonstrate battery drains, proper hook-ups so that set owners can obtain all desired battery information. On this demonstration board it will be possible to duplicate practically any set on the market.

Perhaps the most expensive set in the show will be the Zenith Co.'s 10-tube receiving set, valued at $2000 booth 41.

A particular feature of the Cornish Wire Co., Booth 44, will be the actual manufacture of braided antenna wire. This will be done on a regular braiding machine operated by one-fourth horse-power motor, the finished product will be gathered up on overhead reel, the entire operation being in full view of the public.

The crystal studio, a glass-enclosed room, 20x30, has been installed at the south end of the Coliseum. From this studio the local and visiting announcers will broadcast during the entire show.

Broadcasting from Show.

Directly in front of this studio the Western Electric Co.'s exhibits will occupy space consisting of three booths. The Western Electric Co. is supplying and will install in these booths, equipment of a character which will handle the broadcasted programs from the microphone to the broadcasting stations and simultaneously amplify the broadcasted programs so as to be audible to all who will be present at the show. This equipment is known as "Western Electric Public Address System and Speech In-Put" equipment. Two designs of loud speakers will be used for this purpose.

One, the recently developed 36-inch "cone" type loud speaker and the "Horn" projector type. The equipment used to handle the speech and music from the Crystal Studio is practically the same as that used in the broadcasting stations and its purpose is to amplify faithfully, the voice and music to be broadcast and place it on the wire telephone circuits over which it is transmitted in sufficient volume to be received at the broadcasting station and then passed through the transmitters on to the antenna and broadcast in the air.

The amplifier to be exhibited for this purpose will have incorporated in it a most recent development in engineering and of particular interest will be the new 7 B Potentiometer and the monitor which measures the energy required to transmit the voice or music impulses. This monitor indicates clearly to the engineer and to the public at large who have the opportunity of viewing it, the electrical characteristics of voice and music as they are broadcast.

The Western Electric Co. will also have on display their new A C alternating current power supply amplifier which consists of one stage of audio frequency amplification and in which is used a heavy power tube. This amplifier is used between the radio receiver output and the loud speaker and is specially designed for use with the "cone" type loud speaker, and when so used provides reception over the entire range of audio frequency amplification. By this is meant that the human ear will receive true reproduction of voice or music as it would if present at the original source.

Products of the Scientific Division of the Western Electric Co. will be on display and among these will be the audiphone, an instrument designed to aid the hearing of those who have suffered a considerable loss of hearing and are unable to perceive sound to some extent in one or both ears. There are several types of these instruments ranging from a small portable type which can be worn in the clothing to a large cabinet type designed for permanent installation in the home or office.

Scientific Exhibits.

An instrument which will be of interest to the public is the audiometer. It developed for the medical profession. The function of this instrument is to measure the sharpness and quality of hearing. It is equipped to produce tones of different pitch and intensity and provides means for the accurate measurement of the patient's perception of these tones. The instrument is designed to fulfill the requirement for an extensive and accurate examination of hearing, in all cases. There are several sizes of these instruments on exhibit.

Another product is the Stethoscopes which is an instrument designed for use in the study and diagnosis of the ausculate and pathological condition of the heart and lungs. Its fundamental principle involves the use of a vacuum tube amplifier. This instrument has already won world-wide recognition among the medical fraternity and was the instrument recently used for transmitting the heart beats and lung action of a patient in the Bellevue Hospital in New York, to a meeting of several hundred doctors in the city of Chicago and its performance was a matter of news interest to the country at large. Certain types of stethoscopes will permit a simultaneous examination of a single patient's heart action by as many as 2000 physicians. She larger stethoscopes are particularly adapted for use in the medical colleges and large clinics.

A product of the scientific division which will also be on display is the now world famous artificial larynge which will provide the restoration of speech to those who have through misfortune suffered the loss of their larnyx.

Mr. Robert W. Davis of 100 East Forty-second street, New York City, will be the Western Electric engineer in charge of this exhibit and it will be under his supervision that the apparatus exhibited in the booth will be operated. All the broadcasting stations who have arranged to handle the programs given in the crystal studio, have been offered the use of the Western Electric equipment in broadcasting their programs.

Another exhibit will be that of the St. Louis Public Library where all of the books and magazines published on radio will be on display. This exhibit was made through the co-operation of the Show Committee and Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick, librarian. The exhibit will be installed in Booth 38 and will be under the direction of Miss Mary E. Roemer, librarian of the scientific section of the Public Library.

The Southwest National Trades Association is a business and educational enterprise. There will be no circus or trick features connected with the show. It has been installed and will be conducted on a high scientific and educational plane and the entertainment which will be broadcast over the microphone to the invisible audience and over the Public Address System to the visible audience, has been arranged by the local broadcasting studios with a view of being instructive and entertaining to all. The programs are of such a varied character as to find an appeal to all listeners. In addition to the programs arranged by stations KSD, WIL, WSBF, KFUO, and through the courstesy of the Skouras interests, the Conley-Silverman Radio Orchestra will give concerts over the microphone and through the loud speaker system, thus serving the visible and invisible audience.

Many Buyers Are Here.

The headquarters of the association have been established at the Claridge Hotel and hundreds of buyers throughout the Southwest territory have made reservations. The Southwest National Exposition is so conceived and planned as to appeal strongly to every jobber and dealer and to the general public as well. The newest and latest features in radio, in which the public is so tremendously interested, are on display.

To afford the jobber an opportunity of studying, that he may be informed and answer all radio questions intelligently, the exposition will be open daily every morning, after Monday, from 11 a. m. until 1:00 p. m. for the jobbers exclusively. The show will be open to the general public from 1:00 p. m. until 11:00 p. m. The admission is 50 cents for adults and children alike.

The official opening by Mayor Miller will be made from the Crystal Studio. Thomas P. Convey, manager of the show will introduce Colin B. Kennedy, president of the Colin B. Kennedy Corporation, of the Southwest National Exposition and of the St. Louis Radio Trade Association, who will present Mayor Miller.

Mayor Miller will deliver the opening address to the invisible audience over the microphone and to the visible audience through the Public Address System, thus reaching thousands and thousands of people. Immediately after the formal opening of the show, Miss V. A. L. Jones, announcer of Station KSD, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, will take charge of the crystal studio and will present a number of well known radio artists.

Harold Hough "The Hired Hand" Announcer of Station WBAP, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Fort Worth Texas, will be the guest announcer in the studio with Miss Jones, who will have charge of the studio Monday afternoon and evening. Miss Jones will also be hostess at the studio Tuesday afternoon and Friday evening.

Miss Helen Hatfield, announcer of Station WSBF, Stix, Baer & Fuller, will be the hostess at the crystal studio Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons. Miss Hatfield has arranged attractive programs for the evenings and afternoons in which the studio is in her charge.

Billy Knight, announcer of Station WIL will be the host for Thursday and Saturday nights. Mr. Knight has a large number of popular radio artists who will entertain on these evenings.

C. C. Branhaman, Station WOS, Missouri State Board of Agriculture, Marketing Bureau Division, Jefferson City, Mo., will be the guest announcer Tuesday afternoon and evening.

RADIO WAVES AND STEEL BUILDINGS

Reception Under Ground and Water Possible, But Not Practical for Every Day Use.

We read in the newspapers of people receiving radio programs in safe deposit vaults, in subway tubes under rivers, or under the sea in submarines. There is no question about this; but if someone were to say it is impossible he would be just about right. It can be done, but so badly that it is hardly worth talking about. Metal and salt water block radio waves very effectively. However, they don't do it 100 per cent, and if we have very strong waves from a local station and a very sensitive receiver we can receive signals in places where the task would seem hopeless.

Steel buildings are generally poor places for receiving. The radio waves rebound from the steel framework and very little penetrates into the interior of the structure. The rebounding of the waves is a physical phenomenon identical with the reflection of light from a mirror. It must be remembered that radio waves and light waves are one and the same thing. They are both what physicists call elecromagnetic waves, only light waves are about a billion times shorter than radio waves of the length used in broadcasting.

Much has been written, both mathematically and otherwise, on metallic reflection of light waves. The theory applies to radio waves. Simply stated, it is this: When an electromagnectic wave strikes a metallic surface it induces electric currents in the surface and these currents are such as to start a new electromagnetic wave in the opposite direction. If the metal is a good conductor there is very little loss caused by this action and the reflected wave is practically as strong as the original wave. The electrical conductivity of obstacles in the path of a radio wave is the criterion of whether or not the obstacle will reflect the wave.

Wooden or brick houses are bad electrical conductors and radio waves cannot set up currents in them. They do not reflect, and, therefore, the waves pass right through them.

In steel buildings, however, currents are set up in the girders and reflection occurs. In between girders the waves penetrate somewhat. They bulge into the building in the process of being reflected. This phenomenon may be easily investigated by means of a portable loop set. Near the window of a building of heavy steel construction signals will be strong, but if the set is carried into the interior the signals will get weaker and weaker until they practically disappear.

This shielding effect of steel buildings is very harmful to loop receivers and indoor antennas. Apartment house installations are difficult for this reason. When outside antennas can be used, the trouble is overcome. When outside antennas are not feasible, however, it is important to get at least a little exposure to the radio waves on the outside of the building. A wire hung out of the window is better than a wire run around the moulding of the room. Still better is a wire hung out on the end of a fishing pole. This puts the wire further away from the building and exposes it to stronger waves. The fishing pole, even by itself, is a good antenna. In this case the pole must be made of steel and a wire run from the base of the pole to the radio set.

A phenomenon in connection with the reflection of waves from steel buildings is the rapidity with which the waves fill in behind the building after they have passed over it. There is very little shadow behind the building. This filling in will always occur unless the reflecting body is several times larger than the wave length of the electromagnetic waves.

CONFERENCE ON RADIO CALLED BY HOOVER

Fourth National Meeting Will Go Into Session in Washington Nov. 9.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The fourth national radio conference in the interest of public service has been called by Secretary of Commerce Hoover to meet in Washington on Nov. 9. Representatives of all radio interests are invited to participate, and should consider this notice an invitation to be present.

For the first time the members of the press are called in to represent the public especially in matters affecting broadcasting. Special letters to some 400 magazines and newspapers having radio departments are going out asking that each publication send a delegate to represent the public at the national sessions, which will carry on for about a week. This method of selecting delegates, it is believed, will guarantee to the fans the best possible representation.

The conference, Secretary Hoover points out is called for the general discussion and consideration of matters affecting radio communication in the United States. The delegates called in will represent the following groups: Broadcasters, press associations, radio magazines and newspapers, radio set manufacturers, organized broadcast listeners, amateur organizations, commercial land and marine interests, radio trade associations, Governmental departments, engineers, electric light and farm organizations interested in radio.

The heads of the above organizations and groups should communicate with Secretary Hoover before Oct. 26, advising him who their representatives will be. No person will be recognized as a delegate whose name is not filed with the Commerce Department before the above date.

The major problems scheduled for discussion include: Interests of the listening public in broadcasting; saturation in broadcasting channels and necessity for limitation of stations on basis of public service; requirement of construction permits prior to building of broadcasting stations; wave lengths or frequencies for the several radio communication groups; use of high power in broadcasting; location of stations outside congested centers to prevent interference; allocation of channels with regard to time and geographical distribution; use of broadcasting for publicity; amateur activities; and rebroadcasting. The meeting will be open to the public and opportunity will be afforded to everyone to express views upon any subject under consideration.

In view of the fact that practically the whole art and industry is invited to this conference, it is felt that it is going to be the largest gathering of the many radio clans ever held in this or any other country. Organizations intending to participate are urged to select their delegates and inform the Commerce Department, which is unable to send personal invitations to many through the lack of a complete list of all the organized radio interests.

Radiograms.

The U. S. Government has 300 radio stations.

The total number of broadcasting stations in the United States is 562, of which 453 are Class A, 109 are Class B and 1 is Class C.

Art as Applied to the Loud Speaker

MAKING LOUD SPEAKER AN INTRICATE PROCESS

A Master Phonograph With Amplifiers Is Used to Test the Units.

Making loud speakers as alike as two peas in a pod is neither easy nor simple. It is necessary to test and adjust each one before they can be turned over to the radio fan for service. These tests must be made under conditions that closely approximate those under which they are used.

The best possible test of a loud speaker is to attach it to a radio set, tune in a station, and listen to it. It is not always possible for the manufacturer to do this in actual practice where several thousand loud speakers are finished every day, and during that period of the day when most broadcasting stations are silent. Testing equipment must be designed that will duplicate actual operating conditions.

Frank Reichmann, the oldest manufacturer of loud speaking devices in the United States, has for some time used a system whereby 10 electric phonographs were used to supply music for the testing equipment, located in sound proof booths. An attachment was used on each machine that would automatically play the record over again each time it reached the end. The output of each phonograph was transmitted to a microphone which fed into a standard two stage audio frequency amplifier, giving practically the same volume as received from an ordinary radio receiver.

This system, although fairly simple, required considerable outlay of equipment and frequent attention by the men testing loud speakers. In redesigning the apparatus the engineers decided to change over to a master system, whereby one phonograph and one microphone could furnish music for the entire 10 booths.

The microphone feeds into a single stage of audio frequency as usual, and from there into a circuit that connects the primaries of 10 transformers, one in each booth, together. The secondary of each transformer is connected to a second stage of audio frequency and from there to the horn to be tested. This arrangement leaves nine of the testers free to do nothing else but test loud speakers, while one man has the added duty of keeping the apparatus working.

You need them both . . .

Do you like to be sure of your radio? To know that you can enjoy it whenever you want to? To be completely independent of battery trouble?
Then you need these two Valley units: The Valley B-Eliminator and the Valley Battery Charger.

The Valley B-Eliminator
The Valley B-Eliminator is more than a substitute for B batteries. It is a new and better way of supplying B current.
It takes the place of B batteries and, operating from an ordinary light socket, supplies a steady noiseless flow of B current at a constant voltage all the time.
The Valley B-Eliminator keeps radio at its best. There are no B batteries to wear out, and consequently there can be none of the frying noises due to low B batteries. Volume is maintained. Reception is uniformly good.
Made for receiving sets of from one to eight tubes. Costs less at the start than wet B batteries. Costs less in the long run than dry cells too. More satisfactory than both.

The Valley Battery Charger
The Valley Battery Charger is a simple rectifying unit for charging all radio storage batteries.
Its correct 6-ampere charging rate is economical and quick but safe. With it you can safely recharge a battery overnight.
No liquids, no bulbs. Built on principles which were proved successful long before radio became popular.
With the Valley B-Eliminator to supply B current, and with the Valley Charger to keep your A battery charged and always ready for service, your radio will always be ready for use.

De Forest Genius now Humanizes Radio

MARVELOUS new circuit, just perfected, reproduces flawlessly the mellow, soft modulations of the human voice and captures the hitherto elusive overtones of the musical register . . . tuning simplified . . . a new ease in operation . . . all embodied in the new and beautiful De Forest W5 or W6 Radiophones.

The voice of radio is no longer flinty and metallic, but mellow, human, and musical—thanks to the development by Roy A. Weagant, Vice-President and Chief Engineer of the De Forest Radio Company, of a new and marvelous circuit.

This ingenious circuit, and all the joy it means to radio lovers, makes its first public appearance in the De Forest W5 and W6 Radiophones, masterpieces of cabinet art worthy only of a scientific development so outstanding.

So wonderful is the reproduction of tone in the De Forest W5 or W6 that only the presence of the lovely instrument dispels the illusion that the living artist is in the rooms.

Piano chords come to you with their full rich resonance—true piano tone. High notes dance, ripple and sparkle . . . clearly, distinctly . . . musically! Those brooding low notes, never caught in average reception, are heard distinctly—as though from the next room.

In the reproduction of orchestral music the full importance of the De Forest achievement stands out. For the first time you get the overtones as well as the middle tones . . . the majestic roll of the kettle drums . . . the crooning of the bass viols, the strident crash of the brasses, and the piping heraldry of the cornets and trombones. A symphony orchestra heard over the De Forest W5 or W6 stirs the soul. No incoherence, no oscillating jumble of noise—every instrument, every octave, in its true value. A magic achievement!

To the lover of dance music, the De Forest W5 or W6 brings more sprightliness, more beauties of syncopation . . . you should hear Vincent Lopez, Joseph Knecht, The Night Hawks or any others over either of these instruments.

All the tenderness of song, every shading of the soprano's voice, all the pathos of the folk song—exquisite but elusive elements so much desired but lost in practically all present-day reception, are captured by these De Forest masterpieces.

To everything that is broadcast the De Forest Radiophone gives animation, life and humanness.

But Tonal Supremacy is Not All—

Elbert McGran Jackson, renowned sculptor, architect and painter, put into this hand-wrought, hand-carved cabinet the spirit of radio in design, in motif—it is not an adaptation of a phonograph. An image of charming individuality, it harmonizes with the setting of any home.

One unit, everything self-contained—not a wire in sight, nothing to connect . . . and portable; move it any place! Only charm and beauty for the eye.

The artistic conical reproducer is an inseparable part of the cabinet and its tonal mechanism peerlessly attuned to that of the Weagant circuit. There are just two controls for tuning, and these operate on one dial, which makes the normally perplexing task of "tuning in" extremely simple. There are special power tubes in the fifth and sixth sockets which can give you volume to flood an auditorium, if you desire it. And, at your fingers' tips, the means to tune in a far-distant station you want no matter how powerful nearby stations may be.

See the incomparable De Forest W5 and W6 at your De Forest dealer's or write for an interesting booklet describing these masterpieces in detail.

The Feminine Appeal in Radio

Many Models at the St. Louis Show Will Match the Fittings of the Finest Homes.

By MISS FRANCES ROBINSON, Field Secretary, Radio Corporation of America.

In the early days of broadcasting, radio was chiefly a man's game. Appeal to his love for making models at home, his pleasure in mastering a complicated mechanism and his masculine liking for "junk" were the dominant ideas in the first sets put on the market. This may be called the "storage battery" era, when acid was almost sure to be spilled over the parlor rug and when sweeping and dusting were subordinate to wires and batteries all over the place.

Soon the slogan of "Radio in the home" was coined, and it was realized that radio must make its appeal to those whose domain the home is, the women. Radio design and development began rapidly to proceed along these new lines.

First came the dry-battery tube. This is really a monument to woman's distaste for messiness, and she won a signal victory when storage cells were relegated from the parlor to the attic. Son may soon charge his cells with a home-made rectifier, but mother wants a set with nice, clean dry cells and out-of-sight ones, at that.

Then came simplifying the controls. Father rather liked the old 10-knob sets, for they proved his cleverness in mastering them—when he did! But the lady of the house has no time to try, try again when she wants a little radio music to lighten the burden of sweeping or ironing—she wants to turn on the battery switch, twist one dial to the station she likes best, and then have it work while she sweeps. This explains why the single-circuit receiver proved so popular when it was brought out, and why manufacturers today are stressing the single dial set.

Lastly, woman's influence was clearly shown in the outward design of receivers. No woman ever liked the sight of an ungainly loud speaker on the table or over the set, so receivers with built-in loud speakers found popularity among the women folks. Hand in hand with this came artistic designs of cabinets. The earlier receivers for the home were about as beautiful as varnished cigar boxes, but today milady is not satisfied unless the radio receiver matches the rest of her carefully selected furniture. Home beautiful and radio beautiful owe their development to the women of the home.

Possibly the pendulum has swung just a little too far. Perhaps a trifle too much attention is being placed to outward looks, and not enough to the inner qualities of the set. After all, what a radio receiver must do is bring in stations within a moderate distance, with perfect reproduction and with no distortion or "tinny" sound, and with the least interference from other stations. Beauty of cabinet will not help one iota in these lines. The engineer who designs the radio circuits, the workman who assembles the parts, decides this. This merely by way of a word of caution to the ladies, to choose for performance first, and elegance a close second.

We are going back to storage batteries, too. Some of the newer sets will have "trickle-charge" storage batteries in them, but there will be no danger of spilled acid, so the ladies need have no fear. Others of the latest type of sets will operate right off the lamp socket, so that mother can forget her dearly-learned knowledge of connecting plus to minus when putting in new filament batteries. But the basic principles of beauty, no sloppiness, and performance still remain.

Broadcasting has, of course, kept pace with the swing toward pleasing the real buyer of a radio set, the woman of the house. Prize fights, baseball descriptions, the stock market, used to predominate in broadcasting specialties. Today we have fashion shows described by radio, marketing for the day described by an expert, cooking lessons over the loud speakers, and the like, fast crowding out the masculine specialties.

The transition period from homemade sets to high-grade outfits designed and constructed by reputable manufacturers is passed. Little by little, the last parts-built receiver is being sent up to the attic, and almost universally we find the artistic receiving equipment which women have demanded and are now getting.

ROSTER OF STATIONS REACHES MAXIMUM

New Broadcasters Have Difficulty in Getting on the Air Because of Wavelength Congestion.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—October has started out with a greater number of broadcasting stations in the United States listed with the Department of Commerce than in any month this year. The total on Oct. 1, after the addition and deletions of September had been made, was 578 divided into 113 class B stations, 465 class A stations and one class C plant.

Despite the difficulty which would-be broadcasters have encountered in getting on the air a few have crept through the barriers in practically every month, while the deletions have become fewer and fewer every week.

The Oct. 1 total of 578 stations was a net increase of exactly 31 plants since Jan. 1 and an increase over Sept. 1 of 15 stations, the largest monthly increase for more than a year. The totals for the months since the first of the year follow: Jan. 1, 547; Feb. 1, 562; March 1, 559; April 1, 566; May 1, 570; June 1, 571; July 1, 561; Aug. 1, 563; and Sept. 1, 563.

During September nine stations were dropped from the roll of the broadcasters and 24 new ones added. In addition to the 21 stations licensed since the first of September, three others were added this week, including the class B station of the Albert B. Parfet Co., Port Huron, Mich., and two class A stations, WJBG, the Interstate Radio Incorporated, Charlotte, N. C., 234 meters, 10 watts, and WKBB, Sanders Brothers, Joliet, Ill., 214.2 meters, 100 watts.

The nine deletions were as follows:

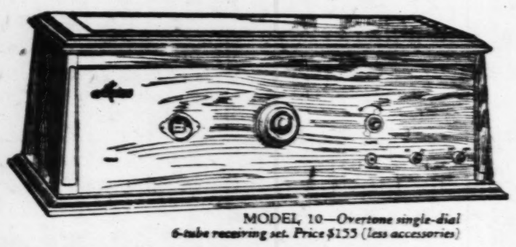
To Enjoy Fine Music by Radio, Beauty of Tone Is Indispensable

"It Is All in the Overtones"

IF your family ENJOYS fine music, either voice or instrument, give them the pleasure of hearing it by radio with a Pfanstiehl Overtone receiver. Every note, every inflection, every syllable, is received exactly as transmitted. You get the full depth and color of voice or music.

What is the use of listening to great artists unless the instrument is capable of conveying very delicately and clearly the charm which is theirs. This requires an extremely faithful reception of the vibrations transmitted. They cannot be distorted in the least or the overtones will be blurred and the tone quality suffer.

Only in the "Overtone" receiver can you get such reception. The Pfanstiehl is an outstanding example. Its tone beauty is supreme. The overtones are reproduced exactly. There is absolutely no inter circuit coupling of stray energy to blur them by clashing with the forward passing radio stream. The pattern of vibrations is intact.



MODEL 10—Overtone single-dial 6-tube receiving set. Price $155 (less accessories)

Listening to a Pfanstiehl is a musical surprise. Operating it is utterly simple. There is but one dial, with which you turn immediately to the wave length desired. And there is an illuminated station finder which you can see in the dark. Complete Pfanstiehl line—prices $85 to $450.

Judge the Valleytone by the results it gives

Are not selectivity and exact reproductions the qualities which you most desire in your radio?

We think so. And in designing the Valleytone 9-Tube Radio Receiver, we have worked to give you both.

The Valley Toroidal Coils of the Valleytone assure unusual selectivity. Stations only four or five meters apart in wave length are brought in as clearly and distinctly as if they were on wave lengths two or three hundred meters apart.

The potential balance gives a balanced tone to the Valleytone. Stations come in with a clear, natural tone.

Judge the Valleytone by results. If you are going to get a radio set, hear and see the Valleytone first.

The Valleytone is mounted in a solid walnut cabinet, finished in two tones with inlaid gold stripes. It may also be procured in beautiful console models. Special Valley tables as shown above with built in loud speaker may be obtained for the cabinet model.

KSD TO BROADCAST FROM SHOW STUDIO

Many Other Interesting Features Are on This Station's Schedule for the Week.

KSD broadcasting schedule this week will be one of the most interesting this season. Monday evening KSD will open the Radio Show at the Coliseum and will broadcast all evening, beginning at 8 o'clock. In addition to the opening exercises of the show the station will present in its program an internationally famous artist, Bruno Steindel, violoncellist, who will make his first appearance before the microphone on that occasion. Steindel who now is a member of the Chicago Civic Opera Association, belongs to the famous family of Steindels, all artists, and an uncle of Max Steindel, solo cellist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. In his program tomorrow night Bruno Steindel will be assisted by his nephew and Mrs. Esmeralda Berry Mayes, pianist, of St. Louis. Other artists on the program will be Arthur Joseffy, well-known oratorio baritone, and Margaret Dee, concert pianist.

KSD also will broadcast three afternoons this week from the Radio Show; namely, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, presenting orchestral music chiefly, although the solo artist, Mrs. Mildred B. Boland, soprano, has been booked for Monday afternoon. This afternoon broadcasting will, it is announced, be contingent upon world series baseball games, and will be omitted if the games in the world series are played during the period booked for broadcasting from the Coliseum.

Friday night is another evening scheduled for KSD broadcasting at the Radio Show. One part of the program for that evening will be given by the Conley-Silverman Orchestra, with Helene Hellweg, soprano, popular local vocalist, as soloist, and Mrs. Dorothy Coates Poe, formerly solo harpist of the Chicago Civic Opera Association, will present the "Commerce Hour" program at 7:30, which also will be broadcast from the crystal studio at the Coliseum.

The public session of the national convention of the American Red Cross, which is scheduled for Tuesday night, at the Scottish Rite Cathedrals will be broadcast in its entirety. This program will include a concert by the Sixth U. S. Infantry Band from Jefferson Barracks, Karl Schmidt, leader, and addresses by Melville E. Stone, former general manager of the Associated Press; Earl Kilpatrick, assistant director of Red Cross disaster relief in the Missouri-Illinois-Indiana tornado area, and William C. Dawes, president of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce. Dawes is a brother of Vice President Charles G. Dawes and has, it is said, much of the same forcefulness and

In his program tomorrow night Bruno Steindel will be assisted by his nephew and Mrs. Esmeralda Berry Mayes, pianist, of St. Louis. Other artists on the program will be Arthur Joseffy, well-known oratorio baritone, and Margaret Dee, concert pianist.

KSD also will broadcast three afternoons this week from the Radio Show; namely, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, presenting orchestral music chiefly, although one solo artist, Mrs. Mildred B. Ireland, soprano, has been booked for Monday afternoon. This afternoon broadcasting will, it is announced, be contingent upon world series baseball games, and will be omitted if the games in the world series are played during the period booked for broadcasting from the Coliseum.

Friday night is another evening scheduled for KSD broadcasting at the Radio Show. One part of the program for that evening will be given by the Conley-Silverman Orchestra, with Helene Hellweg, soprano, popular local vocalist, as soloist, and Mrs. Dorothy Coates Coe, formerly solo harpist of the Chicago Civic Opera Association, will present the "Commerce Hour" program at 7:30, which also will be broadcast from the crystal studio at the Coliseum.

The public session of the national convention of the American Red Cross, which is scheduled for Tuesday night, at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, will be broadcast in its entirety. This program will include a concert by the Sixth U. S. Infantry Band from Jefferson Barracks, Karl Schmidt, leader, and addresses by Melville E. Stone, former general manager of the Associated Press; Earl Kilpatrick, assistant director of Red Cross disaster relief in the Missouri-Illinois-Indiana tornado area, and William R. Dawes, president of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce. Dawes is a brother of Vice President Charles G. Dawes and has, it is said, much the same forcefulness and straight-from-the-shoulder manner which characterizes his brother's public addresses.

Wednesday night the Missouri Athletic Association dinner music will be broadcast and Saturday night the program will be the music presented at the Grand Central Theater.

Mayor's Proclamation on Radio Show

THERE are those now living who can recall the time when there were no railroads, telegraphs, telephones, electric lights, automobiles, moving pictures, wireless messages, airplanes or radios, no antiseptic surgery or germ theory of disease.

If commensurate advancement is made in the next 90 years as has been made in the last, I hesitate to predict the extent to which human knowledge and communication may be carried.

The week of Oct. 12 will be celebrated as "Radio week." This, the last and what seemed to many the most remarkable invention and discovery of the ages, will be celebrated throughout the country by special programs.

To the end that the citizens may have this matter brought vividly to their attention, I, Victor J. Miller, Mayor of the City of St. Louis, do hereby proclaim the week of Oct. 12 to 17 as "Radio week" and trust that all citizens who can will tune in Monday evening, Oct. 12, and throughout the week on the Crystal Studio of the Southwest National Radio Exposition, St. Louis Coliseum, from which Stations KSD, WSBF and WIL will broadcast special programs, and enjoy the wonderful entertainment that will be in store for them. (Signed)

VICTOR J. MILLER,
Mayor of St. Louis.

NEW ARRIVALS

The Minute model R-81 Thompson receiver, one of the latest sets to appear on the market, is unique in design and construction. It is housed in a round or circular cabinet which also contains the loudspeaker and space for all A and B batteries. The unit, which is a five-tube dry battery receiver, is built into a cylindrical cabinet 18½ inches in diameter. The front part of this cylinder holds the cone type loudspeaker. Around the periphery of the cone is a large scale which indicates the tuning positions and also movable around the periphery of the cone and inside of the adjacent circular scale is a knob or handle which tunes all the wants of the receiver simultaneously. In the lower half of the cylindrical cabinet is a battery compartment which holds all the necessary batteries for operating the set. A push pull battery switch located in base which supports the cylinder permits the filaments of the tubes to be turned on and off while in the right and left corners of the base are the volume and filament control knobs.

An adapter is being made now by the Radio Corporation of America which permits the use of the new UX 120 radiotron power amplifier in the standard type of radiola super heterodyne, which formerly used only 199 tubes. The tube is first placed in the adapter and the latter is then inserted in the old socket. The UX 120 radiotron is intended to be used in the last stage of audio amplification of any set that uses 199 tubes. The results of such a combination is said to be greater in volume than standard storage battery tubes operated under the same conditions. Provision has been made in the adapter for the additional C battery necessary for the power amplifier tube.

The De Forest Radio Co. of Jersey City, N. J., is now marketing a radiation preventor designed for use on either ready-made or home-made receivers. It is enclosed in a small bakelite case of about the same dimensions as an ordinary tube socket. The device is said to sharpen the tuning of a set as well as to increase the sensitivity. No additional current or tubes are needed in order to operate the radiation preventor. This instrument is said to permit the owner to enjoy all the benefits of regeneration and at the same time know that his set is not oscillating to the discomfort of his neighbors.

R. J. Siegelack of Sheepshead Bay, Long Island, N. Y., has a radio receiving set built in three sections, containing 23 tubes. Five loud speakers are distributed at various points throughout his house. The equipment cost $3000.

Radio station WRW of Tarrytown, N. Y., broadcasts police alarms at 9:10 and 11 p. m., so that police stations throughout the country may get information as to events in other communities, with a special view to the capture of automobile thieves, porch climbers and motorists who leave the scene of accident.

Acoustics by Brandes

ACOUSTICS is the science of sound. Radio acoustics is the science of transforming electrical impulses into audible sound—the absorbing study of radio reproduction. And in this field Brandes have been pioneers since 1908.

Brandes recently announced a new, complete line of speakers that bring out a wealth of tones that heretofore were muffled and lost.

Yes, really better radio!

In the middle register—the speaking voice—most of the good speakers are thoroughly satisfactory.

But—and this is the real test—tune in a piano solo. Listen to the high notes. And the low. Listen to the piano accompaniment of a song or a violin solo. You'll notice that a Brandes brings out a full range of perfectly natural tones. A mellow, complete harmony—with not a trace of nasal tone.

Test these speakers yourself

There's really only one way to buy a radio speaker. Hear as many as you choose. Test them thoroughly. You will find that the Brandes Speakers have more tones, fuller harmonies, wider range—and that they speak and sing with a very definite and satisfying reality.

The Type H—a simple horn of graceful lines and antique green and black finish. Great in volume—true in tone. Adjustable by the turn of a thumbscrew $18

The Phonograph Attachment—a splendid speaker with any good phonograph. Same unit as Type H horn. Adjustable, and furnished with a connection to fit all phonographs. $10

The Superior Matched Tone Headset is now, as always, ideal to tune in with—to listen undisturbed and undisturbing. Offered at a new low price $4.50

The Brandes Cabinet of mahogany finished in walnut brown. The same unit, quality of tone, and even greater volume than the Type H Speaker $30

The Adjustable Table-Talker. Gooseneck horn for clearer, rounded tone. Finished in brown—felt-padded base. Adjustable. A most satisfactory buy for $10

The Brandes Cone—a truly decorative bit of furniture that conceals a remarkable speaker $50

The Audio-Transformer—amplifies at an unusually high ratio—1 to 5. Two steps of amplification may be used without transformer distortion . . $4

WHAT LISTENERS SAY OF HIGH-POWER TEST

Fading Less Noticeable, but Opinion Differ as to Volume and Quality.

By C. J. YOUNG,
Radio Engineer of General Electric Company.

Now that several schedules of super-power broadcasting have been transmitted, the following statement by the radio engineers of the General Electric Co. will be of considerable interest to those who are following this recent development. Careful conclusions are given, based on the first tests which were carried out at the request of the United States Department of Commerce. The data on the more recent transmissions is not yet sufficiently digested to be included now.

Some thousands of letters were received by the company on the tests of Aug. 23, 24 and 25, and they have been of great assistance in permitting a careful analysis of the value of super-power in furthering the cause of a universal broadcast service. It is hoped that the listeners will respond as helpfully in further series of tests. Their co-operation is essential in improving broadcasting.

Fifteen hundred letters selected at random have been carefully recorded by diving them into groups, following the method suggested by the Department of Commerce. All statements of signal strength, for example, were separated into three groups, according to whether they reported the 50 kw. equal to the 2.5 kw., the 50 kw. twice the 2.5 kw., or the 50 kw. signal more than twice the 2.5 kw. Quality reports were grouped so as to separate those reporting the 50 kw. better, those reporting the 2.5 kw quality better and those reporting equal quality.

Fading, sharpness of tuning, and the answers to the other questions were divided in a similar way. Then all the letters in each group were counted and averages taken to show the true general feeling of the public in each case.

In drawing conclusions from such a test it must be remembered that there are naturally many conflicting reports. Some listeners may have peculiarly bad locations and others good ones, so that their observations conflict with the average. But the average is, nevertheless, the best index of the general satisfaction with the transmission.

Most of the letters state that the super-power was more than twice as loud as the ordinary power and a number have been received where the increase was ten to one. Thirty per cent of the reports say that there is no choice between the two in quality, and the remainder are fairly evenly split in favor of one or the other transmission. Fading is shown to have had much less effect on high power. Reports on the sharpness of tuning are practically unanimous in showing that it was just as easy to tune out the high power as the regular set, only a very few of the letters complaining of any "blanketing effect" due to the high power.

In general the super-power produced the desired effect of increasing the signals at a distance without unduly preventing reception of other stations near the transmitter. This represents a real advance in the art of broadcasting. And the quality of high power as shown by the last two nights of the test can be made perfect by skilled design of transmitters.

We look forward to the further co-operation of the public in sending us reports of our transmission, so that we may make the best use of our extensive developmental facilities at the South Schenectady laboratory.

Antenna Tips.

When using a tree for the support of the far end of an aerial, attach three or four ordinary screen door springs hooked "in parallel." This will keep the wire tight and prevent it from breaking if the tree sways with the wind. If the springs are covered with vaseline before they are installed in the aerial, corrosion will be forestalled and they will be good for a long time. Do not run the antenna right up into the branches of the tree. Keep the tree end of the antenna at least five or six feet away from any branches.

An insulated wire will pick up the broadcast programs just as easily as a bare wire, as the waves penetrate the covering without the least difficulty. If the lead-in is insulated it will act as a part of the aerial.

A Message of Welcome From Show's President

As president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association, I wish to extend a hearty invitation to the people of St. Louis and its surrounding territory to visit the Southwest Radio Trades Exposition, which opens at the Coliseum Monday, October 12, at 1 p. m. and continues daily from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m. through Saturday, October 17.

The opening of this exhibition is particularly timely. Never has there been so intense an interest in radio reception as is now displayed. Never have broadcast programs been so entertaining and educational, and at no time have the facilities for receiving these programs in the home been brought to such a state of perfection as they have this season.

This exposition will be one of the most comprehensive ever staged in St. Louis. There will be more than 120 separate exhibit booths in which over 180 different lines of radio receivers and radio equipment will be shown. With such an elaborate array of exhibits, the public will have an unusual opportunity to compare and inspect all that is attractive in the radio world.

Without question, the exposition will demonstrate the wonderful advances that have been made in this most fascinating of human inventions and should prove of intense interest to all who like to keep abreast with radio's "march of progress."

NEED FOR LAWS TO GOVERN RADIO

Broadening of the Field of This New Means of Communication Presents International Problems.

By CARL H. BUTMAN.

Anything that relates to the high seas, where ships of all nations sail, must be regulated by international laws. Radio in its very inception related almost exclusively to these highways of maritime commerce, hence international laws were necessary. Although it might seem that the existence of the international radio regulations would have hindered developments, it was really the best thing that could have happened for radio that the laws preceded its general adoption.

It has been pointed out that the absence of any national laws covering commercial aviation in this country has handicapped the development of this great potential highway for transportation. Such laws are now being sought in the hope that air navigation may be developed here as a commercial aid.

Had radio developed ashore first, each country would have had its own ideas and regulations—probably all different — which would have handicapped the universal adoption of radio. But it developed at sea, where all nations were represented and consequently a more or less standard agreement was reached at an early date.

While our first national laws did not anticipate broadcasting and later amendments were not specific regarding broadcasting, there were primary laws governing land stations in existence prior to the time radio came into general public use. And to say the least, they aided in keeping the air lanes open to traffic and the stations in hand, preventing a bedlam of interference such as would have occurred if all had broadcast on any wave lengths they chose.

Communication conferences now under way and scheduled for the near future should interest every listener and amateur, as well as all those engaged in the radio industry. It is these international and national conferences which establish the regulations essential to systematic and efficient communication. To be sure the international conferences have little to do with national broadcasting, but they may have to direct or supervise international broadcasting and amateur transmissions.

There is in session today in Paris a world conference on telegraphy. It is known as the International Telegraph Conference, and although the United States is not a party to this convention, the U. S. Senate never having ratified it, we have, never the less, three delegates present, by invitation. These representatives of the United States are Mr. Beaver White, of Philadelphia, Hon. Wallace H. White, of Maine, and Gen. Charles McK. Saltzman, U. S. Army. They are sitting in with the other world delegates to discuss, but not to vote on, the many phases of world-wide telegraphic communications. One of the questions being considered is whether radio should be included in this telegraph convention. Our delegates, it is felt, will protest against such a move, else our world radio conference, scheduled to be held in Washington next spring to which the representatives of forty-two nations have been invited, would be almost unnecessary. This conference is to revise the International Radiotelegraph Convention signed at London in 1912. Obviously if the general subject of radio was included in the present telegraphic sessions in Paris—in which proceedings we have no vote—and all the regulations of universal radio communication were formulated and adopted, there would be little to discuss here next spring at the radio convention beyond purely technical questions, of interest only to the radio engineers. United States would be outside the world circle, practically alone without a voice as to its desires and preferences in radio regulations affecting transoceanic and ship to shore messages. If these telegraph regulations included radio, they would probably affect international broadcasting and amateur activities to a considerable extent. None of us would welcome such a change. However, as we do not know how much weight the American protest will have, we can only wait and see if radio is included.

It is hard not to confuse the two world conventions: The convention to which we subscribe is the radio telegraph convention, sometimes called the London convention, which in 1912, included some of the old St. Petersburg laws promulgated to cover wired telegraphy in 1875. The United States Senate ratified it in 1913, and our private companies operate under this convention. In the spring the next radio conference meets here; so far only a few of the larger nations have accepted, but it is felt certain the other world powers and many of the smaller countries will soon signify their intention of sending delegates. Some are undoubtedly awaiting the adjournment of the telegraph convention in Paris. The present radio-telegraph articles include agreements between the high-contracting parties regarding public service via radio between ships and between ships and shore.

The other convention—that in session in Paris—is the telegraph convention, to which we have never agreed. It was originally conceived at St. Petersburg in 1875, and amended in Lisbon in 1908. It is often referred to as the Berne Convention, because that city is the headquarters of the international bureau which regulates telegraphic communication. Due to its great use, practically the world over, its own private cable and radio companies having offices in countries have to comply with these telegraph regulations. At present they include only one section of radio; that covers ship telegrams between ships at sea and shore stations. Land stations do not attempt to communicate with each other over any distance at the time of the adoption of these regulations. However, it is suggested by many European governments that the whole field of radio be included.

There is a probability that these conventions will eventually be combined into one general electrical communication convention for the world. And there is good reason for this. What sort of service would the cable and radio stations give us if they were not connected with the land wire telegraph systems? Delivery would be slow, if it possible at all. Probably the definition of a telegram will always mean a written message sent by electric energy, over wires, cables and through the ether. Some part of the trip of every cable and radio telegram today goes over land telegraph wires, unless the two correspondents are sitting in the cable or radio offices of New York or San Francisco and London or Tokio.

In 1920, delegates from the United States, Powers, during the World War, met in Washington to formulate a plan for a Universal Electric Communication Union. It never materialized, perhaps because the United States Government sponsors, who were practically all Government-ownership men, went out of office. It looks now as if it would be tried out by combining the radio and telegraph conventions. At least it seems awkward to operate under two conventions independent of each other. Today our only practical objection to the telegraph convention is that here our telegraph and telephone companies are privately owned and operated, whereas abroad they are under Government-owned. It is said that some of the private communication companies fear the Government might take over the control of communications, supervising rates, etc., just as the Interstate Commerce Commission supervises and regulates interstate railway rates and traffic. However, the American communication service—cable and radio—are believed efficient and their rates reasonable, being controlled by the way of competition between these services themselves.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 3.—"Darn those kids."

C. W. Dimick, president of the Lancaster Theater, his hands behind his back and a worried frown shadowing his countenance, paced the aisles of the playhouse casting distracted glances toward the balcony.

But the hubbub persisted. "Hey Skinny," came a raucous shout from one corner. "Aw, sit down and let the rest of us see somethin'," came a high pitched reply from another. And then a chorus of bickerings and squabbles by the ensemble.

It was the kids' afternoon at the motion picture theater and President Dimick's afternoon of headaches.

"Darn those kids. I'll have to find something to keep them quiet."

That was five years ago. And President Dimick did find a way to keep them quiet. As a direct result, a sextet and a chorus of 50 children will make their initial bow to the radio audience in an unusual program which will attract young and adult to Westinghouse Station WBZ on Thursday evening, Oct. 8.

The children's chorus, known as the Lancaster Theater Chorus, began when Mr. Dimick had slides of popular songs flashed upon the screen and requested all the children in the house to rise and sing aloud, because he had noticed that they became noisy after they had been seated about an hour. The idea was highly successful. After singing for about 10 minutes, the children were satisfied to remain quiet—their restlessness had vanished. Mr. Dimick continued the plan for several Saturday afternoons and noticing that the voices of many of the children were exceptionally good, he decided to develop them. He picked a chorus of 100 children and engaged R. L. Harlow of Filenes, who has written and directed many musical comedies, to train them, all between the ages of 6 and 12 years, representing 19 nationalities. Every Saturday afternoon there is a musical intermission, during which the children rise and sing many songs under the direction of Mr. Harlow. This musical period is always closed with the singing of "America the Beautiful."

A special rehearsal room adjoining the theater was constructed where the children are permitted to go any time during the week and rehearse with Miss Frise, organist at the theater. Regular rehearsals are held every Saturday morning by Mr. Harlow. The manner in which the children have taken hold of this idea has greatly exceeded the expectations and hopes of both President Dimick and Mr. Harlow. Only those children who possess musical talent and desire training with all their hearts belong to the chorus, the others having been weeded out. Incidentally there is a waiting list of over 100 so that when one child moves out of town there is another ready to step in.

Important as this musical citizenship training is, however, the story would be incomplete without the background against which it is

C. W. Dimick, president of the Lancaster Theater, his hands behind his back and a worried frown shadowing his countenance, paced the aisles of the playhouse casting distracted glances toward the balcony.

But the hubbub persisted. "Hey Skinny," came a raucous shout from one corner. "Aw, sit down and let the rest of us see sumethin'," came a high pitched reply from another. And then a chorus of bickerings and squabbles by the ensemble.

It was the kids' afternoon at the motion picture theater and President Dimick's afternoon of headaches.

"Darn those kids. I'll have to find something to keep them quiet."

That was five years ago. And President Dimick did find a way to keep them quiet. As a direct result, a sextet and a chorus of 50 children will make their initial bow to the radio audience in an unusual program which will attract young and adult to Westinghouse Station WBZ on Thursday evening, Oct. 8.

The children's chorus, known as the Lancaster Theater Chorus, began when Mr. Dimick had slides of popular songs flashed upon the screen and requested all the children in the house to rise and sing aloud, because he had noticed that they became noisy after they had been seated about an hour. The idea was highly successful. After singing for about 10 minutes, the children were satisfied to remain quiet—their restlessness had vanished. Mr. Dimick continued the plan for several Saturday afternoons and noticing that the voices of many of the children were exceptionally good, he decided to develop them. He picked a chorus of 100 children and engaged R. L. Harlow of Filenes, who has written and directed many musical comedies, to train them, all between the ages of 6 and 12 years, representing 19 nationalities. Every Saturday afternoon there is a musical intermission, during which the children rise and sing many songs under the direction of Mr. Harlow. This musical period is always closed with the singing of "America the Beautiful."

A special rehearsal room adjoining the theater was constructed where the children are permitted to go any time during the week and rehearse with Miss Frise, organist at the theater. Regular rehearsals are held every Saturday morning by Mr. Harlow. The manner in which the children have taken hold of this idea has greatly exceeded the expectations and hopes of both President Dimick and Mr. Harlow. Only those children who possess musical talent and desire training with all their hearts belong to the chorus, the others having been weeded out. Incidentally there is a waiting list of over 100 so that when one child moves out of town there is another ready to step in.

Important as this musical citizenship training is, however, the story would be incomplete without the background against which it is set, the unique basis on which the theater is conducted.

Any crippled child, any deformed child, any deaf or dumb child "owns the theater," to quote Mr. Dimick. They need never purchase a ticket and may always walk in past the gateman; but under two conditions—every boy must remove his hat before the gateman will admit him and no children are admitted under any circumstances before school is out in the afternoon. It is useless to play hookey in the hope of going to the movies."

The work which is being done by Mr. Dimick and Mr. Harlow is creating wide attention throughout Massachusetts.

The radio program, in addition to selections by the entire chorus will consist of solos, duets, trio and sextet numbers.

The total spent on radio last year is estimated at $350,000,000. Of this amount $45,000,000 was spent for batteries, both dry and storage.

The frequency of a generator is equal to the number of poles multiplied by the number of revolutions per minute, divided by two. The product is divided by two because half of the poles are of opposite sign and there are only half the changes in linkings that there are poles.

To Charge a Battery.

A storage battery can only be charged by a direct current, and when charging, the positive wire of the charging current must be connected to the positive of the battery and the negative to the negative. The voltage of the charging current should be somewhat greater than that of the battery, while the amperage should not be above one-tenth of the capacity. When a battery is charged or discharged very quickly it will overheat, and the paste will fall out of the grids. Not only will this prevent the battery from taking a charge, but it will short circuit the plates at the bottom. For this reason the battery must be charged slowly.

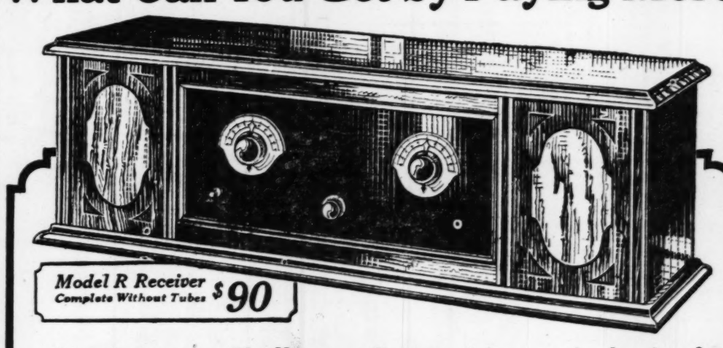
Built and wired complete in the new ALL-AMERICAN factory, the Model R Receiver is offered as an ideal example of the solid value which a thoroughly equipped and experienced organization can build into a product.

Compare this receiver with any set you have ever admired or wished to own—disregarding, for the moment, the entire question of price. Compare the construction—and check each of the six vital principles of value as briefly outlined below.

Then, apply the final critical test—compare the performance. After that—and not until then—remember the price at which the ALL-AMERICAN Model R is offered and ask yourself this question:

What Can You Get by Paying More?



Model R Receiver Complete Without Tubes $90

ALL-AMERICAN Challenges Comparison on the basis of the Six Vital Principles of Solid Value in Radio Receivers

1 Quality of Tone — The Model R Receiver is equipped with Rauland-Lyric laboratory-grade transformers—designed especially for music lovers, and the choice of music critics.

2 Ease in Tuning — Two dials (360° type, all markings always visible while tuning) control the ALL-AMERICAN Straight-Line-Frequency TUNING, reaching all broadcast wave channels and eliminating all crowding of low-wave stations.

3 Quietness — ALL-AMERICAN Toroids practically eliminate the stray noises which ordinary coils pick up. Rauland-Lyric tone amplification results in a remarkable quietness.

4 Selectivity — Extreme sharpness of tuning has been achieved solely through improved condenser and inductance design, without impairing tone quality.

5 Sensitiveness to Distant Signals — The ALL-AMERICAN Tuned-Radio-Frequency system results in a sensitiveness which challenges comparison with any other set made, irrespective of the number of tubes.

6 Appearance and Serviceability — The beautiful two-tone walnut cabinet, with inlaid designs, has ample space within it for all batteries or for a "B" socket-power if preferred.

Due to the unsatisfactory results now being obtained from the Brussels station, there is a movement to transfer it to new quarters, probably in Antwerp, with a relay station at Brussels.

The preliminary emissions from the Daventry super-power station have been quite successful. At first it was complained that the numbers were a bit ragged, but that seems to have been overcome, and it is agreed that the new station is better than its defunct brother at Chelmsford. Heretofore, the broadcasts have consisted mostly of programs from other B. B. C. stations, but a 5XX staff is to be developed and better programs may be expected in the future.

B. B. C. now claims that fully 90 per cent of the population of the United Kingdom is within crystal set range of a broadcasting station.

SHIPS ARE NOW OFF THE BROADCAST BAND

The actual strength of the broadcasting industry is indicated through the recent action of the United States, British and Canadian Government in ordering all their vessels to keep off the broadcasting waves when within 250 miles of the shores of these countries. Fans here and abroad will rejoice, but the old marine radio operators will certainly be astounded.

Considering that the ships were the first to employ radio as a practical means of communication, and that they always have been considered first relative to the best channels for communication, this decision reveals the trend of power toward broadcasting and its satisfactory reception.

The ships, however, are provided for in that they will continue to use the old distress call wave length, that is, 600 meters, and some channels above, far enough from the broadcast band, are not to cause interference even when used near the shores.

According to statements issued by the State and Commerce Departments, commencing Oct. 1, all ships flying the United States, British, Irish or Canadian flags will be prohibited from using the 300 and 450 meter wave lengths, when within 250 miles of the shores of the three countries. A similar arrangement was made early this year between Canada and the States relative to the abandoning of these ship channels on the Great Lakes.

"It is expected," the statement points out, "that this arrangement will aid materially in preventing interference with the reception of programs offered by broadcasting stations in the United States." Reception by fans in the other signatory nations will also be benefited, of course. A few years ago, however, no one would have ventured to predict that any other use of these marine wave lengths would ever be made. However, there is mutual benefit to be derived from the new agreement, since the ships themselves will now be free from broadcast interference.

Abuse Ruins Set.

Although a receiving set is constructed with the greatest care and strongest materials obtainable, it will not withstand hard usage and continue to give efficient results. Many operators will twirl dials, poke into the works and jab in the phone or loud-speaker plugs with unthinking violence — and then wonder why their set does not remain perfect forever. A radio set will stand up under a great deal of abuse, but eventually, if continuously subjected to harsh treatment, something will give way or loosen, effectiveness will be reduced. The delicate wiring, adjustments and connections must be regarded with the same care that a person would exercise toward the timing gears, carburetor adjustment or valves of an automobile.

HOW RADIO SERVICE WATCHES FOR STORMS

Vagrant Disturbance Like That Which Destroyed Shenandoah Could Not Be Forecast.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Warning of the storm that wrecked the pride of the navy and cost the lives of 14 brave men could not have been flashed to the Shenandoah by radio because of the quickness with which it arose.

This is the opinion of experts of the Weather Bureau who assert that the Shenandoah would certainly have been warned and the disaster possibly averted if the storm could have been forecast.

The public generally would be surprised to learn of the nature and extent of the meteorological service of the Weather Bureau in aid of aviation, and that special accommodations are provided in the forecast room for representatives of the air service of the army and navy.

Telegraphic and radio weather reports come in twice a day to the forecaster from about 275 observing stations in all parts of the country and Canada. As fast as they are received, these representatives of flying services copy on their charts any information important to aviators, and telephone the route forecasts directly to certain flying fields. At times, special service is asked for and received by fields undertaking some unusual flying feat.

Futhermore, the full system of morning and afternoon telegraphic weather reports received at Washington and the regular and special forecasts are sent by messenger to the Navy Department and are promptly sent by telegraph or wireless to Lakehurst for use by the Navy meteorological officer of that place.

Conditions which are unusual or dangerous for flyers receive prompt attention at the Washington forecasting station and at each of the other four district forecast centers, located at Chicago, New Orleans, Denver and San Francisco. Weather information, forecasts and warnings for the group of States comprised within a district are issued from these centers, always with aviation interests in mind.

Direct service is given as conditions and facilities warrant. Local service is also rendered by officials at about 125 field stations of the Weather Bureau. It must be borne in mind in connection with the hazards of flying that the most any meteorological service can do is to give information and warnings; aviators frequently disregard warnings of approaching storms or other poor flying conditions, believing themselves competent to fly in spite of unfavorable weather, just as a ship's captain may put out to sea fully armed with knowledge of bad conditions ahead, but sure of his ability to manage his vessel nevertheless, or hoping for better conditions than those predicted.

Radio service is supplied twice daily for the benefit of marine and aviation interests on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Weather bulletins and forecasts are broadcast from the Arlington (Va.) naval radio station at 10:30 a. m. and at

REAL TEST FOR RADIO COMPASS

The Naval radiomen at the [illegible] stone Point, Alaska, radio [illegible] station have been commended by the master of the Argentine [illegible] veyor ship "Canada," which was operating with the Argentine [illegible] flight last July.

This vessel was laboring under great difficulties, having had its standard compass smashed by heavy seas and her log [illegible] away, when she called the [illegible] stone radio station for a bearing. Furthermore, she was at an unknown distance from the [illegible] shore and navigating slowly in a bad fog.

Thirteen radio bearings were transmitted to the vessel between 4 a. m. and 6 p. m., guided her through the fog into Crose Sound. Once [illegible] in, the skipper of the "Canada" radioed his thanks to the radio men at Soapstone Point, telling Radioman W. E. Reilly, in charge, that it was solely through their aid and his radio compass that he made the dangerous passage.

This successful radio-compass navigation in very dangerous waters, the Navy points out, is but one example of the great value of [illegible] radio bearings given ships by the Naval compass service.

For a loud speaker, it is necessary to have a set employing [illegible] four or five tubes.

An insulated wire will pick up the broadcast programs just as easily as a bare wire, as the current penetrates the covering without the least difficulty. If the lead-in is insulated it will act as a part of the aerial.

These bulletins include any reports received too late for the regular morning or evening forecast and as a special feature summarize general atmospheric conditions, barometric readings at high and low centers, wind and weather forecasts for offshore areas, storm warnings and flying weather forecasts. In each of six aviation zones. During the hurricane season additional ship reports are received by radio from the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea and distributed in connection with this service.

Aviators flying in any of the three zones served by the special Pacific bulletins issued from the San Francisco radio station receive information about 9 a. m. based on 5 a. m. observations of the same day, and at 7:30 p. m. based on 5 p. m. observations, except for those taken at Alaska, Honolulu, Guam, Manila, China and Japan, at slightly different hours. ULTRA RED SIGNALING, RADIO'S FIRST COUSIN

Vacuum Tubes Are Used and All Communications Can Be Made Direct and Secret.

By Carl H. Butman.

Early in the World War, a new means of practically secret signaling was developed by a number of American engineers and representatives of the army and navy. It was first termed infra-red signaling, but later came to be known as "Dyscrasite."

It is not radio, but operates through the medium of infra-red light waves, which are invisible to the eye. As a conventional vacuum-tube receiver is used for reception and amplification of signals, and because a telegraph key or telephonic apparatus is employed to control a light beam, the system of communication may be of interest to radio fans.

In the fall of 1914, T. W. Case of the Case Research Laboratories discovered and reported upon the peculiar properties of lead antimony sulphide, when the long red rays of the spectrum fell upon a crystal of this chemical. First it was tried out in detecting the approach of electric cars, or rather detecting their powerful headlights in New Auburn, N. Y. In this first experiment the tests showed results at a distance of about 800 [illegible]

ULTRA RED SIGNALING, RADIO'S FIRST COUSIN

Vacuum Tubes Are Used and All Communications Can Be Made Direct and Secret.

By Carl H. Butman.

Early in the World War, a new means of practically secret signaling was developed by a number of American engineers and representatives of the army and navy. It was first termed infra-red signaling, but later came to be known as "Dyscrasite."

It is not radio, but operates through the medium of infra-red light waves, which are invisible to the eye. As a conventional vacuum-tube receiver is used for reception and amplification of signals, and because a telegraph key or telephonic apparatus is employed to control a light beam, the system of communication may be of interest to radio fans.

In the fall of 1916, T. W. Case of the Case Research Laboratories, discovered and reported upon the peculiar properties of lead antimony sulphide, when the long red rays of the spectrum fell upon a crystal of this chemical. First it was tried out in detecting the approach of electric cars, or rather detecting their powerful headlights in New Auburn, N. Y. In this first experiment the tests showed results at a distance of about 800 feet. Refinements, however, with better lights, filters and electrical galvanometers, increased the range to about a mile. The Sperry people became interested and further tests followed under the observations of army and navy officers, who evinced interest in connection with the possibility of secret signaling in battle and at sea. A two-mile test was successfully conducted both at night and in daylight between the Sperry Building and the Woolworth tower, and upon reports of this success in 1917, Gen. Squier, chief signal officer of the army, suggested a 10-mile test.

It was this more military trial which led to the desire for making the received signals audible, and special vacuum tubes were developed. It was found that the pitch of the received signal note varied in wireless head phones with the intensity of the light on the filter. The ultimate distance reached with this improved means was about eight miles.

England became interested, and Lord Northcliffe witnessed a demonstration, following which he expressed a belief that it might serve in front line trenches as a means of secret signaling.

Later, further tests carried the range to 18 miles or from Fort Hancock in New York Harbor to the Woolworth Building, and another test indicated good reception of signals from the shore to a vessel at sea.

The Navy Department in discussing the possibilities reported that it might serve as a method of invisible signalling between the vessels of a convoy proceeding without lights, and that it would probably be valuable in light-house work aiding vessels to locate their positions off shore without using radio. The chief use to the Navy, however, appeared to be as a means of secret communication, when vessels were proceeding without lights or in battle. Its radius of action was found to be about 17 miles, while the cost of a complete set was comparatively low—about $400.00.

This system, although not new in practical use, is not discarded—far from it. It has been termed "black radio," and several other strange and suggestive names. One of its important features is that it is directional more like beam radio than pure radio broadcast.

In recent dyscrasite communication tests, light rays are generated by an incandescent lamp, although a gas flame, and an arc light have been used. The light is situated in front of a parabolic mirror by means of which the divergence of the beam is controlled. The whole apparatus is housed in a light-proof case, with an opaque screen which permits only the invisible infra-red rays to pass out of the transmitter. Telegraphic signals are made by means of a shutter operated by a hand key. This shutter is located either outside the case or between the light and the mirror.

Telephonic impulses may be converted into light values by speaking against a drum controlling the gas supply, in the gas-flame system which varies the gas pressure and modulates the light according to voice variations.

At the receiving end of the circuit, detection is accomplished at present by inserting a piece of crystal super-sensitive to infra-red rays, at the focus of a parabolic reflector. The crystal forms part of a conventional vacuum tube circuit. Variations in the incoming infra-red rays impinging on the crystal alter the constants of the vacuum-tube circuit and, produce variations audible in either head phones or a loud speaker.

Recently perfected Dyscrasite transmitters are highly directional, having only an 8-degree divergence of beam, which makes for secrecy to a certain extent, although limiting its application in general communications. Another limitation of his apparatus is the fact that it is practical only for night signaling, the infra-red rays of the bright sunlight overshadowing its impulses, and paralyzing the detective elements. At night, however, it forms the only known means of communication, not subject to reception by ordinary means, such as visual, radio or sound detection, which indicates its value for secret signalling.

To Eliminate Hand Capacity.

Hand capacity, which makes close tuning difficult, often can be eliminated by mounting the variable condensers farther away from the panel. This can be done by providing a longer condenser shaft as follows: A short length of ¼-inch brass rod, long enough to extend through the panel, is placed in one end of a thread spool and the condenser shaft in the other. If the rod and shaft do not fit tightly, drill them and the spool to take cotter pins. Mount the condenser in the desired position on the subpanel by means of two 1-16-inch brass strips, ¾-inch wide, bent to form brackets of sufficient length to support it.

Selectivity From Loop Receiver.

If selectivity in the tuning of the loop receiver is expected, never operate a loop receiver in the same room with another receiver to which an antenna and ground are connected. The emergy that passes through the antenna lead to the ground by way of the primary coil in the other receiver is picked up by the loop antenna with the result that tuning of the loop will be decidedly broad.

Balkite
Radio Power Units
the ideal power supply for any radio set

FOR THE "A" CIRCUIT

Balkite Battery Charger

This popular battery charger is entirely noiseless. Because of its high charging rate and the fact that it can be used while the radio set is in operation, it is absolute insurance against run down "A" batteries. If your battery should be low you merely turn on the charger and operate the set. It cannot discharge or short circuit the battery. It delivers a taper charge, and cannot damage the battery by overcharging. It is not affected by fluctuations in line voltage or temperature. It will charge a completely run down battery. Charging rate 2.5 amperes. Will charge automobile batteries. Also "B" batteries of the lead type in multiples of 6 cells. Size 6 in. long, 10¼ in. high, 6½ in. wide. Current consumption about ½¢ per hour. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles. Also for 25-40 cycles with 1 5 ampere charging rate.
Price $19.50

Balkite Trickle Charger

Charges both 4 and 6 volt radio "A" batteries at about .5 amperes. This low-rate charger may be used in three ways: (1) As a regular charger with a low capacity storage battery for sets now using dry cells. Makes possible a very economical installation. (2) As a regular charger with a regular storage battery, for sets of few storage battery tubes. Furnishes more current than is used by 6 dry cell or 2 storage battery tubes, so that if used while the set is in operation, it need be used at no other time. (3) As a "trickle" or continuous charger for sets of as many as 8 dry cell or storage battery tubes. Size 5⅝ in. long, 2¾ in. wide, 5 in. high. May be put in usual dry battery compartment. Current consumption about 1/10¢ per hour. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.
Low capacity batteries especially adapted for use with this charger with sets now using dry cells are being offered by practically all leading battery manufacturers this fall. Reputable manufacturers are also offering this fall for use with this charger special switches which turn on Balkite "B" and turn off the charger when you turn on your set. This makes your current supply for both "A" and "B" circuits automatic in operation.

Balkite Radio Power Units are the ideal power supply for any radio set. They simplify radio reception by reducing the amount of attention you must give your set and by making your current supply unfailing and always available. They improve radio reception because with their use your current supply never varies—it is always exactly what is required for each circuit.

For the "A" circuit there are the Balkite Chargers. The advantages of the popular Balkite Battery Charger are obvious. Entirely noiseless—it can be used while the set is in operation.

For sets of smaller "A" current requirements—any dry cell set or sets of few storage battery tubes—there is the Balkite Trickle Charger. Leading battery manufacturers are offering low-capacity batteries specially adapted for use with this charger for sets now using dry cells. Owners of dry cell sets who have wanted to use storage batteries because of their obvious advantages can now make a most economical installation.

For the "B" circuit there is Balkite "B"—the outstanding development in radio. It eliminates "B" batteries entirely and supplies plate current from the light socket. With its use there are no dry "B" cells to replace, no "B" batteries to recharge. It fits practically all sets of 5 tubes or less and most 6 tube sets. For sets of 6 tubes or more there is Balkite "B" II, the same popular model offered last year.

Noiseless—No bulbs—Permanent

All Balkite Radio Power Units are based on the same principle. All are entirely noiseless in operation. They have no moving parts, no bulbs, and nothing to adjust, break or get out of order. They cannot deteriorate through use or disuse—each is a permanent piece of equipment with nothing to wear out or replace. They require no other attention than the infrequent addition of water. They do not interfere with your set or your neighbor's. Their current consumption is remarkably low. They are universal in application and require no changes or additions to your set.

An "A" battery, a Balkite Charger and a Balkite "B" constitute a complete, trouble-free radio power equipment, one that is economical and unfailing in operation and eliminates the possibility of run-down batteries.

Read the specific applications of the four units. Whatever type of set you own, Balkite Radio Power Units will serve it. Sold by radio dealers everywhere.

FOR THE "B" CIRCUIT

Balkite "B"

Eliminates "B" batteries. Supplies plate current from the light socket. Operates with either storage battery or dry cell tubes. Keeps "B" circuit always operating at maximum efficiency, for with its use the plate current supply is never low. Requires no changes or additions to your set. No bulbs—nothing to replace. Operates by connecting to light socket. Requires no attention other than adding water twice a year.

A new model, designed to serve any set requiring not more than 20 milliamperes at 90 volts—practically all sets of 5 tubes or less and most 6 tube sets. Current cost about 1/10¢ per hour. Size 8¼ in. long, 8 in. high, 3¾ in. wide. Occupies about same space as 45 volt dry "B" battery. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.

Balkite "B" II

The same model unchanged as offered last year, when it was the great development of the season. Based on the same principle as the new Balkite "B," but is a unit of much greater flexibility and capacity. Will fit any set including those of 8 tubes or more. Current capacity 40 milliamperes at 90 volts. Sizes 9 in. high, 6¼ in. wide, 7¾ in. deep. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.
Price $55

Cheap batteries are often noisy and have a short life.

A good ground and aerial system will eliminate body capacity.

Ammonia quickly neutralizes acid if the latter is spilled on the carpet.

A large condenser requires closer turning when tuning than a small one.

Making the grid slightly positive will prevent oscillation, but will cut down amplification.

It is usually cheaper to buy a new condenser than to attempt to fix one which has become damaged.

It is a wise plan to go over rubber panels and tighten all nuts and screws, because rubber, under constant pressure, gives.

Station KSD as Others See It

THE following is from a full-page illustrated article which appears in the October 10 issue of Radio Digest:

STATION KSD was the first radio broadcasting station to be given a class B license by the United States Government. On Aug. 31, 1922, just two months after the station opened, broadcasting was begun at 8 p. m. on the old wave length of 360 meters with a player piano roll of Sousa's march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever." At the conclusion of this the KSD announcer told the world of a new honor just conferred upon the station and stated that after an intermission of five minutes the station would again go on the air with its new wave length of 400 meters as a class B station.

The program on this evening was given by Mrs. W. E. Hindle, coloratura soprano, M. A. Wortheimer, violinist, and C. G. Werner, pianist, all St. Louis artists.

In those days all class B stations were on a wave length of 400 meters and class A stations on 360 meters, and it was not until the following spring that the wave bands were divided by governmental order, and KSD was assigned its present high wave length of 545.1 meters.

KSD is notable for having made a specialty of high-class music. It has broadcast many important addresses, public events, sporting events, etc., but its greatest achievement has been the broadcasting of every symphony program played in St. Louis by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra during the three years of the station's existence. Classical music, while a specialty at KSD, has not occupied all the music programs. Many jazz orchestras of national fame have been broadcast by this station, but in jazz, as in classical music, KSD always has stood for the best, and has insisted upon every performance coming up to an established standard.

In some other respects besides the fact that it was the first class B station, KSD has been a pioneer and has set the pace for other stations. It was the first station to make the experiment of broadcasting in the open air. On June 26, 1922, the station was formally opened. It was tested out the preceding night in a manner which not only tested the station, but gave radio transmission experts an idea of the practicability of a new form of broadcasting. A microphone was placed in the footlights on the immense stage at the municipal open-air theater in Forest Park, and was connected by remote control apparatus and land wire to the operating room at KSD. One entire act of DeKoven's "Highwayman" was sent out to the listening public with the simple announcement, "KSD testing." This not only proved the efficiency of the station, but it also was a demonstration of the feasibility of broadcasting open air performances.

KSD has never had any regular station entertainers. Its idea on this subject has been that variety was the thing most desired. It has, however, had some regular features, notably the orchestras of the Grand Central, Missouri and Lyric theaters, City Club, Missouri Athletic Association, and Statler and Jefferson hotels, theater productions, entire performances of grand opera, light opera and other exercises of all sorts also have been broadcast.

KSD was the only station in America to broadcast any of the concerts given by the Sistine choir of Rome, Italy, during its tour of this country in 1923-1924, and was the first station to broadcast high mass from a Catholic cathedral. It also was the first station to send out the voice of a president of the United States. On June 21, 1923, President Harding was in St. Louis on the first lap of the tour which ended with his very sudden and tragic death. He made an address at the St. Louis Coliseum on the World Court, and KSD broadcast this speech. Later on KSD broadcast the message to Congress of President Coolidge and has sent out several speeches by President Coolidge as well as addresses by practically all the cabinet officers, by all the candidates for President in the last national election, and the entire proceedings of the Democratic and Republican National conventions.

Some of the world's greatest statesmen and most famous artists have been given to the public through this station. Fifteen countries of the world have been represented on the programs and all five races of man have had their representatives in the studio on various KSD programs.

Efficient Phone Jacks.

The best way to tighten up the springs on the telephone jacks is to take the jacks apart and bend the springs so that when the jacks are put back together, the outside springs will push in towards each other and the inside spring will push out toward the outside ones. While the jacks are apart, clean off the small silvered contact points with gasoline and a soft cloth.

Slipping Dials.

Sudden change in the wave length of neutrodyne sets is often caused by the dials slipping on the shafts, so that the position of the rotary plates is altered at any given setting. This can be corrected by adjusting the dial which is out of place in relation to the others. It is not likely that all three dials will slip at the same time.

HOW TO IDENTIFY ELECTRIC INTERFERENCE

Each Type of Noise in the Set Gives a Clew to Cause of Outside Disturbance.

Radio reception in some localities is seriously disturbed by interference arising from electrical apparatus in the vicinity. The only general remedy for electrical interference is co-operative effort, on the part of users of radio and owners of the electrical sources of disturbance, to reduce or eliminate the causes of the trouble, the Bureau of Standards points out.

Much of the work in reducing electrical interference also results in an improvement in the operation of the electrical devices or supply lines and is thus a double gain. There are, however, some electrical devices which, even when in perfect working order, cause disturbances resulting in interference with radio reception. But in many cases it is possible to provide filters, shields, chokes, etc., either at the source of disturbance or at the receiving set, which do much to relieve the difficulties.

Some of the disturbances from electrical devices are practically inevitable and must be regarded, like atmospheric disturbances, as part of the inherent limitation of radio reception.

A frequent cause of interference is the presence of alternating-current power lines near the antenna or receiving set. Low-frequency voltages (usually 60 cycles) are induced and the resultant current flowing in the receiving circuit causes a "humming" sound in the telephone receivers. A method of eliminating or at least reducing this interference is to place the antenna as far as possible from the lines and at right angles to them. When the interference can not be eliminated by such means the choice of a receiving set may help. An inductively-coupled (two-circuit receiving set may help. An inductively coupled (two-circuit) receiving set is less susceptible to such interference than a single-circuit set. The use of one or more stages of radio-frequency interference might be shunted around a receiving set having a series antenna condenser by connecting between the antenna and ground terminals of the set a high resistance, which will offer lower impedance to the audio frequency than will the receiving set itself.

Sparks are produced in the normal operation of many types of electrical apparatus such as motors, doorbells, buzzers, gasoline engines, x-ray apparatus, violet-ray machines, some forms of battery chargers, rural telephone ringers, heating pad thermostats. They are also sometimes produced at defective insulators, transformers etc., of electric wire lines. Sparks usually give rise to electric waves which travel along the electric power wires and by them are radiated out and are picked up by receiving sets. The noise thus produced in a radio set may come from a disturbance which has traveled several miles along the electric power wires.

One remedy for such types of interference is to eliminate the spark. This is possible if the spark is an electrical leak and not necessary to the operation of the machine in which it occurs. Many very useful electrical machines, however, require for their operation the making and breaking of electrical circuits while they are carrying current and whenever this happens a spark is produced. It is impossible to eliminate these machines, so it is necessary to make the spark of such nature or so arrange the circuits that the radio-frequency current is reduced or prevented from radiating.

To prevent the radio-frequency current produced by a spark from getting on to the lines connecting the sparking apparatus some form of filter circuit is necessary. A condenser (1 microfarad, more or less) connected across the sparking points will short circuit a considerable amount of the radio-frequency current, or, a condenser connected from each side of the line to ground will serve the same purpose. A choke coil in each side of the line in addition to the condensers connected to ground forms a simple filter circuit which should prevent frequencies in the broadcast range from getting on the line. A high inductance (choke coil) or high resistance connected in each side of the line changes the characteristics of the circuit so as to reduce the amount of power radiated. If such a filter circuit is not effective or is impractical, the apparatus may in some cases be surrounded by solid metal sheet or wire screen which is thoroughly grounded. The screen should completely surround the apparatus.

The first thing to do in tracing the source of interference trouble is to make sure that it is not in the receiving set itself. The next thing is to open the electric switch at the house meter; if the interfering noise is still heard in the radio set, the source is then known to be outside the house. It is then desirable to report the situation to the electric power company. Many of the companies have apparatus for the purpose of following up complaints of this kind.

question and to express its views

For the Notebook.

An unbalanced set will howl.

When constructing a counterpoise, place it directly under the aerial and as nearly parallel to it as possible.

It is estimated that a voice speaking into the microphone of the average broadcast station is amplified more than 50,000,000 times by the time it reaches the car of the listener.

Value of Insulated Panel.

When purchasing a panel be sure it is a good quality of insulating material. It frequently happens a composition panel is not a good insulator. If leakage occurs the signal strength is greatly reduced and tuning is not sharp. This is especially true when two or three stages of radiofrequency amplification are used.

When Winding Coils.

Cover the hands with gloves when winding special coils. This prevents the wire from becoming soiled and also keeps perspiration from soaking into the insulation.

NEW TYPE CRYSTAL INSURES STABILITY

Device Attached to Transmitter Keeps Broadcasting Station on Its Wavelength.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—A new invention which prevents a broadcasting station from slipping off its assigned wave length, thus eliminating a condition causing 90 per cent of present radio interference, has just been installed at radio station WBBM here.

The device is known as the crystal, and according to Atlass, co-director of the station, will hold WBBM constantly to its 226-meter wave length, preventing even the slightest variation, such as a governor controls the speed of an engine.

"The piezo crystal is used in the transmitter to hold the wave length to its assigned place. To check and regulate the frequency," said Atlass. "It has the power to vibrate at a frequency the radio range and is ground to 'fit' a desired wave length, grinding to a certain size and shape.

"The crystal we have here is ground exactly to fit our wave length and hold it constant. When the crystal to be used on another wave length it would have to be reground.

The new device is contained in a metal case about as large as a box as a dollar and twice as thick. It is just out of the experimental stage, and was also just recently installed by KDKA. Both stations report it highly effective.

"When in general use, the crystal will eliminate 95 per cent of present radio interference," Atlass. "Although with broadly tuned receiving set a station's slip from its wave length can hardly be noticed, such wave slips are causing considerable trouble to the newer highly selective, sharply tuned receivers. If station wave lengths are separated only by 10 kilocycles, even the slightest variation is a serious matter.

"If there is a slip greater than two kilocycles, there is bound to be whistling sounds and distortion in the receiver, and the sounds from the two stations are so jumbled that neither can be heard clearly.

"Such slips are usually caused by slight unadjustments in the transmitter sagging antenna or current variation. Tests have shown that when the crystal regulator is used no ordinary change in the transmitter can cause appreciable change in the wave length. By placing it in a specially constructed circuit, and building its action up through the high power transmitting set, the wave length desired is exactly the same as that of the crystal.

Battery Solution.

Change the solution in storage line battery about once a year. The solution consists of one part potassium hydrate to four parts of distilled water. The chemical name of ordinary cleaning lye is potassium hydrate. The caustic lyte solution should be prepared very carefully in an earthen jar. Pour the potassium hydrate slowly into the earthen crock of distilled water.

For Tight Terminals.

When placing a wire terminal under a terminal nut, the wire should be twisted the way the nut turns. Otherwise the tightening of the nut will loosen the wire from the terminal rather than make it tight.

LATEST IMPROVEMENTS TO BE ON EXHIBITION

Demonstrations at Radio Show to Reveal the Most Modern Receivers and Attachments.

The Southwest National Radio Exposition, which will open tomorrow at the Coliseum in St. Louis, promises to present to the public demonstrations of the remarkable advancements made in receiving equipment during the past year. The outstanding features of the many exhibits of the leading manufacturers will be the extraordinary developments in the production of loud speakers that reproduce broadcast programs with unprecedented fidelity of tone; the great strides made by set manufacturers in improving the appearance of receiving sets, making them pieces of furniture of unusual beauty and suitable to take their place in the living rooms of thousands of homes; the phenomenal advance in perfecting equipment that permits the operation of tubes and sets directly from home alternating currents, with the consequent elimination of batteries; the incorporation of the single control principle in many of the new models, making them easily tuned by a woman or a child, and, because of the elimination of dials, thereby permitting the attainment of greater artistic effects in the cabinets.

Examination of the working parts of the radio receivers to be exhibited reveals refinement in many details. For one thing, there has been a marked change in the audio-frequency transformers. Instead of small transformers designed mainly for volume, the more carefully designed receivers contain larger transformers with plenty of iron and with characteristics which make for distortionless amplification. The best loud speaker in the world wound sound like a tin horn with some of the audio-frequency transformers of the past when failed to amplify all frequencies uniformly. Hence, some notes caused a blast, while others were simply chopped off. But now the larger and properly designed transformers have changed all that.

By-pass condensers, special resistances and many other improved devices will also be in evidence at the exposition. Obviously every effort has been made in the present offerings to obtain tonal quality as well as ample volume for all requirements. And it is in the refinement of the little things that the perfection of the receiving set as a whole has been realized.

Aside from tonal quality, the necessity for sharper tuning is admitted and met in virtually all the new receiving sets. Condensers, which now have become the generally accepted means of tuning, are especially designed for straight-line frequency operation—that is to say, the condenser dials spread out the wave lengths at the lower end of the scale so as to separate the existing congestion with the older types of receiving sets.

Four years ago no one foresaw the advent of some 600 broadcasting stations in regular operation. For that reason radio receivers of the past were not designed to handle 50 or more stations within the narrow confines of the broadcast wave band. NEW TYPE CRYSTAL INSURES STABILITY

Device Attached to Transmitter Keeps Broadcasting Station on Its Wavelength.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—A new invention which prevents a broadcasting station from slipping from its assigned wave length, thus eliminating a condition causing 5 per cent of present radio interference, has just been installed at radio station WBBM here.

The device is known as the piezo crystal, and according to Leo Atlass, co-director of the station, it will hold WBBM constantly to its 226-meter wave length, preventing even the slightest variation, much as a governor controls the speed of an engine.

"The piezo crystal is used either in the transmitter to hold the wave length to its assigned place or to check and regulate the fixed frequency," said Atlass. "It has the power to vibrate at frequencies in the radio range and is made to 'fit' a desired wave length by grinding to a certain size and shape.

"The crystal we have installed is ground exactly to fit our wave length and hold it constant. When the crystal to be used on another wave length it would have to be reground.

The new device is contained in a metal case about as large around as a dollar and twice as thick. It is just out of the experimental stage, and was also just recently installed by KDKA. Both stations report it highly effective.

"When in general use, the crystal will eliminate 95 per cent of present radio interference," said Atlass. "Although with the broadly tuned receiving set a station's slip from its wave length can hardly be noticed, such wave slips are causing considerable trouble to the newer highly selective, sharply tuned receivers. Since station wave lengths are separated only by 10 kilocycles, even the slightest variation is a serious matter.

"If there is a slip greater than two kilocycles, there is bound to be whistling sounds and distortion in the receiver, and the sounds from the two stations are so jumbled that neither can be brought out clearly.

"Such slips are usually caused by slight unadjustments in the transmitter sagging antena or current variation. Tests have shown that when the crystal regulator is used no ordinary change in the transmitter can cause appreciable change in the wave length. By using it in a specially constructed circuit, and building its oscillation up through the high power transmitting set, the wave length emitted is exactly the same as that of the crystal.

Battery Solutions.

Change the solution in an alkaline battery about once a year. The solution consists of one part of potassium hydrate to four parts of distilled water. The chemical name of ordinary cleansing lye is potassium hydrate. The electrolyte solution should be prepared very carefully in an earthen jar. Pour the potassium hydrate slowly into the earthen crock of cold distilled water.

For Tight Terminals.

When placing a wire terminal under a terminal nut, the wire should be twisted the way the nut turns. Otherwise the tightening of the nut will loosen the wire from the terminal rather than hold it tight.

Demonstrations at Radio Show to Reveal the Most Modern Receivers and Attachments.

The Southwest National Radio Exposition, which will open tomorrow at the Coliseum in St. Louis, promises to present to the public demonstrations of the remarkable advancements made in receiving equipment during the past year. The outstanding features of the many exhibits of the leading manufacturers will be the extraordinary developments in the production of loud speakers that reproduce broadcast programs with unprecedented fidelity of tone; the great strides made by set manufacturers in improving the appearance of receiving sets, making them pieces of furniture of unusual beauty and suitable to take their place in the living rooms of thousands of homes; the phenomenal advance in perfecting equipment that permits the operation of tubes and sets directly from home alternating currents, with the consequent elimination of batteries; the incorporation of the single control principle in many of the new models, making them easily tuned by a woman or a child, and, because of the elimination of dials, thereby permitting the attainment of greater artistic effects in the cabinets.

Examination of the working parts of the radio receivers to be exhibited reveals refinement in many details. For one thing, there has been a marked change in the audio-frequency transformers. Instead of small transformers designed mainly for volume, the more carefully designed receivers contain larger transformers with plenty of iron and with characteristics which make for distortionless amplification. The best loud speaker in the world wound sound like a tin horn with some of the audio-frequency transformers of the past when failed to amplify all frequencies uniformly. Hence, some notes caused a blast, while others were simply chopped off. But now the larger and properly designed transformers have changed all that.

By-pass condensers, special resistances and many other improved devices will also be in evidence at the exposition. Obviously every effort has been made in the present offerings to obtain tonal quality as well as ample volume for all requirements. And it is in the refinement of the little things that the perfection of the receiving set as a whole has been realized.

Aside from tonal quality, the necessity for sharper tuning is admitted and met in virtually all the new receiving sets. Condensers, which now have become the generally accepted means of tuning, are especially designed for straight-line frequency operation—that is to say, the condenser dials spread out the wave lengths at the lower end of the scale so as to separate the existing congestion with the older types of receiving sets.

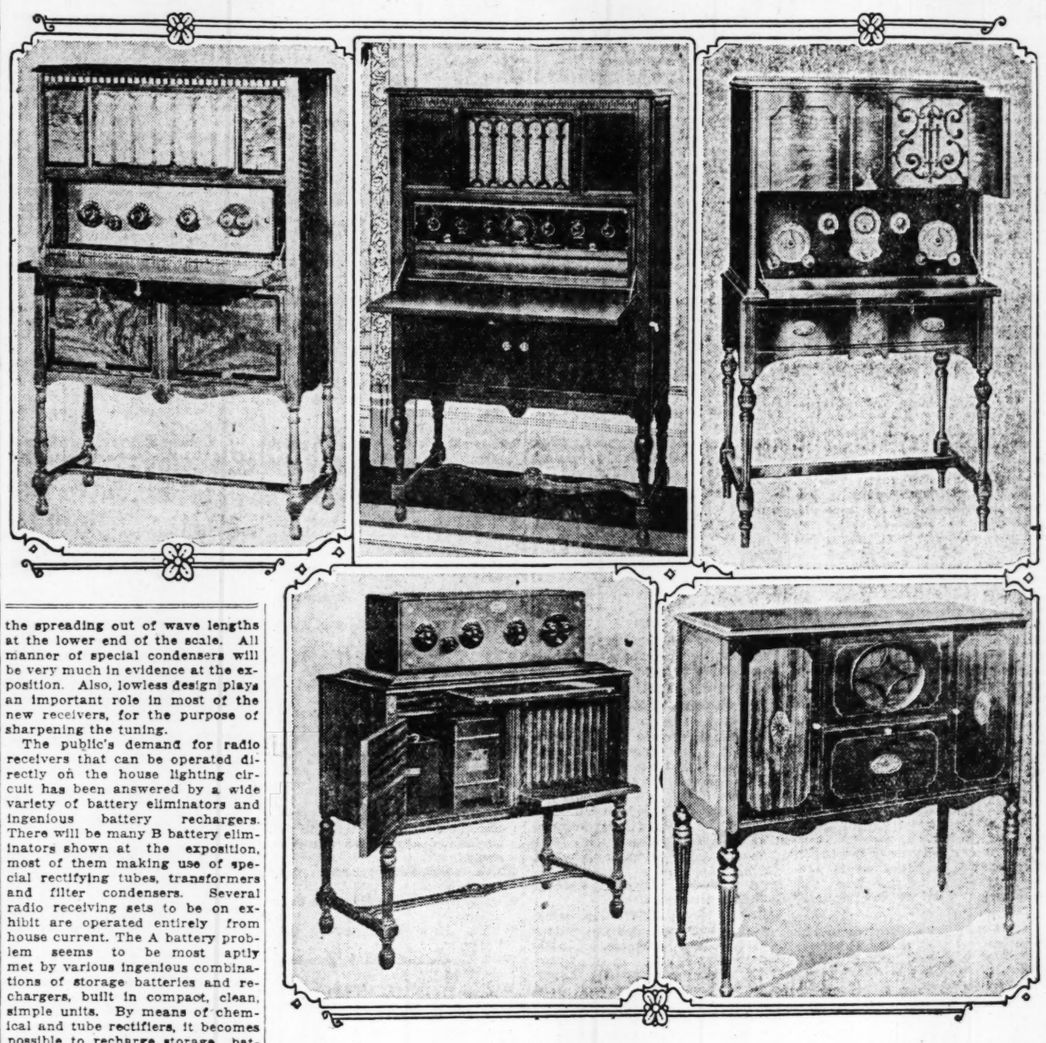
Four years ago no one foresaw the advent of some 600 broadcasting stations in regular operation. For that reason radio receivers of the past were not designed to handle 50 or more stations within the narrow confines of the broadcast wave band. Consequently, with the present congestion in radio broadcasting, especially among the low wave lengths, the time has come for sharper tuning methods and for the spreading out of wave lengths at the lower end of the scale. All manner of special condensers will be very much in evidence at the exposition. Also, lowless design plays an important role in most of the new receivers, for the purpose of sharpening the tuning.

The public's demand for radio receivers that can be operated directly on the house lighting circuit has been answered by a wide variety of battery eliminators and ingenious battery rechargers. There will be many B battery eliminators shown at the exposition, most of them making use of special rectifying tubes, transformers and filter condensers. Several radio receiving sets to be on exhibit are operated entirely from house current. The A battery problem seems to be most aptly met by various ingenious combinations of storage batteries and rechargers, built in compact, clean, simple units. By means of chemical and tube rectifiers, it becomes possible to recharge storage batteries at a very low rate, so that the storage batteries are always ready for use. These devices are called "trickle" chargers and consume almost negligible current as compared with the rather heavy current consumption of the usual recharger. In other words, it would seem that present practice is more toward recharging the storage batteries between operations at a slow but steady rate of charge rather than to let the storage batteries discharge entirely and then recharge them at a high rate of charge. Certainly this new practice has the advantage of providing reliable current at all times.

The battery eliminator problem has been solved. A complete radio receiver of the super-heterodyne type, selling for close to $600, operates directly on the usual lighting circuit without a trace of an alternating current hum.

Considered as a whole the radio receiving sets to be shown at the exposition leave the firm impression that the radio industry has become stabilized. The radio frequency circuit is prominent, although it is represented by many variations. The neutrodyne family will be well represented, for this circuit, with its simplicity of operation and excellent results, seems to hold its own. The superheterodyne is also popular among the radio offerings. The acme of tuning and sensitivity has been attained in many of the better kinds of sets, and the improvements of the future will be in the nature of refinements of details. Although several new circuits will be introduced at the exposition, most of the circuits will remain more or less the same. The exterior, however, of the receiving sets has undergone quite a transformation. A year ago the standard practice was to use the large tuning dials with graduations and numbers engraved on the rim. In the sets to be exhibited this season one finds instead of the dials tuning wheels with just the milled rim coming through a slot or small knobs which control verniers for extremely delicate adjustments.

Artistic Settings for Season's Radio Models



HUMAN EAR A POOR JUDGE OF VOLUME

Estimating Intensity of Signals by Listening to Them Is an Inaccurate Method.

Few people realize the enormous range of the human ear. In pitch, a good youthful ear can hear all tones from as low as 16 vibrations per second to as high as 40,000 per second. The range of intensity is likewise enormous. If we take as one the strength of the weakest sound we can hear, then the strength of the ordinary talking voice will be a million.

In estimating the relative strength of sounds our ears deceive us. For instance, when asking people about the comparative strength of two radio sets, I have often heard them say that one set was twice as loud as another. When they say that, they do not understand the peculiarities of the ear. On being questioned, they agree that the stronger set behaves as if it had one more stage of amplification than the weaker set. Now one more stage of amplification represents 200 times the power output, yet it seems only twice as loud. In other words, our ears are very poor at gauging the intensity of sound. This is a very necessary condition. If our ears were sensitive to changes in intensity, they would either be insensitive to weak sounds or moderately loud noises would become unbearable.

The defiree of the ear's insensitiveness to loudness can be well illustrated by the fact that it is difficult to distinguish between two sounds, one of which is twice as strong as the other. To successfully make the differentiation, it is necessary that both sounds have the same pitch, the same quality or timbre, and that the comparison be rapid. If as much as 30 seconds is allowed to elapse between listening to the two sounds, no conclusion as to relative strength could be relied upon.

During the war Mr. Bowden Washington conducted an interesting test on 108 bluejackets. He asked them to listen to two telegraph signals and tell which one was the louder. One signal was adjusted to have twice the power of the other and a switch was provided for throwing from one signal to the other. Each man put on head phones and listened once to one signal and then immediately to the other. After that he wrote down his choice. Some men said the signals had equal strength, some said the weaker signal was the stronger. Only fifty-six out of the whole 108 men determined correctly.

ARMY SIGNAL CORPS LINKING UP AMATEURS

The Signal Corps of the U. S. Army has taken steps to enlist the interest, if not the actual persons, of about 2000 of the 15,000 amateur radio operators of the country, who, through the activities of their organization, the American Radio Relay League, already have a national network covering practically the entire nation.

The Signal Corps desires the aid of these amateurs so as to secure additional comunication channels throughout the continent which could be used in national emergencies and for the communication of the National Guard, reserve and civil units of the army. It is also held extremely desirable to have a reserve of young operators trained as to the army method and system of operation, so that in the event of war or when experienced radio signal men are needed they will be available.

Recently a close affiliation between the Army Signal Corps and the amateurs was effected. The future activities of the league will be in close co-operation with the Signal Corps. Already in each of the nine army corps areas an amateur radio net is being organized. In addition a divisional net for each of the organized reserve divisions. Each state National Guard will also organize a radio system in co-operation with the amateurs. All these systems will be connected into a nation-wide net through a headquarters station at Fort Monmouth, N. J., formerly Camp Alfred Vail, the Signal School. The control station will be 2 CXL.

Amateurs are asked to communicate with the league if they desire to enroll in this new and practical auxiliary radio service. Another method of getting in touch with the authorities is to communicate with the Corps Signal Officer of your own area. These corps headquarters are located in Boston, New York, Baltimore, Atlanta, Columbus, Chicago, Omaha, San Antonio and Presidio, Cal. Stations joining the net will be known as army amateur radio stations, the owners and operators being enlisted as special reserves.

England is now agitating for a silent night so that listeners with a nearby local station and with powerful sets may at least once a week try their luck at DX. B. B. C. answers that a silent night policy would not be acceptable to crystal set owners. Another plan suggested is that every station close down one a week at 10 p. m. It is probable,however, that even this plan will not be acceptable.

LOCAL STATIONS AT SHOW

St. Louis radio stations, using a glass-enclosed studio in the Coliseum, will broadcast from the Radio Show this week as follows:

Monday afternoon and evening, KSD; Tuesday afternoon KSD, evening WSBF; Wednesday afternoon KSD, evening WSBF; Thursday afternoon, WSBF, evening WIL; Friday afternoon WSBF, evening KSD; Saturday afternoon WSBF, evening, WIL.

wires are in the alley back of my house. They make such a noise that I cannot get out-of-town stations on my set. Can this be cut out in any way? 2. Is there a station in Mexico using the call CBE or CDE? S. B.

A. 1. If the high-tension lines cause interference there must be a leak between one of them and the ground. The leak would not have to be near your residence to cause the trouble. The wires act as carriers and your antenna picks up the interference from the portions of the wires nearest to it. There is little if anything that could be done to your receiver to eliminate such noise. The only satisfactory solution is to find the source of the disturbance and repair the defective equipment that is causing it. 2. There is a Mexican station operated by the Department of Education at Mexico City that uses the call letters CXE. This station operates on a wave length of 450 meters.

Q. When I connect a C battery to the grid returns from my audio amplifier reception is very poor. With the grid returns connected to the negative A reception is normal. Can you tell me from this description what is the trouble? T. O.

A. If you have connected the negative terminal of the C battery to the grid returns and the positive to the negative A lead and the C battery has the right voltage for the particular plate current that you are using, you should have no trouble in getting the amplifier to work. When connecting the C battery in the circuit you very probably made some slight mistake that kept the set from working.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. I would like to know if there is any remedy for the interference sent out by an automatic ice cream freezer. Such a machine in my neighborhood causes a noise that interferes with local and distant reception. O. K.

A. The only way to eliminate such interference is to obtain the services of a radio engineer who would have to study the construction of the machine and devise a method to stop the interference. There is a possibility that some part of the machine is defective and in that case the engineer would have to locate and correct the defect. It is possible, too, that the engineers of the company that makes the machine might give you some helpful information. Not knowing the details of the electrical equipment of the particular machine that is annoying you, we could not suggest an exact method for correcting the trouble. Very little, if anything, could be done to your receiver to cut out the interference.

Q. I have a five-tube receiver, and while I have heard many distant stations, I have been unable to tune in KSD. Can you suggest a remedy for this? J. J.

A. It is possible that you have just failed to tune in at the time when KSD is broadcasting, or that you are located at a distance from St. Louis, where fading is bad. If you hear WOAW, WHO and KYW, your receiver is not at fault. If you do not hear any of these stations, as well as KSD, something must be wrong with your receiver and it would be advisable for you to return it to the dealer from whom you purchased it for repairs or replacement.

Q. I have built a regenerative set according to plan which I enclose. I have not been able to hear a sound over it. I am using a vario-coupler and I believe that my trouble is in the connection with the wrong two of the six binding posts in the rear of the coupler. G. R. R.

A. The circuit diagram is correct. The trouble you are having is very probably as you suggest. The two wires from the rotor of the coupler go to the plate of the tube and to one side of phones. The other four binding posts are connected in pairs. The antenna lead and the grid wire should be connected to one pair and the ground and the positive side of the A battery to the other pair. The potentiometer shown on your diagram is of no value and might cause you some trouble. Just connect the negative lead from the B battery to the positive side of the A battery.

Q. Recently you published the circuit of the new Grimes Inverse Duplex. Is it against the law as an infringement on the Grimes patent to copy or built a set of this type? If not will you please tell me the number of turns used in the radio frequency coils? G. L.

A. It would not be an infringement for you to build a Grimes Inverse Duplex receiver for your own use. It would be if you were to build such a set and sell it. We have no data on the circuit other than that published.

Q. Is there any broadcasting station in St. Louis where a boy could learn to be a radio engineer: P. R.

A. Not that we know of.

Q. I am sending you a copy of a circuit that I would like to use in the construction of a receiver. What do you think of it? O. B.

A. The circuit in question is the same as the one used in the Roberts Drake receiver and is an exceptionally efficient one considering the number of tubes used and the results obtained. The coupler used to couple the stage of radio frequency amplification to the detector should have three windings. One of these is the secondary of the radio frequency transformer and is connected to the detector circuit. Another is the tickler which is placed in the plate circuit of the detector and the third is the primary of the radio frequency transformer and is connected in the plate circuit of the first tube. This last coil should consist of about 10 turns of number wire. No. 28 or 30 will do. For this winding directly over the secondary or in inductive relation to it at the end opposite the grid. Use as many turns of wire in the coil as is possible without coupling the first tube to oscillate too freely.

Q. I have a Radiola senior regenerative receiver and until recently I received from coast to coast. Now only a few distant stations come in strong. Do you think there is anything wrong with my set? H. B. S.

A. As your set has not been in use very often during the summer the chances are that your A battery or B batteries are a little low. It is possible, too, that your grid leak clamp and probably some of the other connections have become corroded. Go over your set from the antenna and ground to the phones and make all of the connections over just as if you were hooking up the receiver for the first time. Scrape or sandpaper all of the contacts. Take out the tubes and brighten the tips.

Q. I have a one-tube reflex and want to add three steps of radio frequency coupled amplification. Would this be practical? A. W.

A. It could be done, though the combination is not a very practical one. The main feature of a reflex is that it is economical, while on the contrary, resistance coupled amplification sacrifices economy for quality. We would recommend a regenerative with two steps of audio amplification, one step of radio amplification, detector and one stage of audio amplification or a two or three tube reflex.

Q. Could you tell me if I could put a 22-plate condenser in my receiving set in place of the book type condenser? H. G.

A. Yes, the book-type condensers may be replaced with one of the rotary condensers. However, a 17-plate condenser instead of the 11-plate would be nearer the right value.

Q. Will you kindly send the address of the company publishing the Citizens' Radio Call Book and tell me the price of the book? A. M.

A. The Citizens' Radio Call Book is published by the Citizens' Radio Service Bureau, 508 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and sells for 75 cents. Copies of the call book may be obtained from most of the local magazine dealers.

AMATEUR FLASHED SAVING OF PN-9 NO. 1

Picked Up News From Hawaii and Transmitted It on Short Wave to Naval Base.

The amateur radio station 6ZD, owned and operated by A. H. Babcock of San Francisco, a member of the Board of Directors of the American Radio Relay League, gets the credit for advising the Pacific fleet of the safe recovery of the lost naval plane, PN-9 No. 1, which was found a few miles off the coast of Kauaii, Hawaii, after it had been adrift with its crew for several days.

About 8:30 o'clock, Pacific time, on the night when the missing ship was recovered, Mr. Babcock heard the first news of the rescue from Hawaii. A telephone call to the local naval headquarters proved that no confirmation had been sent through official channels and the only available reports were meager dispatches from commercial sources.

The naval station advised Mr. Babcock, who is a Lieutenant Commander of the Naval Reserve, that its station, PNG, had been unable to communicate with the Pacific fleet, which it reported in Honolulu. Extremely bad static spoiled all attempts at communication. Mr. Babcock pointed out that the fleet was at Tahiti the night before, using a conversation he had with Lieut. F. H. Schnell, operator of short wave station NRRL, aboard the Seattle, as proof. Naval headquarters here instructed Mr. Babcock to try to raise NRRL, with his short wave set, in order that NRRL might be instructed to guard the 45-meter wave of NPG.

This request was made at a time of the evening when amateur stations in this area maintain quiet hours, despite the fact that their waves, below 100 meters to a large extent, are not near the broadcasting wave bands. Mr. Babcock was given permission to operate during the emergency by the office of the radio inspector.

There then ensued a battle with static and mid-Pacific traffic. NRRL aboard the Seattle, was just beginning on an early evening schedule with NPU, naval radio station at Samoa, and it was necessary for Mr. Babcock to break into this with his urgent call.

Lieut. Schnell, operator of NRRL and also traffic manager of the American Radio Relay League, received the information from the local station and transmitted it to Admiral Coontz, commander of the Pacific fleet.

Radio authorities point to the entire transaction as further proof of the usefulness of short waves and high frequencies in overcoming the natural handicaps that beset the long-wave, lower-frequency apparatus.

The new British radio station at Rugby has 12 masts with electric lifts to carry men to the tops in 75 minutes. The masts are supported on porcelain insulators and can rock slightly on a joint at the base. In a high wind the top of the mast aways eight feet.

THE bell of the Saal Soft Speaker is of genuine Bakelite, the most perfect and resonant of all radio materials. The neck is of aluminum. There is no wood, no tin, no composition. The reproducing unit is of all-metal construction and cannot be harmed or "blasted" by the loudest receiver. It maintains its tone with any volume. There is no adjustment knob to complicate tuning.

When you buy the Saal Soft Speaker you buy once and for all. You buy a radio reproducer built to last a lifetime, one that will render permanent service and stand up under constant usage. It has nothing to deteriorate or wear out.

In buying the Saal you do not choose between volume and tone quality. It combines volume with a velvet tone. It is not a fad. It is not a trumpet. It is a faithful reproducer of radio programs, properly constructed and shaped for the accurate reproduction of sound. It removes the objection to loud speakers. It has no blare, no blast, no metallic ring.

An interesting feature of the new Gothenburg station, for trans-Atlantic commercial use, is the arrangement whereby the antenna system is kept clear of ice and snow during the winter. It consists of the provision of enough current to heat the antenna to a temperature sufficient to melt snow and ice. The reasons for this precaution are twofold. Undue strain on the wires by weighty deposits of ice would court disaster, although it is not recorded that the aerial of any commercial station collapsed from this cause. The second reason is that such deposits might cause leakage, as ice is a conductor of radio frequency currents. An ice coating on insulators and wire would form a convenient path for the currents.

Owing to the importance of radio broadcasting in Germany, a tenant not only has a right to erect an antenna on a housetop, but it is the duty of the owner of the dwelling to grant permission to erect an antenna.

NEW TYPE OF RECEIVER GUIDE FOR AIR PILOTS

Enables Aviators to Fly Through Fog While Watching Visible Signals for Bearings.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—A special type of radio receiver, which permits air pilots to maintain a course through darkness and fog toward a radio beacon is the latest development in radio and aeronautics. This improved radio receiver, or indicator, is visual, in that the pilot does not have to listen in continually for the code signals which keep him on his route; he merely watches three tiny electric lights on his dash board. They are operated by the radio signals picked up when his receiver is properly tuned on the beacon, and indicate to him whether he is on his proper course or veering to the right or left.

Radio beacon finding, or directional flying, tests have been conducted for some time at McCook Field, in Dayton, the pilots using the radio beacon at Wilbur Wright Field, which sends out a series of guiding signals for their use. The development of this system, patterned somewhat after the marine methods, has been through the cooperation of the Signal Corps and Air Service experts at McCook Field and the Air Mail Service. In the tests, pilots frequently flew from the field and lost themselves in the air, trusting to the radio beacon to guide them home. In this they were always successful within a radius of about 200 miles.

The original system was called the equi-signal system, in which two signals transmitted simultaneously from the beacon had to be kept at equal strength to assure the pilot that he was on the proper line or flying toward the beacon. A development made during the past year is an improvement. It is known as the interlocking signal system. Two distinct signals are still sent out but they combine to form a third character when the airplane is on the right line. If the aviator veres to the left of the course he hears only one signal, the Morse letter "A," transmitted (.-) in code. When he is off the course to the right he hears the Morse letter "N," or (-.) in code.

If flying exactly on the prescribed course, these two letter signals combine to form a continuous repetition of the code letter "T", or a series of dashes. Hearing the series of dashes continually, he is sure his route is toward the beacon, but when this series breaks up, he is either to the right or left and must change his course until he again picks up the continuous signals.

The difficulty found with this method in flying toward a beacon was the constant attention required by the pilot, who has several other things to do when flying his plane. Dependence upon his ears required too great concentration, increasing the chance of errors. To correct this difficulty and make it easier for the pilots, the visual indicator was devised.

Three small electric lights mounted on the instrument board in front of the flyer, when properly connected with his special receiver, flash and go out, depending upon his course. The unbroken series of "T" signals, or dashes, which is picked up by the set when the two signals are received with equal intensity, operates a relay which causes a white light to flash. This is the proper course light, the constant flashing of which shows the pilot that he is flying toward his beacon. When the plane is off the route to the left, a red light flashes; when on the right, the green lamp flashes. The port and starboard signals used at sea are followed in flying.

A new radio beacon of this type is now being erected at Monmouth, Ill., under the supervision of the McCook Field radio experts. When completed this beacon will be a valuable guide to the Air Mail pilots, and to Army Airway flyers making night trips or in bad or foggy weather, provided their planes are equipped with the necessary apparatus for following the beacon's guiding signals.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Larger than ten football fields

HERE IS the factory that stands behind our recommendation of Atwater Kent Sets and Radio Speakers. It covers more ground than ten football fields or sixty-four baseball diamonds.

It was built large to meet the demand for Atwater Kent Radio and because this company is in Radio to stay.

Radio is passing through the same phases that have marked the history of the automobile—only much more rapidly. Nearly five hundred automobile manufacturers who started with high hopes have disappeared. Their customers know what it means to own an orphan car.

Eventually, many radio manufacturers may disappear. The survivors will be those who have the soundest product and know their business.

Look at this picture. And then remember that the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Company is building receiving sets and radio speakers with the skill and precision learned in twenty-five years' construction of fine electrical instruments.

TRUE LIFE STORIES
PART EIGHT — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 11, 1925. — PAGES 37—44

THE CHECKERED CAREER OF LYDIA LOCKE WHO CAME FROM KERRY PATCH

Four Husbands, Two Divorces, a Manslaughter Charge and, Finally, an Arrest in a 'Poison Pen' Case

St. Louis Singer Eloped at 20 With "Prince" Talbot, a Noted Gambler—Shot Him to Death in Reno—Married Orville Harrold, the Tenor—Husband No. 3 Was Arthur Hudson Marks, New York Millionaire, to Whose Second Wife She Is Accused of Having Mailed the Scurrilous Letter.

FOUR husbands. A few scandals. A little fame. Much, too much, notoriety—more than she perhaps deserved. That has been Lydia Locke's portion during the 37 years of her turbulent life.

A St. Louis girl, they said, each time she came into the public eye. These reminders always gave a broad, fabulous contrast to her career. She was born in Kerry Patch when this section of St. Louis was something like Avenue A or the Bowery in New York. Two graces soon took her away from the Patch—her beauty and her voice. She became, sooner than most of the talented girls who have left St. Louis, a citizen of the world. It happened with a suddenness that astounded her relatives. As for the public—nobody had ever heard of her then.

She was 20 years old at the time and studying music here. An elder sister, Mrs. John A. Schmitt of 3732 South Grand boulevard, had given her a home and was helping with the musical education. Lydia had met quite by chance one Robert Talbot, a gambler, whose friends in tribute to the splendor of his winnings called him "Prince" Talbot. One day Lydia was a girl music student, flirting. The next she had eloped to Denver, Colo., with Talbot.

His wealth developed her voice. She studied abroad and made debuts in Milan and Venice. "Carmen," "Rigoletto," "La Gioconda" and all the repertory of Italian operas she sang, those two golden years after her first marriage. Her husband's brother was a member of the Canadian Parliament. At Ottawa she sang in concert with the then eminent pianist, Howard. A concert at Boston followed and then, returning to St. Louis for a visit with her sister, she appeared at the Odeon. The public considered her a happy and fortunate girl. She was beautiful and talented and married. What more could a young lady of the day desire?

She stood on one of those shining peaks that roughen the American horizon, peaks that are climbed with ridiculous ease by a few of the chosen, though why they are chosen nobody knows. Anyway, there she was and thousands below envied her.

He Beat Her

No one but the sisters and mother to whom she wrote long pitiful letters knew the truth. The mother, Mrs. Newton R. Locke, had moved to Quincy, Ill., the sisters in St. Louis were most discreet, so there was no gossip. But the plain fact seemed to be from what was disclosed afterwards that Lydia Talbot, the rising young operatic star, was being beaten by her husband. Whenever "Prince" Talbot lost at the gaming table or drank too much or felt jealous he beat her. Arias and bruises. Love scenes on the stage and a brutal husband in the star's dressing room. Incongruous? Oh, no.

She went to Reno, as was the fashion those days, to seek a divorce. He followed her. At 1 o'clock one morning a physician was summoned to the Talbot's apartment. He found Mrs. Talbot unconscious on the floor. She had a bruise over her left eye as if from a heavy blow of someone's fist. Revived, she declined to say what had happened. Later that day she visited Judge W. D. Jones, her attorney, to ask him if he could not speed divorce proceedings. The lawyer, still attempting to reconcile this pair, told Mrs. Talbot to leave the office and he would summon her husband for a conference.

When Talbot arrived he insisted on seeing his wife.

"I sent her away," the attorney said. "I don't think she could look at you and control herself."

"I want to see her," Talbot reiterated.

So Mrs. Talbot was sent for. She came in, looking very pale and determined. Talbot, it was said afterwards, made a joking remark about the bruise on her face.

She drew a revolver and shot him. He was the old Prince Talbot before he died. Signed a deathbed statement that the shooting was an accident. Although his family cried for prosecution and there was a trial, she easily convinced a jury that he had got about what he deserved.

One husband. One scandal.

The Second Man

Taking up her work again, the widowed Mrs. Talbot went abroad. Oscar Hammerstein discovered her in London and gave her a chance in one of his companies.

It so happened that in this company was and women friends early one morning got in a smashup of automobiles in New York City. At the hospital she gave her name as Mrs. Orville Harrold. Through this it became known that Harrold had been divorced by his wife whom he had left behind in Muncie, and the same day the divorce papers were issued—before he had received them, in fact—had married Mrs. Talbot. The first Mrs. Harrold told the newspapers that Mrs. Talbot was a love-pirate who had stolen her husband.

Two husbands. Two scandals.

"What artist has lived for his art alone?" asked the second Mrs. Harrold. "It is not possible. His art is fine and noble because some subtle influence of a good woman's inspiration has captured his better self and pointed the way to love, ambition and work." She left the public to guess whom she meant. In discussing the marriage she told reporters she was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Locke, "who have a country home near St. Louis." The Lockes finally were located on a farm near Quincy.

There was another sensation when, in 1917, Mrs. Lydia Locke-Talbot-Harrold filed suit to divorce Harrold on grounds of extreme cruelty. That made scandal No. 3.

The Third Man

A short while later she married Arthur Hudson Marks, automobile tire and organ manufacturer and several times a millionaire. Marks owned a handsome estate in Westchester County, New York, which he named Locke Lodge, in honor of his new wife. Lydia, the girl from Kerry Patch, was now the mistress of a home with 48 servants, motor cars and horses galore. She appeared to be once more upon a peak. Her relatives began to hope that she had at last found happiness.

For a time all went well. She appeared on the concert stage and one year sang at the Veiled Prophet's ball in St. Louis. Her former husband, Harrold, prospered, too, and made several tours with Tetrazzini.

But in 1923 she discovered that Marks had tired of her. He settled $300,000 on her, gave her $100,000 more on condition of good behavior and there was a divorce. In a desperate effort to rekindle his love she returned to Missouri and decided to fake the birth of a child. Going to Kansas City with forged credentials which made her appear to be "Mrs. Ira Johnson of Hannibal, Mo.," she took from a maternity home there a 5-weeks-old baby boy. She then came to St. Louis with the child and registered at the Marquette Hotel. Her sister, Mrs. Schmitt, was summoned by telephone. Mrs. Schmitt always professed to believe her story. The Schmitts had her removed to their own home and cared for the baby. Mrs. Marks persuaded a St. Louis doctor to make out a false birth certificate to show that the child had been born to her here.

When she took the child to New York, called her former husband and asked him to acknowledge their "son," Marks was suspicious at once. He employed private detectives who easily traced her movements in Missouri and exposed the fraud. Mrs. Marks was obliged to return the baby to Kansas City. Her latest divorce and this sensational baby-substitution case added two more scandals to the list, making the total five for three husbands.

Marks promptly married again and Mrs. Lydia Locke-Talbot-Harrold-Marks seems to have been bitter against the woman who supplanted her in his affections. The second Mrs. Marks, formerly Mrs. Margaret Hoover of Pittsburg, filed suit against Lydia for defamation of character.

Marks asserted that the $100,000 he had given her on condition that she not annoy him for five years was forfeited. She engaged lawyers and threatened suit to recover the $100,000 which was held in a trust agreement.

The Fourth One

Then, in December of 1924, Mrs. Marks embarked on her fourth matrimonial adventure. She married Harry Dornblazer, her secretary, who himself had been divorced a short time previously. The couple departed for Italy. At this juncture in her career Mrs. Talbot-Harrold-Marks-Dornblazer was entirely out of touch with St. Louis. Her friends here dropped her and her relatives were cool. Mrs. Schmitt, who had stood by her through the earlier troubles, stated to newspaper men that she had about reached the limit of patience. Another sister, Mrs. Frances Adams of Joplin, still continued on correspondence and visiting terms, however.

Little was heard from Mrs. Dornblazer until a few weeks ago when a report came from New York that she had got herself in trouble again. A few weeks back this rumor was verified. She had been indicted for sending an obscene letter through the mails to Marks.

Another scandal.

New York authorities have refused to make public the contents of the letter. They have said, however, that it referred in unmentionable phrases to the second Mrs. Marks. The alleged plot was uncovered by Marks' staff of private detectives. Their case against Mrs. Dornblazer is as follows:

The letter was mailed from Bellefontaine, O., on July 30 last. Detectives learned that Mrs. Adams of Joplin had visited Mrs. Dornblazer in New York about this date. They discovered also that she had left New York on a train which passed through Bellefontaine on the day of the postmark. Questioning the train employes, the investigators found a public stenographer who remembered mailing a letter for a woman answering Mrs. Adams' description. He recalled the incident because she did not have a stamp and asked him to get one for her.

Mrs. Adams, confronted with these facts by Marks' investigators, admitted mailing the letter, but denied knowledge of its contents. She was placed under bond as a material witness.

Protests Her Innocence

Attorneys for Marks concede that the letter was not in Mrs. Dornblazer's handwriting. The envelope had been addressed with a typewriter and the body of the letter written in long hand.

Max Steuer, New York lawyer whom Mrs. Dornblazer has engaged for her defense, has this to say concerning the charge:

"This is a conspiracy against my client growing out of Mr. Marks' determination not to pay her the $100,000 trust fund agreed upon."

It is considered doubtful, in view of the evidence disclosed, if anything will come of the trial, which has been set for an early hearing. But her day in court will serve to focus public attention again upon the girl from Kerry Patch. It will be a day of summary to such as like impertinent speculation.

Four husbands. Seven scandals. A little fame. Yes, she has had that. Her voice might have taken her further along the high road if she had not been so preoccupied with husbands. She has had wealth, too, and still is independent. The husbands, it may be guessed, have caused most of the failures and unhappiness in her life. A gambler, an opera singer, a business man, a secretary—hers has been a rich matrimonial experience. Rich, too, has been her experience in the courts. A manslaughter inquiry and two divorce cases. It is difficult to see how any woman starting out at 20 could, in 17 years, crowd more life, more laughter, more tears into a career.

Do not picture her as pitying herself. In every crisis she has taken her own part staunchly.

"This is a frame-up," she said of the latest scandal. "I will be completely vindicated and that man—that man; I'll see that he is properly punished for this."

That man. It has always been so with her.

SIMSON'S CAMP, TANGANYIKA, British East Africa.

SOONER or later the man who hunts the big cats of Africa gets mauled or killed by them. Leslie Simson has the greatest record of lions killed—some 23, I believe, yet he has not met his Waterloo.

But a series of 50 lions is considered about the limit that a man can meet and conquer and come off with a whole hide.

I told you that Stewart Edward White was out to fill his list up to that limit. Well, counting his leopards, he has passed the 50 mark but he has not done so unscathed. He was mauled three days ago.

The reason I have not told you sooner, excepting to send off a brief cable, was that my surgical practice has picked up so much that my literary activities have taken a secondary place. Two gunbearers were mauled at the same time. And this is how it happened:

To begin at the beginning I must begin with the lions.

You see we have pretty well cleaned out the male lions from our immediate neighborhood. That is, we have shot some 25 of the 100 or more that we've seen, and the rest have followed the wildebeest out of the country, perhaps; at least, none but one is in evidence.

Of the old residents, consisting of several groups of indignant females, there is one band that we call the 10 foolish virgins, because of their lone estate and their foolish antipathy toward us. And there was one particularly melodious lion that nightly came roaming over the veldt sobbing and roaring and grunting and parading back and forth just beyond the confines of our camp.

The Lions Roar

He roused the whole community with his deep resonant bellowing, so we called him Caruso. And he had a musical harem with him. We had seen a couple of his female companions and had heard them snarl and beat defiance with their tails in the early gray of the morning as we left camp on our hunting trips.

But no one had ever seen Caruso. He always went to bed early. His main function in life was nocturnal singing. He had a shy, retiring nature.

White has been laying for Caruso's hide. After many unsuccessful forays into the enemies' country, about a week ago he met up with this quarry. Caruso was just a few minutes too late in reaching his apartments.

White saw him and popped a bullet into his hide. The lion jumped into cover and lay "doggo." Around and around the gunbearers and White circled the bush.

Suddenly a tawny flash of color in the jungle grass streaked past him. White fired and struck, but it was not Caruso; it was his large female companion. She dove into the douga, and silently awaited developments.

Now no hunter cares much to shoot females, in spite of the fact that with lionesses you are facing a more dangerous beast, and also that you are ridding the country of the worst game destroyers.

But White wanted Caruso. At last, by stooping low and peering under the matted cover, he saw him lying head on in the center of the thicket, about five yards away. A shot that entered his body ended the career of this lion. He was a fat old boy, who never did any work. His harem did the killing and he did all the singing.

White will show you his pelt in the "Ark" some day when you visit California.

But now he had a wounded lioness in the douga, or ditch, or gully, or shallow stream bed thickly covered with vegetation, whatever you choose to call it.

They threw stones and shouted at her, daring her to come out. She refused to budge, nor would she indicate her presence in any way. After a while they sent a boy to camp to get native porters to beat the brush, shoot off firecrackers and bang on petrol tins; but she would not respond.

Then White did a very unwise thing, something that in his books he has deprecated and termed most foolish; he crawled into that douga on his hands and knees to look for that wounded lioness.

A Hunter Is Mauled

When I said later that that was "damn foolish," he said, "Yes, but it was a challenge, and my code of hunting ethics won't permit me to leave a wounded animal!" That code does not apply to lions, in my opinion.

At any rate he went in and I wasn't there to deter him. He met the lady face to face and blew out her brains at six feet distance. That was lion number 47!

Lady luck was with him till he met this last leopard.

A few days later White said: "Well, we have been hunting pretty steadily for the past two weeks, and I think I will lay off and take a rest. I'll take just a little walk up the river to see where the wildebeest have gone to."

Just a quiet little walk, it was to be!

He took along two gun boys, one for his heavy rifle and one for the .22 calibered gun, also a couple of porters to carry home what camp meat or specimens he might shoot with the small rifle.

I went out with my native archers, looking for waterbuck. When I returned to camp near noon, White had not yet come in, so I lay down to rest my feet. In the midst of one of those tropical 40 winks I was roused by the tent boy who brought my boots and said: "Bwana White wants you. He has a leopard wounded in the bush and one of the boys has been scratched on the head."

I thought he wanted help in beating the leopard out of the grass, so I gathered a half dozen boys and took my bow and my bag of emergency dressings and started off behind the messenger.

Shooting with the bow.

A lion slain by the party after a charge.

The Ford wins: Lioness shot after racing "Lizzie" across the veldt.

We hot-footed it over the midday veldt for a long four miles up the river, when lo and behold I found White and his two gun boys beneath a tree and everybody covered with blood from head to foot!

The Bwana was pale and weak and had one useless arm tucked in his binocular strap. Without a word I went up to him to inspect and dress his wounds, but he waved me aside and said: "Take care of Solomani, he is badly hurt!"

Having been brought up in the army, I did as I was told. Solomani, the gun-bearer, was lying in a coma with his head at the base of the tree.

Great gashes in his scalp and face, his eye gouged half out, his forearms deeply bitten, he was a mass of shredded flesh and blood.

I set to work cleaning and dressing his wounds. White had rubbed permanganate crystals in them and those of the other man already and afterward had taken the few remaining crystals and disinfected his own lacerations.

When finished with Solomani I attended to Kisuma, whose lesions were less extensive, then I was permitted to fix up the Bwana. I syringed all the deep incisions with a strong solution of permanganate and did them up in gauze saturated with the same. Thank goodness, my emergency dressings were just enough to go round!

Then we made a litter of long poles, coats and belts and carried Solomani to camp, White and I leading the way. While we did the rough surgery some of our boys went down into the douga and got the body of the leopard. They skinned it as I worked.

As we journeyed home, though weak and weary, White told me how it all happened.

He has a sprained wrist from shooting his heavy bow, so he has been using the gun more of late. It seems that at the end of their morning's walk up the river, they say a leopard's head in the grass.

Just as White had drawn a bead on it and was taking up the slack in the trigger, the beast jumped. That fraction of a second spoiled the day.

As it leaped, White took a snap shot and hit it far back in the body. As usual, the animal plunged into the thick vegetation. Here the hunters threw stones and shot the small rifle vainly trying to rout it.

For more than two hours they beat about the bush or waited for results. Then they decided to wade in and kick the rascal out.

Leopard Resents Being Kicked

A leopard is so quick, so vindictive, and can hide himself in such short cover that he is an extremely dangerous adversary in the grass.

A gunbearer, unobserved by his master, went ahead of White and began treading down the tangled weeds.

Suddenly out of the very center of the bush arose a streak of yellow light and landed sprawling on the body of this unfortunate man.

They were down, rolling over in the tangled vegetation, in a second, partially hidden from White and struggling for life. White could not shoot from his position but ran as fast as possible to the scene of action.

The second man, Kisuma, was near and in an opportune moment discharged the little gun at the leopard. This saved Solomani's life, for the enraged beast now sprang upon Kisuma and fastened his fangs in his arm.

In this action he exposed his body and White shot the leopard in the chest.

Again the insane beast turned and with ears flattened and his cruel yellow face in a desperate snarl, he leaped at White, dashed aside his gun and bore him to the ground.

Over and over they rolled until the man grabbed the beast by the throat and, as he clenched his right hand about the windpipe, he drew up his knees to force the leopard beneath him.

The struggle was brief. The attack with claw and fang lessened, and White felt the animal grow limp in his grasp. What with his wounds and asphyxia, he soon lay dead under the body of the man.

It was a similar situation that had flashed through the mind of White, one in which Carl Akeley, the eminent naturalist, strangled an attacking leopard. This saved him from greater harm.

White's wounds in shoulder and arm are about healed, and one gun boy is well on the road to recovery. But Solomani, the other gun bearer, is in a pretty bad way. The wound made in his orbit by the leopard's fangs is a destructive one. Fragments of bone and dirt were carried in back of the eyeball and made their appearance later, accompanied by quantities of pus. The eyeball itself was wounded and is now a useless and infected body. His deep incisions in the arm look like shrapnel wounds and are infected with trench bacteria, so that the whole condition is a rotten mess.

Our surgical equipment is limited, of course, and we are taxed to the utmost in ingenuity and resources to meet the surgical condition. He is improving, however, and has no septicemia. The eye is a complete loss and probably must be removed as soon as the orbital infection subsides. In spite of all this the brave fellow smiles at White, on his morning calls, and says: "Bwana, I shall soon be good again; then we will go out and shoot another lion." That's the stuff that Swahili gun bearers are made of.

Now that Arthur Young is back from Nairobi, we are laying in energy for further conquests and adventures.

But I shall nail upon the wall the homely old motto: "Discretion is the better part of valor!"

Here in the wildest part of Africa, in Tanganyika, coursing by horses is impossible, because the tsetse fly and his trypanosomes kill the horses before you can use them, but the flivver takes the place of the horse here as elsewhere. It is moderately immune to sleeping sickness.

Here we are 240 miles from the nearest vestige of civilization, in a position that takes six weeks to reach by foot safari under the most favorable circumstances, yet we reach it, at least Simson does, by motor car in three days; and we can take out the old Lizzie and chase around after lions.

Mind you, we are probably the only people in Tanganyika that do this, and it is very unlikely that it can be done in any other place because of suitable ground. But here we have rolling prairies and an unlimited supply of lions.

So Lizzie takes the place of a horse in Africa. Not all of Simson's lion hunting has been done this way. The vast majority of his simbas were shot on foot after miles and miles of walking and running, but in the past two years he has employed the car as a convenience. It must be driven by an expert and one that knows lions—a sort of chauffeur difficult to pick up on the spur of the moment.

Racing Lions in a Ford

He must have an eagle eye for wart hog holes and hidden ditches. Racing lions is extremely dangerous. From what I've seen of the game, it seems quite as dangerous to run after them as to come up to them.

I shudder when I see Simson make his hairbreadth escapes from pitfalls missed by a foot that would wreck the entire party. He speeds along at 30 to 45 miles an hour, courting disaster while he travels, and running boldly into the jaws of a lion before he jams on the brakes, switches off the juice and hops out from among the pedals and levers with his big gun in his hand.

We all unload at once and are on the ground ready for business in a second. But sometimes we don't get a chance to get out, for the lion comes at us pell mell!

Just last week, when Young and I alone were with Simson, we saw six lionesses saunter out of a douga where they had been on a kill all night.

We set out after them, and by the remarkable generalship of Simson we cut out one from the bunch and coursed her with the car. Inadvertently we ran too near, less than 30 yards, expecting her to continue a wide circle she was making. I was standing on the running board ready to hop off and land an arrow into her, for we have found that this stops them, as a rule and they stand from then on.

But she wheeled and came at us in long leaps. We swerved to escape her charge, and as the car veered sharply away from the lion I nearly was flung into her jaws, holding on to the seat by one finger and having a most eerie feeling of swinging far out with no assurance that I ever would swing back again.

I saw the lioness over my shoulder and she looked like a running cat about to pounce upon a ball of worsted. I just fastened the rest of my digits on a substantial portion of the car and felt that I really was still with the gang, when I saw Young poke his Winchester rifle over the tailboard and blast the lady in the face.

She was just one jump too short. That spoiled another bow and arrow trophy, still I felt there were compensations.

In the absence of White, Young was doing double duty: an archer when we attacked lions and a gun man when the lions attacked us.

White was off in another direction filling up his own simba list. He wants to get past the 50 mark so he will be safe for another deal. He has just about reached it!

We had another disappointment with lions the day before. So far we have not been able to get Massai warriors to back us up in our lion hunting because they are still up in the hills waiting for the rains, which have not seriously started yet. So we are compelled to depend upon our able and experienced lion hunters, Simson and White, to reinforce our weapons where their limitations demand it.

We had rounded up a good-sized male lion, selecting him out of a group that would have done credit to any animal act in a circus. We brought him to bay in the tall grass of the plains at half a mile from his boon companions, and there we assaulted him at a distance of some 30 yards with our arrows.

Shooting With a Bow

Now, hitting a lion at 30 yards as he lies head on in the grass is not an easy thing with a bow. It is about the same as hitting a coal oil can at the length of a city block. And after you hit him you have not done him much damage, even with a bullet, much less with an arrow because he is so heavily armored by bone in his head and mane muscle in his shoulders.

But what does happen when we send an arrow whizzing and strike him in the head or in the wide open mouth: he rises, turns, throws himself, rears in a most dramatic way, trying to dislodge the offending shaft. Then we shoot to get at his heart or chest cavity. We did this with lion No. 25.

Three arrows struck him in the head. One went through his face and entered deeply his throat. White was using his 85-pound bow. He let fly a shaft that struck in the shoulder and buried half its length in the lion's chest. It was a deep wound. Several more hits in the body with this slowed him down. He would not charge, and after hunting about for a few minutes savagely tearing at his wounds and crunching the arrows near him, he seemed to be sick or despondent.

We did not appreciate the gravity of his physical condition—we should have waited as we have done before when we were sure that a fatal wound had been delivered. But because we wanted to stir him up and maintain his status, Simson shot him with the .22 caliber rifle. No one imagines he can kill lions with a .22, or if he does, he would not continue to have any imagination after he tried it.

The little pill struck the lion right in the jugular notch. Our lion was desperately sick, only waiting for an excuse to die. That little pill stuck in the soft center of his neck, skidded along his windpipe and entered his heart. He flopped over on his side and gave up the ghost. I picked out the bullet when the autopsy was in progress.

I also picked out White's sharp broadhead deep in the pulmonary blood vessels, a quick and mortal wound.

But there is another lion that should have been ours by archery, that we can not honestly claim, all on account of a measly little .22 shot—just for fun—as it were.

However, we have done very well so far. In six weeks hunting we've seen 176 different lions, killed 24 and 7 of these were dispatched with the bow and arrow.

Most safaris consider themselves very successful when they get three lions in three months' hunting, but they can't all have Leslie Simson to show them how.

Just at present we are working on the lion problem; shooting from blinds up in trees at game that cannot be approached by other means. In many ways in this African bush we find ourselves defeated in our preconceived plans of procedure. Where we considered the abundance of game a favorable factor in securing meat, we find that this very abundance militates against our success. We stalk a waterbuck by a maneuver that should be successful, and four reedbucks and six dikdiks jump out of the grass ahead of us when they were hidden. And they startle the waterbuck so that our half hour of careful approach goes for nothing and the opportunity has vanished like a great many others, never to return. We make an early morning hunt for topi, one of those large antelopes, and after five or six miles of walking, we come upon a suitable group for a stealthy attack. We get down in the dry douga and laboriously crawl through thorns and jungle grass, only to find that a bunch of Tommies on the opposite side of the douga has winded us and scampered off over the plains and put the entire game field in a state of commotion. We lost the topis.

Birds protect a large number of game animals and they are forever piping forth their warnings to some favorite beast. The rhino has a regular crew of tick birds that perch on his ears or horn or eyelids and feast upon the pendulous ticks. When these buzzbirds see a man they soar aloft and squeak their notes of warning, so that even this stupid dunce is aroused to apprehension and lumbers off "into the blue." ored by bone in his head and masses of uscle in his shoulders.

But what does happen when we send an rrow whizzing and strike him in the fore-ead or in the wide open mouth: he rises and urns, throws himself, rears in a most dra-natic way, trying to dislodge the offending haft. Then we shoot to get at his heart r chest cavity. We did this with lion No. 5.

Three arrows struck him in the head. One ent through his face and entered deeply in is throat. White was using his 85-pound ow. He let fly a shaft that struck in the houlder and buried half its length in the ion's chest. It was a deep wound. Several more hits in the body with this slowed him down. He would not charge, and after fuss-ing about for a few minutes savagely tearing at his wounds and crunching the arrows near him, he seemed to be sick or despondent.

We did not appreciate the gravity of his physical condition—we should have waited as we have done before when we were sure that a fatal wound had been delivered. But be-cause we wanted to stir him up and ascer-tain his status, Simon shot him with his .22 caliber rifle. No one imagines he can kill lions with a .22, or if he does, he would not continue to have any imagination after he tried it.

The little pill struck the lion right in the jugular notch. Our lion was desperately sick, only waiting for an excuse to die. That lit-tle pill stuck in the soft center of his neck, skidded along his windpipe and entered his heart. He flopped over on his side and gave up the ghost. I picked out the bullet when the autopsy was in progress.

I also picked out White's sharp broadhead deep in the pulmonary blood vessels, a quick and mortal wound.

But there is another lion that should have been ours by archery, that we can not hon-estly claim, all on account of a measly little .22 shot—just for fun—as it were.

However, we have done very well so far. In six weeks hunting we've seen 176 different lions, killed 26 and 7 of these were dispatched with the bow and arrow.

Most safaris consider themselves very suc-cessful when they get three lions in three months' hunting, but they can't all have Leo-le Simson to show them how.

Just at present we are working on the blind problem; shooting from blinds up in trees at game that cannot be approached by other means. In many ways in this African hunt we find ourselves defeated in our precon-ceived plans of procedure. Where we con-sidered the abundance of game a favorable factor in securing meat, we find that this very abundance militates against our success. We stalk a waterbuck by a maneuver that should be successful, and four reedbucks and dik-diks jump out of the grass ahead of us where they were hidden. And they startle the wa-terbuck so that our half hour of careful ap-proach goes for nothing and the opportunity is vanished like a great many others, never to return. We make an early morning hunt for topi, one of those large antelopes, and aft-er five or six miles of walking, we come upon a suitable group for a stealthy attack. We crawl down in the dry douga and laboriously crawl through thorns and jungle grass, only to find that a bunch of Tommies on the op-posite side of the douga has winded us and scampered off over the plains and put the en-tire game field in a state of commotion. We hit the topis.

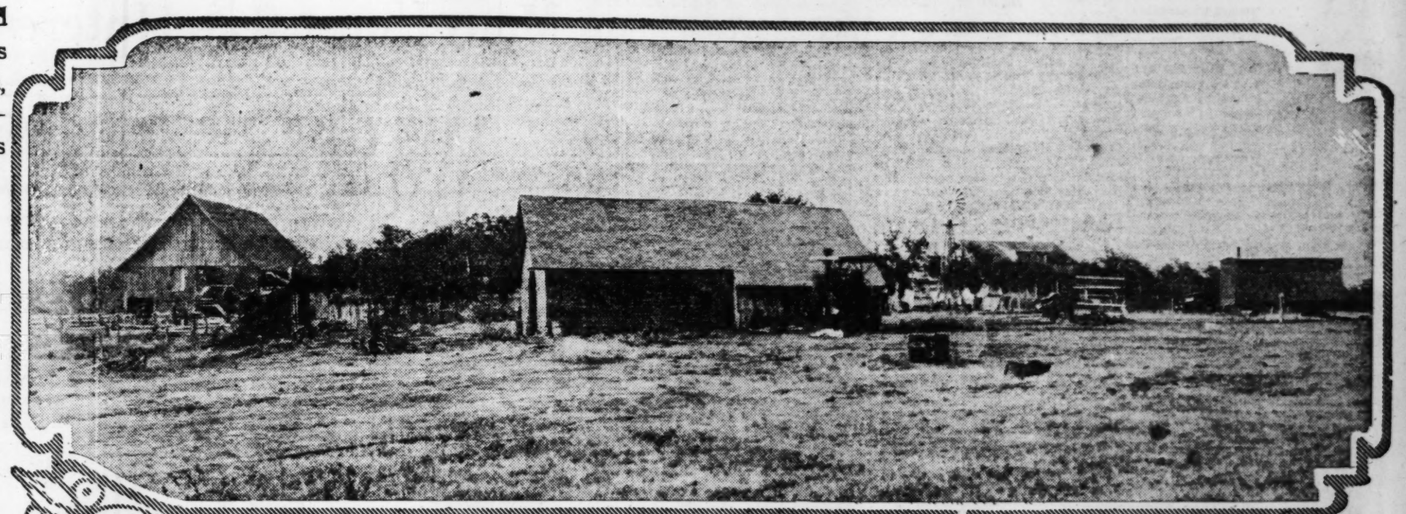
Birds protect a large number of game ani-mals and they are forever piping forth their warnings to some favorite beast. The rhino has a regular crew of tick birds that perch on his ears or horn or eyelids and feast upon the pendulous ticks. When these busybodies see a man they soar aloft and squeak their notes of warning, so that even this sodden brute is aroused to apprehension and lumbers off "into the blue." Giraffes are walking lad-ders for gay little fowls that run up and down their necks and never seem to leave their mounts. These also act as informants and gos-sips.

Queen of Texas Outlaw Gang Rides, Fights and Surrenders With the Boys

LOUISE ROSS PUFFS A CIGARETTE WITH HANDS IN AIR AS THE NOTORIOUS MARTIN-STORY OUTFIT IS ROUNDED UP

In Contrast to Her Is Litsey Story, a Good Girl Who Married Yancy Story, One of the Gang Leaders, While He Was in Jail—Gang Had Terrorized Denton County for Years, Always Hiding Out in Vast Woodland After Raids—But a Fearless Sheriff and Ranger Captain Ended Its Career With Bullets.

House and barns on the Yancey Story farm, where loot was found.



By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DENTON, Tex., Oct. 10.

HERE in Denton County woodland and prairie meet. To the north stretches the prai-rie, hundreds of miles. Behind the horizon's rim is the only hiding place for a hunt-ed man on a horse in that direction. To the south, though, for a hundred miles, is the forest of scrub oak, where a man on a horse cannot be seen or pursued.

So Denton County has always had its robber bands, faring forth to raid the prairie towns, fleeing to the cover of the woods. They say here that the Martin-Story gang is the worst that ever infested the county and terrorized the country roundabout, but the men of the Martin-Story gang and the woman who is called their queen have been driven in-to a corner and their day of reckoning with the law has come. Webb Martin is on trial at Dallas for his life, charged with the murder of Deputy Sheriff R. B. Parsons on a Den-ton street. Most of the alleged members of the gang are in jail, with dozens of indict-ments against them.

On the issue of the battle hangs the happi-ness of two women, Louise Ross, called the queen of the gang, and Litsey Story, who was Litsey Chadwick until they arrested Yancey Story and then, believing in him, she mar-ried him in Dallas jail. Two very different women. Louise Ross, hard and proud of it; Litsey Story, a sweet and gentle ranch girl, against whom no ill is spoken.

The gangs that flourished in Denton Coun-ty in earlier times had their day and passed away. Most of the gangsters were killed or sent to prison. For two years a new gang has been having its day. Banks have been robbed and crimes of every kind have been committed. Loot of not less than $250,000 has been taken. The Martin-Story gang has been blamed for it all.

The terrorization of Denton County was complete. The arm of the law was paralyzed. The men who were believed to be members of a robber band came and went. Mostly they were not men who swaggered, except when whisky put a strut into their gait. Sober, they were smiling, soft-spoken men, but they carried guns on their hips and the saying up and down the country was that they would never be taken alive.

They were taken alive, though, and, be-cause they were taken alive, the fear of them has died out of the hearts of the people that they terrorized and they are no longer un-willing to testify.

LOUISE ROSS

WEBB MARTIN

Captain Tom Hickman with Yancey Story and "Smilin' Sheb" Stiff.

Captain Tom Hickman of the Rangers congratulates the newlyweds. Above, in center—Webb Martin, after his surrender, with Deputies Pickens, Rowland and Alcorn.

The Rangers Take a Hand

When lawlessness paralyzes the arm of the law in a Texas County, there is always the arm of the Texas Rangers, which knows no paralysis. When conditions in Denton Coun-ty became unbearable, the Rangers took a hand. Capt. Tom Hickman of the Rangers, and Schuyler Marshall Jr., the Sheriff of Dallas County, talked it over and decided that the situation in Denton County, adjoin-ing Dallas County, did not concern that coun-ty alone. The gang that had its headquarters in and around Denton was a menace to all this part of the State. So these two, with the aid of others, began gathering evidence.

They obtained a good deal and were pre-paring to close in on the gang when Webb Martin, cherishing a grudge against Parsons, killed him and, with a dozen of his hench-men and Louise Ross in his home, stood a siege until they wilted under machine gun fire and Martin surrendered and that brought things to a climax a little sooner than was expected.

Nobody knows exactly why Martin killed Parsons, but Parsons was an officer of the law and that was reason enough, though Mar-tin probably had more specific grievance against him. They met on the street here and Martin did not stop shooting until he had sent 11 bullets into Parsons' body, some of them fired after Parsons was down and dead or dying.

It was rather a flagrant thing, shooting a man that way in the light of day on the street, but for the time being Martin was not molested. He still had his six-guns and he might have reloaded them. He acted like he had, for they say he climbed up on a cotton wagon and harangued the crowd, to the general effect that he was the wildest man in Texas and if anybody thought he could be taken alive now was the time to try it.

Nobody tried it and Martin sauntered to a grocery and procured some supplies and went home, where he sat for a while on the porch with his two pistols and a rifle, imply-ing clearly enough that he did not intend to be taken alive.

Yancey Story and other friends were sum-moned or heard about the occurrence, which naturally was the subject of conversation in the town, and came around to ask Martin if there was anything that they could do for him. He said he supposed sooner or later there would be something done about it and they might stick around. Louise Ross, it was learned later, was there. She says she just happened to drop in.

It was not the time or place for a woman, but Louise, by all the signs, felt at home. She knew Martin and the others. They were friends of hers. They were the kind of he-men that she liked best to associate with. She had left the comparatively peaceable life of Dallas and, from choice, had shared adven-tures of the Denton coterie As bearing upon her own appraisal of herself, she is quoted as having casually remarked that she was as hard as the back end of a shooting gallery.

It was a trying day for Sheriff Bill Fry. He knew the saying that the Martin-Story outfit would never be taken alive. He and some others had at one time found reason for the saying in an impromptu exchange of shots with Martin.

A Machine Gun Sortie

What had just happened could not be over-looked, but it was known that Martin had a particular apathy to being taken into custody by Denton County officials, so, to avoid hard feelings, Sheriff Fry called up Sheriff Mar-shall at Dallas and asked him to bring 15 men. He also invited officers at Gainesville, McKinney, Decatur and Bowie to come and participate. The presence of Capt. Hickman also was desired but he was away somewhere.

Marshall had only five men available out he thought that would be enough. They pitched some machine guns into an automo-bile and sped to Denton. Delegations from the other towns came in. Sheriff Marshall was elected captain. He called up Martin and advised him to surrender. Martin said if the Sheriff would come up to the house, un-armed, they would talk it over. Marshall and Deputy John Rowland went to the house. They laid their guns on the porch and went in. Martin's friends kept them covered dur-ing the interview. The Sheriff and his Depu-ty needed all of their nerve. Some of the men who had them covered had been drinking and were inclined to be careless and from time to time they gave expression to the half-formed notion of shooting their visitors.

Martin was disposed to be pernickety. He would not mind surrendering if he could do so at his own time and place and in a digni-fied manner. He would be willing to surren-der at noon the next day to Capt Hickman. Sheriff Marshall told him he would surren-der unconditionally or they would shoot the roof off of his house.

"I'll give you until a quarter after 10 o'clock to surrender," said Marshall. "If you don't come out by then the shooting will begin."

He and Rowland went out and picked up their guns and departed.

People living within a radius of two blocks were cleared out of their houses. They and the rest of the townspeople gathered out of range and waited.

Three machine guns were set up at dif-ferent angles. At 10:15, Martin not having appeared, the bombardment began. Answer-ing fire came from the house, the besieged firing from the cellar through the lattice around the foundation.

After each round the machine gunners paused to observe the effect. After the third round a woman called out from the house that the garrison was ready to surrender.

"Come out with your hands up," com-manded Sheriff Marshall.

Louise Ross came out with her hands up, smoking a cigarette. Two men followed. Then came Martin. It had always been his boast that he never would put his hands up for any man. Now, by way of compromise, he held them only about half way up. Sheriff Marshall, not having heard of Martin's boast that he never would put his hands up, was not disposed to be technical. He says now that if he had known that Martin was holding his hands that way deliberately in half fulfillment of a boast, he would have shot him.

A Raid on the Farm

Most of the men in the house surrendered. A few escaped. The captors reported to Sheriff Fry. "Gentlemen," he said, "I thank you for your assistance. Any time I can do anything for you, call on me."

Is was the general belief that the gang, with a reputed membership of about 30, had its headquarters at the Yancey Story farm near Argyle, over in Benton County, once the hangout of Sam Bass, an outlaw of an earlier day. Its ranch house and barns are on an elevation that commands the prairie ap-proaches. Back of the house and barns are 300 acres of woods. It was believed that on the farm was hidden the unnegotiated loot of 14 bank robberies and many raids on prai-rie towns, one of which was almost destroyed by fires set by the raiders.

The next step was to raid the farm. This, notwithstanding that the prestige of the gang had been somewhat impaired by the surrend-er of Martin, was a delicate proceeding that called for discreet approach and general cir-cumspection. The raid was planned by Capt. Hickman and Sheriff Marshall, with Sheriff Fry co-operating. Rangers and the Sheriffs and their deputies crept up on the place at dawn. It had been a warm night and Yan-cey Story was found sleeping in an automo-bile in front of the house. Shelby Stiff, who smiles so much that they call him "Smil-in' Sheb," was asleep on the porch. Half a dozen men were sprawled about wherever the chances were best for a cooling breeze. When they were awakened they found them-selves looking into the wide muzzles of guns with good gunners behind them. They sur-rendered without resistance. These were the men who never would be taken alive.

The search brought to light identifiable loot taken from banks and other places and clinched the proof that was needed to obtain indictments.

A special grand jury was called. Elbert Hoover, young district attorney of Denton County, presented the proof and 81 indict-ments were returned, of which 11 were against Martin and 26 against Story and 13 against Stiff and three against Louise Ross and the rest against other alleged members of the gang.

Louise Ross, who had not been held when she came out of the Martin house with her hands in the air, smoking a cigarette, was found at Texarkana and brought back and locked up. She is charged in the indictments with complicity in the murder of Parsons and with assault to kill in resisting the officers who besieged the Martin home.

There was a woman who made advance surveys for the gang that has been robbing banks in this part of Texas. Her part was to dress up like a million dollars and go to a bank in the role of a prospective depos-itor and talk it over with the cashier, the while taking note of the lay of the ground. This happened several times, and the woman came to be spoken of as the "Powder Puff Bandit," because she was always looking like that. That is as close as they ever came to naming her and it might have been Louise or somebody else. She says it was somebody else.

Worse than that, the robbers were accom-panied on two or three occasions by a wo-man who did not even take the trouble to wear knickerbockers. This woman, again, may have been anybody but Louise Ross. On the subject she is thoroughly uncommunica-tive. Not even the iron-willed Tom Hickman can get anything out of her. She is even rude to him. He was questioning her one day, jollying her along, laughing indulgently at her bright cracks, but pressing her for an-swers, until, with fine scorn, she said. "You ought to be a deputy sheriff in some hick town. Now laugh that off."

Litsey's Romance

Capt. Tom laughed it off and now he tells the joke on himself. To appreciate the joke one needs to live in Texas and know what this Hickman person is made of.

That is as far, though, as he has got with Louise, unless he is holding back something, which he probably isn't. For Louise has men-tioned the resemblance between herself and the back end of a shooting gallery.

The other woman is just as different as can be. Nobody has a word to say against Litsey Chadwick. Except, maybe, that she showed bad judgment in picking out Yancey Story for a husband. But they grew up to-gether and she thinks he is all right She lives with her mother, Mrs. Pearl Chadwick, who owns the Story ranch, which was found-ed by the girl's grandfather, Richard Litsey. Her father, Lee C. Bunn Chadwick, deceased, was a widely known cattleman.

They were going to be married anyway, she and Yancey, and when he got into trou-ble she thought that was the time to stand by him. She would marry him in jail. Capt. Tom consented and the ceremony was per-formed in the old gallows room at the jail, with Shelby Stiff as best man and Bertha Lee Chadwick as bridesmaid. There were flow-ers and smiles and after the ceremony Capt. Tom came forward and congratulated them in his best party manner.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"It is a mistake for old people to take strong cathartic medicines, as they are seldom necessary.

"Just because you are old, doesn't mean you need strong physic."

—DR. CALDWELL

"Purges" and "Physics"

Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils every day or two.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels of old folks. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Spanish Woman to Fulfill Vow for Son's Return From War.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—A famous Paris dressmaking house has begun work on a robe which will cost considerably more than $10,000, the price offered when the order was given being 80,000 Spanish pesetas, which at the current rate of exchange is $11,500. The order was received from a Spanish woman, who, having a son fighting with the Spanish forces in Morocco, vowed to present a robe of that value to the Madonna if her son returned safe and sound. The boy now is back in Spain, having completed his term of service without having received a scratch, and the grateful mother has set about fulfilling her vow to the Virgin.

'FUR GARTER' IS LONDON FAD

Made Up Into a Variety of Designs.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The latest London fad in fur fashions is the "fur garter," designed by fur experts and made up into a variety of designs, but the prices demanded for the new "creations" seem likely to preclude a widespread popular demand. One pair of sea otter garters, made for a "fur ball" which has been planned to take place at Covent Garden in aid of Middlesex Hospital, is priced at £15 (about $75), while other designs, in beaver fur and in real ermine, trimmed with small black tails, are expected to bring similarly high prices.

The increasing demand for rabbit fur trimming has induced several society women to breed rabbits for the fur trade. Lady Rachael Byng, Lady Helena Forbes, Lady Victoria Percy and Lady Layland Barratt are the latest to take up rabbit growing, which is said to be a profitable enterprise. Princess Mary and the Duchess of York both wear coats of rabbit skins.

Celebrated Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Backus Sr. of 4521 Nebraska avenue celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, Oct. 2, at the Mount Pleasant Social Hall. The couple came to St. Louis from Germany in 1880 and Backus, until his retirement some years ago, was engaged in the wholesale liquor business.

NEW LAMPE SHOE CO. PLANT

250 Persons to Be Employed in Factory at Elsberry (Mo.)

The new Elsberry (Mo.) plant of the W. H. Lampe Shoe Co. of St. Louis was formally opened yesterday. It has 16,000 square feet of floor space, employs 250 persons, manufactures women's shoes exclusively and has a daily capacity of 2500 pairs.

William H. Lampe, president, started the St. Louis factory in 1920. The Elsberry Chamber of Commerce was instrumental in obtaining the new plant for Elsberry and conducted the opening program, which was held up pending the return of Mr. and Mrs. Lampe from an European trip.

Feel Glorious! Nicest Laxative, "Cascarets" 10c

Don't stay headachy, bilious, constipated, sick! One or two pleasant, candy-like "Cascarets" any time will gently stimulate your liver and start your bowels. Then you will both look and feel clean, sweet, refreshed; your head clear, stomach right, tongue pink and your skin rosy.

Because cheery, harmless "Cascarets" never gripe, inconvenience or sicken, "Cascarets" has become the largest selling laxative in the world for men, women, children. Buy a box at any drug store.

—EDITORIAL—

You Can Do It!

Whether the planet Mars is inhabited or not is of little interest to the masses.

How to enjoy the pleasures of life on a moderate income is a far more important matter with most Americans.

This can be done by using proper judgment in the mode of daily living, and that includes a wide field.

If those of us with moderate incomes would confine ourselves to the judicious use of our earnings by purchasing only substantial, not shoddy, merchandise of whatever nature, we could solve a problem which is a bugbear in many American HOMES.

TWO LARGE TRACTS OF LAND IN COUNTY SOLD FOR ABOUT $389,000

David May Buys 207 Acres at Clayton and Crystal Springs Road; Syndicate Buys 85 Acres on the Denny Road.

By Berry Moore.

Renewed buying on an aggressive scale on Denny road and on the Clayton road was disclosed through sale announcements at the close of the week. David May, president of the Famos-Barr Co., and Edward L. Bakewell, realtor, were the leading figures in these sections.

A tract of 207 acres, with 2500 front feet on the south side of Clayton road, and approximately 8000 feet on the Crystal Springs road, a mile west of Denny road, was acquired by May from Jacob L. Babler, through the Weisels-Gerhart company. The price paid was approximately $264,000 according to realty circles.

The tract, which is known as the Tesson farm, was purchased by May as a country seat with plans for a residence and grounds on a pretentious scale. It is grouped with a number of well-known tracts, including that of the estate of Frank Reilly, on the north side of Clayton road, known as the Hill Top farm, and it is just north of Crystal Springs Park. The north and east parts of the tract are under cultivation, while the southern and the western parts are dense with forest trees.

Tract Well Located.

The tract has recently received much attention from golf associations and subdivision operators, owing to its attractive situation.

Babler, in the foregoing connection, acquired the May residence at 5 Washington Terrace, a description of which with illustrations is given elsewhere. Negotiations in both instances were conducted by Henry L. Weisels, vice president of the Weisels-Gerhart company.

Incidentally, it is understood that Babler has virtually closed negotiations for 40 acres on the west side of Spade road, between the Clayton road and the Conway road, but details were not available.

The Bakewell Purchase.

A syndicate headed by Bakewell purchased 85 acres of high ground on the east side of Denny road a short distance north of the Manchester road, opposite his new country home on the west side of Denny road.

The seller was Eugene P. Curran, who acquired the tract before the movement in this section had reached an appreciable stage, and who was given a generous profit on his investment. Reported consideration in this transaction was $125,000 or $1500 an acre. Before the ink on the deed was fairly dry, however, Bakewell had been offered a profit of $15,000 for the purchase, which the members of the syndicate were unanimous in refusing.

To the north of the 85-acre tract is the handsome residence of Charles W. Brown and to the east the beautiful home of Ben F. Johnson, while a new residence is under construction on the west side of Denny road adjoining the Phoenix Stock Farm for Louis F. Hager Jr.

Purchased as Investment.

Identity of the members of the syndicate acquiring the Curran tract is withheld. The purchase, it was stated, was made as an investment.

Doubtless the Curran tract, which has a southern extension with a frontage on Manchester road, was made to protect the Phoenix stock farm on the opposite side of Denny road, recently purchased and laid out in 20-acre plots by Bakewell.

Bakewell announced several sales of plots in the Phoenix stock farm layout. Details of these are given in another column.

Several other large deals have been closed or pending involving Denny road and Clayton road holdings, which if brought to a successful conclusion, will give further zest to the movement in these sections.

57 ACRES SOLD ON MANCHESTER ROAD

The Cornet & Zeibig Trust Co. announces the sale of 57 acres on the north side of Manchester road, near the Warson road, to a syndicate headed by Frank Tegethoff of Clayton.

The Pullis heirs of Indianapolis were the sellers of this property, which is to be subdivided for modern homes.

WAGNER-GRANT-BELL SELL APARTMENT FOR $80,000

Wagner-Grant-Bell report the sale of 6246 Northwood avenue, one of the new six-family "Wagner-Built" apartments, comprising seven rooms and two baths, to Jacob Rupp for $80,000 cash.

C. E. Cravens, sales manager, states that apartments built in this district were sold before completion and only one remains unsold on Northwood.

The six buildings on Rosebury, which are under construction, comprise five rooms, sun parlor and tile bath. These are all the company has available, with the exception of two three-family buildings of seven rooms and two baths which are just under way.

The company plans an innovation for the three-family buildings in this district, for which plans are being drawn. They will comprise eight rooms and three baths, and will have tiled floor halls and solarium.

Three stores in the new business corner just completed by the Mars Realty Co. at Natural Bridge and Belt avenues, have been leased. Applications for space have been heavy.

A large industrial site on Clayton avenue, just west of Newstead, was sold by the company to the William Wurdack Electric Manufacturing Co.

MRS. LORENZO E. ANDERSON TO BUILD HOME IN COUNTY

Purchases 23-Acre Hill Top Site Midway Between the Denny and Geyer Roads.

Mrs. Lorenzo E. Anderson has purchased from Edward L. Bakewell a hilltop of 23½ acres midway between the Denny and Geyer roadss, and situated between the home of Bakewell and that of Louis Hager Jr., now building on the Denny road. Mrs. Anderson will improve the site with a handsome residence for her own use. The site, aside from being one of the highest points in St. Louis County, has interesting historical associations. It is a part of a farm consisting of more than 1000 acres, originally owned by a Mr. Maddox from Kentucky, who settled on this farm. He had a large family. One of his daughters married Count von Walkenstein of Germany and at the time of this marriage Maddox gave to her the 160 acres now composing the Phoenix Stock Farm, recently bought by Edward L. Bakewell. At the time Maddox gave his daughter this farm, he built for her in 1789 the house which still stands on the highest point of the tract just acquired by Mrs. Anderson. The house contains three rooms, each 20x20 feet. The house is built of hand-hewed black walnut logs, most of which are 20 to 24 feet long. All the logs were hewed with broadaxes. In place of nails, dowel pins were used. The cellars are deep, built at the time as a protection against the Indians. The walls of the cellars are of lime quarried on the farm. The house is chinked with straw and yellow clay, and the floors deadened by being packed with the same material. The floors are thick, 12 to 16 inches, and the clay and straw is now as hard as rock.

About 1861 the old log house was weather-boarded and an addition added to the north which was used as a store and trading post. At this place trappers brought their furs to exchange for other commodities. The doors in this recent addition are double, and the locks throughout the old house are now curiosities, having been made in Germany of wrought iron. They are several times the size of present door locks and are equipped with keys several times larger than the modern key. The roof of the house is of clapboard, and this also is handhewed and put on without the use of nails.

Some 20 years ago the then owner of the property, Benjamin Franklin Thomas, desiring to construct a larger barn, demolished the old barn built in 1789, and found that the beams of the old barn were hand-hewed out of solid black walnut. These beams were about 24 feet long and 24 inches square, and Thomas realized from the sale of these walnut logs almost enough money to build a barn of modern materials several times the size of the original.

Maritz & Young have been employed by Mrs. Anderson as architects for her new home, with instructions to work the framework of the original house into use as one of the rooms in the new residence.

Since Bakewell bought the Phoenix Stock Farm, comprising 125 acres, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hager Jr. have bought the property adjoining on the north and will improve it immediately with a home. Joseph O'Neil of the O'Neil Lumber Co. recently acquired 40 acres across from Bakewell's home on which he will build a home.

100 MORE LOTS FOR PAGEWOOD PLANNED

Negotiations Under Way for Land to Meet Demand for This Property.

Negotiations are under way for land which will give Pagewood, a new subdivision, at the northwest corner of Page avenue and Woodson road, an additional 100 lots, to meet the demand for this property. The addition, now comprising 900 lots, thus will embrace a total of 1000 lots.

The deal is in the hands of the Ben Altheimer & Brother Realty Co., which controls, and which is marketing Pagewood with W. J. Christy, director of sales. The present tract has extensive frontage on both Page avenue and on Woodson road.

Although formally placed on the market only three weeks ago, a total of $300,000 of ground in the addition already has been sold, representing a total of 250 lots, which sets a new record in the subdivision field in St. Louis County.

With absorption on this scale, indications are that the addition will have been entirely disposed of before the close of the current year, with favorable weather conditions prevailing.

Many lots have been purchased by builders who are proceeding with plans for cottages and bungalows to be offered on installment basis. Numerous lots on both Page avenue and on Woodson road, which thoroughfares are regarded as available for business purposes, have been sold, including the northwest corner of Page avenue and Woodson road, for which $110 a foot was realized.

The location, which is right in the path of the growth of the city, together with the unprecedented terms of sale, $1 down and $1 a week, of sale is the potent factor in the swift absorption of this property.

Improvements in Pagewood are well under way, notwithstanding unfavorable weather conditions, which have retarded grading as well as delivery of surfacing materials, but with open weather this work promises to be brought to a speedy finish.

The company is conducting a bus service on Page avenue between Hodiamont avenue and the Woodson road, the east boundary of the tract, for the convenience of prospective purchasers.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR 100 ACRES OF SHAW TRACT CLOSED

Cyrus Crane Willmore Organization Said to Have Paid Record Price for Kingshighway Property.

Negotiations, which have been under way since June for the transfer of the Henry Shaw tract of 100 acres on South Kingshighway, to the Cyrus Crane Willmore Organization, Inc., with offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building, were concluded yesterday.

The price was not disclosed, but it is said that it was on a record basis. This is the first transfer of this property since it was acquired by Henry Shaw in 1843. The trustees of the Missouri Botanical Gardens, in control since Shaw's death in 1889, expect to utilize the funds realized through the sale to further the garden development in the county.

For several years, efforts have been made from time to time by subdivision operators to obtain possession of this highly valuable tract, the eligibility of which for apartment and business development has been generally recognized.

The property is a shortd istance south of Tower Grove Park, on the west side of Kingshighway, and extends from Fyler avenue on the north to Pernod avenue on the south.

The purchase of the Shaw tract indicates that the $4,000,000 developments of the Willmore Organization, "University Hills," "University Park" and "University Park No. 2," in the heart of University City, are virtually complete. Cyrus Crane Willmore, president of the Real Muses for a client.

Type of Duplex That Is in Demand

Duplex residence in Pasadena, Webster, Big Bend road and Selma avenue, purchased by Oscar J. Mueller.

The story of the development of the residential project, Pasadena, Webster, is a remarkable one. What two years ago was an undulating, wooded private estate today is an improved, highly restricted duplex residential addition, rivaling in architectural beauty any of the St. Louis County's exclusive residential sections.

Pasadena, Webster, in the center of Webster Groves, is conveniently situated regarding schools, churches, shopping and amusement centers, and transportation facilities. Complete street improvements, costing approximately $60,000 have been in use for some time and 30 buildings, valued at $750,000, are either completed or under construction. Plans have been accepted for four more new duplexes, three of which will be built by L. L. Livingston and one by Edward H. Hess.

According to the Alfred Baker Realty Co., which developed Pasadena, Webster, there has been a steady demand for the renting of these duplexes, most of the buildings being leased before completion.

ANSWER TO INJUNCTION ON LODGE DISPUTE FILED

Claim Set Up That Plaintiffs Are Without Authority to Fight Removal of Headquarters.

Answer to the temporary restraining order issued Sept. 16 by Circuit Judge Hall to prevent the removal of headquarters of Missouri Chapter No. 1, Royal Arch Masons, and of the Missouri Commandery, Knights Templar, from St. Louis to Trenton, Mo., was filed yesterday in advance of the hearing tomorrow on decision for a permanent injunction.

The temporary injunction was obtained upon allegations that the present headquarters, in the Board of Education building, were leased for five years in 1922, and that Ray F. Denslow, grand recorder of the Missouri Commandery, Knights Templar; grand recorder of the Royal and Select Masters of Missouri, and secretary of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, named as chief defendant, was about to set up headquarters of these organizations in Trenton, his former home, in opposition to by-laws, and without authority.

The answer filed yesterday sets up claims of authority in the action taken, and in addition alleges the plaintiffs acted without authority. The defense also claims it is not essential to have headquarters in a big city. It is claimed that Trenton has advantages that will be beneficial to the organizations and that rent can be obtained there $300 a year cheaper. Further, it is set forth that Denslow's health is such that he must remove to a smaller city.

MAN INDICTED IN ST. LOUIS HELD BY MICHIGAN POLICE

Mickey Jones, Sought for Murder of Taxicab Chauffeur, Arrested at Monroe.

Word that a man giving the name of one under indictment here for the murder of John Mavtkowski, a taxicab chauffeur, on Oct. 23, 1924, was under arrest at Monroe, Mich., reached the police yesterday. Detectives Carroll and Adams had received information last May that this man, Michael J. Jones, was in Monroe and they wrote to the Chief of Police there to look for him.

A telegram came from the Chief yesterday, saying: "Am holding man giving name Mickey Jones. Is he wanted?" The reply from the St. Louis police was to hold the prisoner and compare his finger prints with those of the murder defendant in possession of the Monroe County Sheriff.

Mavtkowski, who was 23 years old and resided at 4460 McCaffery place, was killed in a saloon at 3036 Washington boulevard. Jones was indicted for the murder following testimony by the bartender, a frequenter of the place and a woman shoe factory worker, who told of having ridden with Mavtowski in his taxicab, with Jones as a passenger, going to the saloon, after a quarrel between the chauffeur and Jones.

TWO HIGHWAY CASES TO BE ARGUED MONDAY

Supreme Court Will Hear Proceedings Involving Powers of State Commission.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 10.—Two cases bearing on the Fulton road injunction suit which has tied up construction of State highway No. 2 through Callaway and Boone counties will be argued and submitted to the State Supreme Court in a special sitting of the court Monday.

One of the cases is an injunction proceeding from St. Charles and Warren counties in which the petitioners seek to test the powers of the State Highway Commission to build highway No. 2 through the two counties on a route varying from that originally designated by the Legislature. The injunction was denied in the lower court and the road already has been built through St. Charles and Warren counties. The St. Charles-Warren case is similar to the Fulton case in which the petitioners are seeking to prevent the commission from changing the route so that it will miss Calwood, Fulton and Millersburg.

The other case to be argued is a mandamus suit filed by a contracting company to compel the Highway Commission immediately to award contracts for construction of the 32.7 miles of paving held up by the Fulton suit.

MEININGER AND ROSS APPEALS UP TUESDAY

Night and Day Bank Cases on Docket of the State Supreme Court.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 10.—State Supreme Court will convene Tuesday for the October term, with 445 cases on the dockets of Divisions 1 and 2 and court en banc. The criminal docket in Division No. 2, carrying 89 appeals, is the heaviest on record in the court.

Division No. 1 has 91 civil cases on the October docket and 112 civil cases on the January call. Division No. 2 has 91 civil cases and 89 criminal cases for the term. Court en banc, which convenes Nov. 2 after the divisions finish with their October dockets, has 62 cases to be heard.

About 20 criminal cases from St. Louis are on the docket for No. 2, which hears both criminal and civil cases.

Meininger and Ross Appeals.

Outstanding among these are two appeals of Arthur O. Meininger and two appeals of Donald W. Ross, from convictions growing out of the wrecking of the defunct Night and Day Bank of St. Louis. Meininger, cashier of the looted bank, was twice convicted on charges of receiving deposits when he knew the bank was in an insolvent condition, receiving one sentence of five years in prison and a second sentence of three years. Appeals from these convictions will be heard on October 29.

Meininger previously was convicted of embezzlement and sentenced to five years in prison. The Supreme Court reversed the case on a technical flaw in an instruction to the jury, and Meininger was acquitted last month on second trial.

Ross, who was Special Deputy Finance Commissioner in charge of liquidation of the Night and Day Bank, was convicted on two charges of embezzlement of funds of the wrecked bank. He was sentenced to five years in prison on each charge. His two appeals will be heard on Oct. 26. Attorneys for Ross recently sought a continuance of the cases, but their motion was overruled by Supreme Court.

Halliday Plea Also Listed.

Two appeals of George V. Halliday, former St. Louis broker, from two prison sentences totaling eight years, will be heard on Oct. 13, the opening day. Halliday was sentenced to five years on a forgery charge in connection with counterfeiting of French interim certificates, and to three years on a charge of embezzlement in connection with operation of his brokerage business.

Appeals from death sentences imposed on George Baker and Josh Cartwright, negroes, for murder, will be heard Oct. 17. They were convicted of a part in the murder of Harry Leonard, proprietor of a soft drink saloon in St. Louis, while attempting to hold up Leonard in his saloon. Leon Williams, negro, was sentenced on July 17, last, for the murder of Leonard after the Supreme Court had affirmed his conviction and sentence.

JUNIOR DEMOCRATS TO GIVE DINNER AT FOREST PARK HOTEL

Gathering of Young Women Tomorrow Night to Be Addressed By Clark McAdams.

Clark McAdams is to speak on "Democracy" before the Junior Democrats at a dinner to be given at the Forest Park Hotel at 6 p. m. tomorrow, for the purpose of organizing the young women of St. Louis for a study of Democracy and the Democratic party in its relation to the American Government.

Thus far about 50 young women have affiliated with the Junior Democrats, forming an organization which seeks nation-wide scope in its activity, which is to be among young women of the ages from 17 to 30.

Courses of study in Democracy, including the history and growth of popular Government, a study of the American Constitution and of American history by presidential administrations have been evolved, and will lead up to studies in American foreign relations and this nation's participation in world peace projects, including the League of Nations. These classes are to begin in the latter part of the month and efforts are being made to interest college students, business women and the stay-at-home women in them.

LABOR EMPLOYMENT GROWS IN ILLINOIS

"Expansion Runs With Unanimity Through the List," Report Announces.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—A turn for the better has come for the working people and employers of Illinois. The survey of the Illinois Department of Labor for September shows that employment is on the increase.

"Expansion runs with such unanimity through the list of industries that the reality of the betterment is unquestioned," says R. D. Cahn, chief of the bureau. "Practically the only industries which are not increasing their operations are those in which the active season has been passed, and the normal rest period has ensued.

"Reports from employers in a wide range of employment and representing 40 per cent of the factory employes of the State, show that manufacturers have taken on 2.4 per cent more employes than they had in August. Assuming the same rate of growth to run throughout the industries of the State, is appears that about 18,000 more people were at work in the factories of Illinois in September than were employed in August. It is the largest growth the industries of Illinois have experienced since early 1923.

Increase in 10 Cities.

In Chicago, the free employment offices for the month placed more than 7500 persons, which is the largest record the offices have been able to report since October, 1923, when slightly more than 8000 workers were placed in positions. The identical employers had in August, an aggregate of 274,675 workers. The number of female employes expanded more rapidly than the number of male employes, the reports indicate.

Of the cities, for which separate analyses are made, employment increased in 10 instances and declined in 4. The expansion during the month was largest at Moline, Rock Island and Bloomington.

"For the first time since early spring, employment was up in the steel plants, 119 of them appearing to have increased their working forces by 4.1 per cent in the month. The automobile and accessory plants are working as if they were at the height of their season. The farm implement factories, too, were hiring help freely, and down at the Tri-cities where there are numbers of agricultural machinery factories, many more people were at work in September than were employed in the month preceding. The car building industry responded to better business, by hiring 2.5 per cent more workers—it appears from the reports of 13 employers—in that industry with aggregate payrolls exceeding 9000. The changes elsewhere in the metals, machinery and conveyance group of industry were of less consequence but on the upgrade.

Mine Operations Improve.

"Operations at the mines continue to improve. New mines reopened, the ranks were filled up at the mines which had been previously opened, and steadier work all around was indicated by the swell in the size of the payrolls.

"Building work was held back by the rainy weather that prevailed on a number of days during the month, but this was true more of road work than building construction. As for the future prospects, based upon the permits taken out during September, they are that during the coming year, building work will be less than for the past year."

SAYS CHURCHES ARE UNITED ON PROHIBITION QUESTION

President of Anti-Saloon League Says Officers Work for Low Wages.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—There is a greater unanimity of sentiment in the churches of America on the prohibition question than there ever was on the matter of abolition of slavery.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson, president of the Anti-Saloon League of America, made this statement in outlining the biennial meeting of the league to be held there November 5-10.

"The Anti-Saloon League is really the church in action against the organized liquor traffic," Bishop Nicholson asserted. "No greater danger could befall the league than to have a diminution of interest on the part of the churches.

"Many of our officers have been and still are clergymen. They have worked for meager salaries almost without exception sacrificially. The president receives no salary and some others of the general officers serve gratuitously. The general superintendent and general counsel are paid moderate salaries. Collections that have supported the league have been in very large measure free-will offerings taken in the churches of the various denominations.

"A word should be said also for the Women's Christian Temperance Union and other similar organizations. Not a few of them have suffered ignominy at the hands of unscrupulous persons. The list of those who have had houses bombed or who have suffered death at the hands of the minions of the whisky business is a notable roll of martyrs. In the names of those who have died the martyrs' death for the cause, the church should go forward."

DISSOLVED UNITS IN A. F. OF L. LOSE TITLES

Federation Proceedings Run Into First Controversy in Convention at Atlantic City.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 10.—The only ripples on the hitherto placid proceedings of the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor developed today over proposed minor amendments to the constitution.

One of these, a proposal by the Law Committee, that the Federation take over the property of central or state bodies which might be dissolved, caused an animated debate. Chairman Daniel J. Tobin of the Law Committee, explained that the proposed amendment was merely for clarifying the statutes.

Mathhew Woll, fifth vice president, while approving the principle, thought difficulties might be encountered in cases where labor temples might be owned by the discontinued bodies. He offered a substitute resolution, referring the question to the Executive Committee. Later, after debate, he withdrew his motion.

To Get Back If Reorganized.

George W. Perkins, president of the Cigarmakers' Union, offered an amendment to the Law Committee's recommendation that the Federation take charge of such property "as a trustee," the property to be returned in the event the body should be reorganized.

Andrew Furuseth of the Seamen's delegation opposed the measure, as did other speakers, but the convention, by a show of hands, overwhelmingly voted for the resolution and amendment. There also was debate on other proposed amendments of a minor nature, in which the Law Committee nonconcurred, but the convention voted to uphold the committee, with only scattering dissenting votes.

Reconvenes Monday Morning.

At the close of the half-day session another debate developed as to the time for meeting next week. A motion to adjourn until Monday afternoon was voted down in favor of convening Monday morning.

Previously the convention voted to co-ordinate the activities of the local, central and state bodies in attempting to obtain state legislation on labor matters, and it was recommended that the Executive Council be made a clearing house of all proposed state legislative measures.

The convention also went on record as favoring an aggregessive campaign for unionists to purchase goods bearing the union label.

A proposal to make Lincoln's birthday a nation-wide holiday was voted without debate.

The organization will have a midday mass at the Old Cathedral and in the evening will have Archbishop Glennon as its guest at a banquet at Hotel Statler. Senator Reed and the Rev. William Mullally, S. J., will be the speakers, the latter talking about the Jesuit martyrs of North America.

Tonight the Societa' d'Unione e Fratellanza Italiana will give a dinner dance at the American Annex Hotel in commemoration of the discovery of America by Columbus.

EVANGELIST DEFE... HIS BELIEF IN B...

Confidence Without Understanding Proof of God's Divinity, Says Williams.

Concluding the first week of revival at the frame tabernacle near Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue last night, Rev. Howard S. Williams reasserted his implicit belief in the Bible, declaring the greatest proof of the divinity of God is the fact that we do not understand all the Bible contains.

"The Bible can't be half true and half wrong," he said. "Part of the Bible, I believe there is a heaven and a hell. No other book tells me of them. I believe the whole of the Bible and I don't subtract a single word of it. That is the greatest proof of God's power. Who else could conceive a book which no mortal man can understand?

"If you don't believe that the story of feeding 5000 and having baskets of fragments left from the barley loaves and two small fishes, then you don't believe there was a Savior. God gives each of us five barley loaves and two small fishes to do His will. He has given us feet, hands, mind, eyes, ears, tongue, ears, eyes and voice to use either good or evil. We serve either Him or the devil with them.

"I have asked God to let me have at least 500,000 souls to my credit before He takes me to heaven, and I believe He is going to help me do it. I want to give God the glory of myself or nothing. You can't be a soul winner unless you give God everything.

The first shop meeting of the revival will be held at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday at the McQuay-Norris Ring Co. A musical program has been prepared. A meeting will be held at 9 a. m. Tuesday at Normandy High School on Charles road.

Greeted by Painleve.

Premier Painleve greeted his minister of Finance personally at the station and thanked him for the great work he had done for France.

M. Caillaux supplemented a brief statement he had made at Havre by saying: "I like and admire America. I enjoyed my stay there, and earnestly hope to return when I am out of office."

He was asked, "Why, don't you think you will return when you are still in office?"

"That is a leading question," responded the Minister. "All I can say is that I enjoyed and liked the country and people so much that I hope to return and look it over as a tourist, more leisurely."

To Oppose Ratification.

The members of the mission refused from expressing any idea what attitude they would adopt toward the Senate and Chamber concerning ratification of the proposal accord, which M. Caillaux is bearing, with the exception of M. Loucheur, budget reporter of the Chamber, who announced he would oppose ratification, and Senator Henger, budget reporter of the Senate, who said he would support ratification. All paid tribute to the American Funding Commis-

NEW POLICE PATROL SCHE... PRISONERS FROM PA...

Has Solid Sides and Can Be Loaded From Inside or Outside—Cost Is $3500.

Motors replaced horses as motive power of St. Louis police patrols years ago, but that was about the only change in the appearance of these necessary vehicles that oldtimers at Police Headquarters can remember, prior to the arrival of a new patrol, which will be put to work in the Central District tomorrow.

Although a familiar term, the patrol used to be "the Maria," those of St. Louis style have been maroon in color, but the new one is dark blue. Heretofore the sides have been metal mesh, and the back and has been open. The new one has solid sides, except for a space beneath the roof for ventilation and there is a door in back which can be locked from inside or outside, so that the driving officer can leave obstreperous prisoners alone inside.

The new style will be warmer and more secure and will separate prisoners from the public gaze. The chauffeur will have improved protection. It cost $3500 and replaces an old patrol. The 15 other patrols in the city will be replaced similarly as they wear out.

"That is a leading question," re...ponded the Minister. "All I can ...y is that I enjoyed and liked the ...country and people so much that ...want to return and look it over ...a tourist, more leisurely."

To Oppose Ratification.

The members of the mission re...frained from expressing any idea ...f what attitude they would adopt ...ward the Senate and Chamber ...morning ratification of the pro...visional accord which M. All paid tribute to ...American Funding Commis... sion's attitude and its desire to reach an agreement.

The Cabinet will meet tomorrow morning under the chairmanship of President Doumergue, when M. Caillaux will present a statement of his efforts at Washington and their result.

The minister of finance upon returning to France finds the treasury in a bad situation. The bank note issue had reached the legal limit authorized by Parliament, but his political standing is believed to have been much improved by his attitude at Washington. The bulk of the French nation feels that M. Caillaux will find a way out of the present difficulties, which it was feared might oblige the bank of France to issue additional paper currency.

SUIT TO TIE UP ASSETS ALLEGES CREDITOR FRAUD

Radio Shop, Inc., Seeks to Cancel Transfer Between Paramount-Franklin Firms.

Suit was filed yesterday in Circuit Court by the Radio Shop, Inc., 1423 Locust street, to cancel a transfer of assets of the Paramount Radio Corporation to the Franklin Radio Corporation. It is alleged the transfer was made in fraud of creditors of the Paramount concern.

The petition sets forth that the Radio Shop last March obtained two judgments against the Paramount Corporation totaling $952.94 and that the company is indebted to it for an additional sum of $113.84, which has not yet been reduced to judgment. Although the Paramount Corporation, with offices in the Arcade Building, was a going concern, the suit states, its directors and stockholders—A. J. Gardner, Robert H. Cope and Charles N. Dolfuss Jr.—organized the Franklin Radio Corporation in June or July and took over all the assets of the Paramount, leaving the latter "a mere shell without assets."

The Radio Shop asks that the Franklin company and its organizers be required to disclose to the court the amount of Paramount property received and that Cone, Gardner and Dolfuss be required to make known the amount they have paid or failed to pay on their stock subscriptions. A receiver also is asked to handle any property that may be found to have been illegally transferred.

DIVORCE TALE PREPOSTEROUS, SAYS GLORIA GOULD BISHOP

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVRE, France, Oct. 10.—Preposterous, declared Gloria Gould Bishop, when she disembarked from the liner France here today and heard that it had been whispered in New York that the trip to France was because of marital differences with her husband.

"A divorce between Henry and myself—its preposterous," said Mrs. Bishop. Mrs. Bishop was accompanied by Miss Mildred Phillips of New York, her 7 months old baby and a maid.

"Henry has always sympathized with my ideas for a commercial and artistic career, said Mrs. Bishop, commenting on reports that her husband was displeased over her latest venture in lending her name to the establishment of a New York motion picture theater.

"We will spend two weeks in Paris only," she said, when told it was reported that she might seek a Paris divorce—"and that two weeks will be devoted to shopping.

"After we leave Paris we will go to the Riviera. "I came to Europe for only six weeks' rest and that is all I am here for. We will be home before Christmas because Henry and I have planned baby's first Christmas and it must be celebrated at home."

Dentist Weds Marshall Girl.

MARSHALL, Mo., Oct. 10.—Dr. S. E. Earl Thompson, a dentist here, and Miss Katharine Ann Spotts, daughter of Dr. B. M. Spotts, were married tonight at the home of the bride. A reception was given at the Country Club, following the ceremony.

HEAVY WINDS PREVENT RACE FOR PULITZER TROPHY

Air Classic and Two Other Events Postponed Until Tomorrow by Officials at Mitchel Field.

By C. B. ALLEN,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A howling gale, flecked with snow, came out of the north today and blew the national air races program galley-west. As a result the Pulitzer Trophy race, together with two other events scheduled for the day were postponed until Monday and Friday's unfinished aerial menu, originally postponed until Monday on account of rain, was advanced to Tuesday.

At 9 o'clock, two hours before the first race was slated to start, officials in charge of the meet decided to call it off for the day and broadcast word that the program was postponed. The air was dangerously fickle, the wind velocity ranging from 28 miles an hour at the ground to a high speed of 60 in sudden, treacherous gusts, and while it was felt all the competing planes could get into the air safely, it was feared they might come to grief when they wanted to land.

This, and the fact that the wind direction would have necessitated all ships taking off across the hangars and the crowds, which were beginning to arrive from all points despite the bitter weather, was responsible for the postponement. Sudden failure of a motor above such a crowd as always attends a Pulitzer Trophy race might well have resulted in wholesale tragedy.

Detoured for Snowstorm.

That airplanes were quite capable of flying in a gale that caused even heavy automobiles to veer uncertainly along the wind-swept roads of Long Island was demonstrated by four Martin bombers—one of the heaviest and largest ships in the service as well as the hardest to handle—which bucked the storm all the way from Logan Field, Baltimore.

They flew at 4000 feet where the wind held a constant 60-mile speed, came through three snow squalls between Philadelphia and New York and made a wide detour to avoid a heavy snowstorm near Trenton, but landed at Mitchel Field without mishap. In fact, each made two landings, the first being at Roosevelt or Curtiss Fields (one landed at the latter) because Mitchel Field was cluttered with visiting planes.

After communicating with air race headquarters by telephone and learning it was all right to come into the smaller field, they took off again and "sat down" at the military airdrome. The big ships were piloted by Lieuts. Werner Bunge, David Behncke and John Drum and Warrant Officer Leland D. Bradshaw.

Land Safely in Gale.

The flyers were almost done in by battling the fury of the storm, but they landed without mishap. Each one of them carried five mechanics for planes of the first pursuit group (which have been at Michael Field several days) having brought them from Selfridge Field, Mt. Clemens, Mich., to Baltimore Friday.

Four De Havilands also came in from Aberdeen, all landing safely. It was expected that the gale would "blow itself out" soon after sundown.

Lieuts. Alford J. Williams and Cyrus Bettis, color bearers respectively for the navy and army in the Pulitzer race Monday, stood by while the newly installed high-compression motors of their planes were tested on the ground. They will take them up first thing tomorrow morning for test flights, if the weather is fit.

The storm brought no regret to Capt. H. W. Cook, whose injured eye would have prevented his participation as a Curtiss PW-8 pilot in the Pulitzer race today. Two days' grace will work wonders with a "shiner" and Cook was clapping his hands and doing a dance of joy to the north wind tonight in his room at the Mitchel Field hospital, where he has been kept secluded since his mishap last Wednesday.

STUDENT OF ROOSEVELT HIGH SCHOOL MISSING

Harry Latal, 15, Disappeared Wednesday Morning and His Parents Are Worried.

Harry Latal

Harry Latal, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Latal, of 1909 Oregon avenue has been missing from his home since Wednesday morning and his parents are at loss to account for his disappearance.

He left the house about 8 o'clock that morning to go to Roosevelt High School, where he is a first year student. He did not appear at the high school and none of his schoolmates saw him. As far as his parents know he had only carfare in his pockets. He wore a blue serge knee pants suit, white blouse, black stockings, tan shoes and a gray cap. He is lame in the left leg.

The boy's father says that Harry never had absented himself from home or school before and gave no indication that he thought of running away.

W. J. Barnes, St. Louis, Sent to Leavenworth; Two Others to Newton County Jail.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 10.—Walter J. Barnes of St. Louis today was sentenced to two years in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth for violation of the Mann act by Federal Judge Otis. Raymond Stevens and Harry DeLashmet, also of St. Louis, were sentenced to four months and one month, respectively, in the Newton County jail in the same case.

BIG FIRES HERE FULFILL 'CYCLE OF 3' TRADITION

Third Within Three Days Damages Warehouse on North Main Street.

A third general alarm fire within three days was extinguished yesterday morning after nearly two hours' work by firemen at the warehouse of the M. Wolfheim Hide and Wool Co., 216 North Main street. Water damaged an adjoining warehouse of the same concern at Nos. 218-20.

Employes who were in the warehouse at No. 216 when the fire started at 7:20 o'clock said it originated in a pile of stored merchandise at the rear of the ground floor and was carried upward through the elevator shoft. Assistant Fire Chief Pulshon said this structure was stored mostly with junk, including old automobile tires and parts, rags and scrap rubber. Much of the stock was thrown out by firemen to save it from the blaze.

The buildings were damaged about $10,000 each, the assistant chief estimated. They are owned by the Terminal Railroad. The Wolfheim company deals in hides, wool, feathers and tallow as well as the merchandise stored in the burned building.

Fires in this old section of St. Louis, where there are considerable stocks of greasy and inflammable substance, are not infrequent, and usually give firemen a tussle.

The second of the three general alarm fires had occurred in a warehouse and painting plant of the National Enameling & Stamping Co., occupying the block bounded by Hall, Destrehan, Angelrodt and Second streets, Friday night, causing $250,000 damage. A third of the plant was destroyed. Spontaneous combustion in oily waste may have been the cause. Paint and sheet iron in storage were destroyed. The company's main plant is at Granite City.

The first of the three fires was the stubborn blaze on the top floor of the Laclede Gas Building, resulting in the explosion in the basement Thursday afternoon, which cost the lives of four persons and the injury of 43 others. Cause of the explosion is still under official investigation.

Firemen have a tradition that difficult blazes come in cycles of three, and this is frequently borne out in fact.

Renewed Demand for Elimination of Downtown Parking.

Renewed demand for elimination of daytime parking in the downtown congested district, as a safety measure, is made by the Safety Council in the following statement, occasioned by the difficulty caused by parked cars around the Laclede Gas Building after the explosion there Thursday afternoon:

"An object lesson to the St. Louis public in support of the position of the Safety Council in recommending the elimination of parking in the congested district during daylight hours was furnished in the catastrophe which occurred at the Laclede Gas Building. Efforts of taxicab operators and ambulance drivers to bring these conveyances to the doors of the building to receive the injured were delayed by automobiles parked in the streets. The fire engines were forced to stop in the middle of the street instead of near of the curbing, and many citizens helped policemen move vehicles occupying space needed by those fighting the fire or conveying the injured to the hospitals. The free passage of fire apparatus for many blocks near the scene of the catastrophe was blocked by parking.

"Those who fight fires know that the first few minutes after a fire starts is the most important time to reach its origin and begin to extinguish it. Every obstacle that presents itself and seriously hampers the efficient and prompt connection with water plugs by the Fire Department means that the task of mastering the fire is made greater. Should the catastrophe of Thursday have occurred further east, where the streets are still narrower, a greater loss of life, and a greater damage to property would undoubtedly have resulted through the physical inability of the fire apparatus to get into action promptly.

"Whenever the Safety Council has proposed entire elimination of parking downtown during the day, some business interests have replied that the greatest wealth of the city is in downtown property and removal of parking privileges would drive business out of the district."

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

R U A — DOTTIE DOG?

By JANE CORBY

A Dottie Dog, it's sad to say,
Is always wanting her own way.
And when she doesn't get it quick,
She whines and howls till she is sick!
I wouldn't whimper—nor would you
And whine the way that puppies do!

Polychrome's Pitiful Flight

"DOESN'T anyone know where it is? inquired Betsy.

"Some one must know, of course," was Shaggy's reply. "But we are not the ones. The only way to succeed is for us to keep going until we find a person who can direct us to Ruggedo's cavern."

"We may find it ourselves, without any help," suggested Betsy. "Who knows?"

"No one knows that, except the person who's writing this story," said Shaggy. "But we won't find anything—not even supper—unless we travel on. Here's a path. Let's take it and see where it leads to."

* * * * * *

The Rain King got too much water in his basin and spilled some over the brim. That made it rain in a certain part of the country—a real hard shower, for a time—and sent the Rainbow scampering to the place to show the gorgeous colors of his glorious bow as soon as the mist of rain had passed and the sky was clear.

The coming of the Rainbow is always a joyous event to earth folk, yet few have ever seen it close by. Usually the Rainbow is so far distant that you can observe its splendid hues but dimly, and that is why we seldom catch sight of the dancing Daughters of the Rainbow.

In the barren country where the rain had just fallen there appeared to be no human beings at all; but the Rainbow appeared, just the same, and dancing gayly upon its arch were the Rainbow's Daughters, led by the fairylike Polychrome, who is so dainty and beautiful that no girl has ever quite equaled her in loveliness.

Polychrome was in a merry mood and danced down the arch of the bow to the ground, daring her sisters to follow her. Laughing and gleeful, they also touched the ground with their twinkling feet; but all the Daughters of the Rainbow knew that this was a dangerous pastime, so they quickly climbed upon their bow again.

All but Polychrome. Though the sweetest and merriest of them all, she was likewise the most reckless. Moreover, it was an unusual sensation to pat the cold, damp earth with her rosy toes. Before she realized it the bow had lifted and disappeared in the billowy blue sky, and here was Polychrome standing helpless upon a rock, her gauzy draperies floating about her like brilliant cobwebs and not a soul—fairy or mortal—to help her regain her lost bow!

"Dear me!" she exclaimed, a frown passing across her pretty face, "I'm caught again. This is the second time my carelessness has left me on earth while my sisters returned to our Sky Palace. The first time I enjoyed some pleasant adventures, but this is a lonely, forsaken country and I shall be very unhappy until my Rainbow comes again and I can climb aboard. Let me think what is best to be done."

She crouched low upon the flat rock, drew her draperies about her and bowed her head.

It was in this position that Betsy Bobbin spied Polychrome as she came along the stony path, followed by Hank, the Princess and Shaggy. At once the girl ran up to the radiant Daughter of the Rainbow and exclaimed:

"Oh, what a lovely, lovely creature!"

Polychrome raised her golden head. There were tears in her blue eyes.

"I'm the most miserable girl in the whole world!" she sobbed.

The others gathered around her.

"Tell us your troubles, pretty one," urged the Princess.

"I—I've lost my bow!" wailed Polychrome.

"Take me, my dear," said Shaggy Man in a sympathetic tone, thinking she meant "bean" instead of "bow."

"I don't want you!" cried Polychrome, stamping her foot imperiously, "I want my Rainbow."

"Oh; that's different," said Shaggy. "But try to forget it. When I was young I used to cry for the Rainbow myself, but I couldn't have it. Looks as if you couldn't have it, either; so please don't cry."

Polychrome looked at him reproachfully.

"I don't like you," she said.

"No?" replied Shaggy, drawing the Love Magnet from his pocket; "not a little bit?—just a wee speck of a like?"

"Yes, yes!" said Polychrome, clasping her hands in ecstasy as she gazed at the enchanted talisman; "I love you, Shaggy Man!"

"Of course you do," said he calmly; "but I don't take any credit for it. It's the Love Magnet's powerful charm. But you seem quite alone and friendless, little Rainbow. Don't you want to join our party until you find your father and sisters again?"

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"We don't just know that," said Betsy, taking her hand; "but we're trying to find Shaggy's long-lost brother, who has been captured by the terrible Metal Monarch. Won't you come with us, and help us?"

Polychrome looked from one to another of the queer party of travelers and a bewitching smile suddenly lighted her face.

"A donkey, a mortal maid, a Rose Princess and a Shaggy Man!" she exclaimed. "Surely you need help, if you intend to face Ruggedo."

"Do you know him, then?" inquired Betsy.

"No, indeed. Ruggedo's caverns are beneath the earth's surface, where no Rainbow can ever penetrate. But I've heard of the Metal Monarch. He is also called the Nome King, you know, and he has made trouble for a good many people—mortals and fairies—in his time," said Polychrome.

"Do you fear him, then?" asked the Princess, anxiously.

"No one can harm a daughter of the Rainbow," said Polychrome proudly. "I'm a sky fairy."

"Then," said Betsy, quickly, "you will be able to tell us the way to Ruggedo's cavern."

"No," returned Polychrome, shaking her head, "that is one thing I cannot do. But I will gladly go with you and help you search for the place."

This promise delighted all the wanderers and after the Shaggy Man had found the path again they began moving along it in a more happy mood. The Rainbow's Daughter danced lightly over the rock trail, no longer sad, but with her beautiful features wreathed in smiles. Shaggy came next, walking steadily and now and then supporting the Rose Princess, who followed him. Betsy and Hank brought up the rear, and if she tired with walking the girl got upon Hank's back and let the stout little donkey carry her for awhile.

At nightfall they came to some trees that grew beside a tiny brook and here they made camp and rested until morning. Then away they tramped.

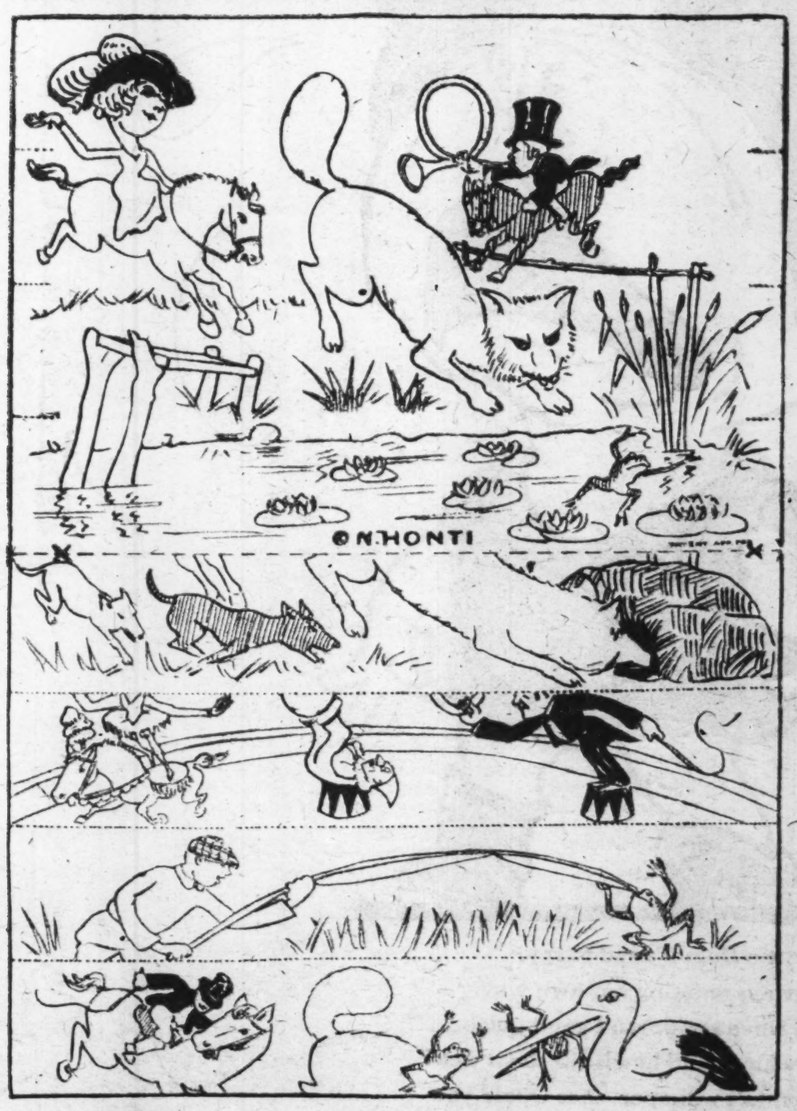
Folding Fun



DIRECTIONS

Cut along border and fold in half along dotted lines (.....). Starting with picture No. 1, by making one fold from the bottom up, where the dotted guides show, you can make a new picture. Make another fold from the bottom up and a third picture appears. Then return to No. 1 and fold from the top down, in the same manner, which will give you two more pictures. Last, returning to picture No. 1, make one fold from the bottom and one fold from the top and you will get a surprise.

finding berries and fruits here and there which satisfied the hunger of Betsy, Shaggy and Hank, so that they were well content with their lot.

It surprised Betsy to see the Rose Princess partake of their food, for she considered her a fairy; but when she mentioned this to Polychrome, the Rainbow's Daughter explained that when Ozga was driven out of her Rose Kingdom she ceased to be a fairy and would never again be more than a mere mortal. Polychrome, however, was a fairy wherever she happened to be, and if she sipped a few dewdrops by moonlight for refreshment no one ever saw her do it.

As they continued their wandering journey, direction meant very little to them, for they were hopelessly lost in this strange country. Shaggy said it would be best to go toward the mountains, as the natural entrance to Ruggedo's underg cavern was likely to be hidden in some rocky, deserted place; but mountains seemed all around them except in the one direction that they had come from, which led to the Rose Kingdom and the sea. Therefore it mattered little which way they traveled.

By and by they espied a faint trail that looked like a path and after following this for some time they reached a crossroads. Here were many paths leading in various directions, and there was a signpost so old that there were now no words

"I wonder if he sees anything down there?" she said.

Exploding Nuts That Spoiled a Raid

By FRANK A. SECORD

ALONG a creek that wound through the Baker place great clumps of hazel brush thrived and yielded nuts that were coveted by every boy and girl for miles around. Back of the hazel brush, in the woods, stood a number of walnut trees and also some hickory trees. The latter bore nuts almost as large as English walnuts, it was known; and thereby hangs this tale.

Farmer Baker was not really a grouch and he was not overly stingy with his crop of nuts; but he did object to people helping themselves. Great signs were everywhere in sight, warning trespassers away from his land. These signs brought from the youth of the country thergabouts a great deal of sarcasm.

When the hazy still days arrived and the nuts were ready for the harvest, the signs of Farmer Baker glared with more intensity, according to the idea of passers-by; and came a time when a small crowd of youngsters, out for a picnic, decided to plan and carry out a raid.

"It won't hurt the old man any, if we just help ourselves to a few," observed Rennie Payne. "What's a couple of sacks of nuts to him, anyway? He's got oodles of them."

"Yes, he's got oodles and we have noodles!" laughed another. "If we have them, why not make good use of our 'beans'?"

"And," grunted Harvey Long, "let's not bungle the job, like the gang did last year when they tried to get some of Miller's grapes!"

Of a sudden there was a loud report as of a gun and this was followed by another and yet another

Accordingly an hour later the telephone was busy from Edith Grant's home, whither some of those in on the prospective raid idea, had gone. It happened that one of the boys desired on the job, was visiting at his uncle's out in the country. He was called up, advised, contributed his bit of knowledge to the scheme and the raid was planned.

The next day was Saturday. Good fortune seemed to be with the plotters, for Farmer Baker was observed in town, and inside of ten minutes after this important information was given out, the youngsters, confident they had things their own way, started for the country.

The hazel nut brush was the first visited. There, taking their time about it, the visitors pulled hazel nut burrs and chugged them into sacks; but before the task was well under way it chanced that Rennie Payne joyfully discovered a pile of nuts all hulled and lying on the ground ready to be sacked. "Here! Here!" cried the lad, "No use going to all this bother, when we can get what we want already gathered!" and feverishly he scooped the brown treasures into a sack he carried.

It was the work of but a few minutes and the the six poachers turned attention to the hickory nuts farther on in the woods.

Strangely enough, although none of the party considered the matter queer, a pile of hickory nuts, too, lay nicely heaped under a tree, and these trophies were as quickly appropriated as were the hazel nuts, after which the intruders hastily departed enroute home and jubilant over the success of the job.

It happened that downstream and about half a mile distant, Harvey Long, who was driving the car, was flagged by an acquaintance of all. "Stand and deliver!" laughingly shouted the boy who did the flagging. "Where have you folks been? Baker's, I bet!"

Rennie tapped his lips, smiled and nodded.

"All right!" the other called. "Step out, please, and be our guests long enough to let us in on the nut feast. We've a tent just back of yonder bunch of trees."

"Who's with you?" Edith Grant inquired a little uneasily.

"Oh, just some of the kids," was the answer. "Nobody who would talk—honest!"

The very moment the crowd drew up at camp Rennie Payne could have sworn he got a glimpse of somebody making a quick get-away from the spot. He mentioned this, but none would admit it. "Probably saw a cow or something," remarked Chester Grimes, one of the campers, tugging at a sack of nuts and dragging it from the automobile.

Several stones were brought from the creek's shore, smaller ones were provided and in a few minutes half a dozen hands were industriously cracking nuts.

Edith Grant and her girl chum, Evelyn Long, peered into the tent of the campers and inquired, "Got any sugar? If you have, we'll make some fudge, when you boys have finished cracking nuts.

"No sugar—that is, not enough," young Grimes answered. "We have plenty of salt, though, and if we can't have fudge we can eat the nuts salted, That'll do."

Of a sudden there was a loud report as of a gun and this was followed by another and yet another, while three excited and badly frightened boys hastily rose and looked askance upon the stones they had been using in nut cracking.

"'Smatter?" inquired one of the camper crowd.

"The nuts blew up, that's what's the matter!" gasped Rennie Payne.

Hazel nuts were the only ones tackled so far; and when the lads tried again, two out of five nuts exploded with loud noises; scattering some hard substance like gravel into the faces of the crackers.

"That's the first time I ever ran across such a rum thing!" muttered Harvey Long, picking up a hazel nut and examining it. The object looked all right, but when he struck it with a stone it blew to atoms.

"Hey!" barked the boy, rubbing his eyes, "If I don't smell powder I'll eat my cap!"

"Powder!" sneered Chester Grimes. "Suppose you'll be accusing us of loading the nuts, next!"

"Well, you hammer one and see what you get!" exclaimed a member of the poacher crowd, backing up as Chester grabbed a nut and cracked it upon a rock. The nut yielded a fat kernel which was gracefully handed to one of the girls.

"You hit 'em too hard, I guess," young Grimes muttered, seizing another nut and repeating his act.

Again there was a reaching for hazel nuts and everybody who had a stone to do the job upon, began cracking. Several terrific reports sounded and half a dozen boys rose, backed up, rubbed their faces, pulled their caps down over their eyes and grunted half-suppressed exclamations of surprise.

There was no mistaking the fact that the hazel nuts actually exploded.

"Let's try the hickory nuts. They'll not do it," suggested Rennie, opening a sack of the latter.

Laughingly six boys placed as many hickory nuts upon rocks. Together they raised their hands and simultaneously brought down the hammer-stones. Out of the six, four exploded harder, if anything, than did the other.

"That's the bunk!" cried a member of the crowd. There's something wrong about this thing."

"Nothing wrong, that I can see" observed Grimes, and he picked up a hickory nut, smashed it with a single blow and extracted the meat. "You know," he added, "there's a knack in cracking nuts that are not thoroughly seasoned. These haven't been off the bushes and trees long enough and a fellow has to hit them just right. That's all there is about it."

"All right," Rennie Payne exclaimed, as a sickly smile flitted over his face. "I, for one, am willing to give you fellows all the loot. I am not in favor of lugging such spooky things to town. Think too much of my noodle, I do. I am going to need my eyes a good many times before I die, I believe." Motioning to the others in the crowd, Rennie edged towards the road and Harvey's car.

"Well, there used to be a graveyard yonder where the hazel brush grows, I believe I've heard," mused Chester Grimes, "but what's that got to do with unseasoned nuts?"

"Huh?" gasped Evelyn Long, paling.

Grimes dragged the sack of hazel nuts into the tent and came out laughing. Said he, "Those folks are sure a lot of fine sports. I bet if I'd have gone to all the bother of sneaking nuts from Baker's farm I'd keep 'em—I would!"

"Well, you've got 'em!" rasped Harvey. "Be sure you don't blow off your heads with them, before you're through."

A twinkle was noted in Chester's eyes as Harvey spoke, and this caused Rennie Payne to blurt, "Say, there's a gag in this affair! Let me at those hazel nuts and I'll bet my head against a flea that I'll crack the whole kaboodle of them and not be scared any more! Gi' me!"

With those words, Rennie entered the tent, reached for the sack of hazel nuts, intending to drag them forth and investigate further; but just as his hand touched the sack's top, there occurred a series of explosions that sent the boy helter-skelter from the place. The noises sounded as if several hundred of the nuts were popping at close intervals—and it was enough.

"Come on, you!" howled Rennie; but the girls were already clambering into Harvey's car and a moment later it had the gas, while Chester Grimes stood his ground laughing immoderately.

The poachers out of sight, from a clump of bushes stepped forth a lad, rolling up a small coil of wire as he walked. A broad smile overspread his face as he pulled out a small box near where the sack of hazel nuts lay, an electric hot-point, and kicked to one side a small corn popper. "Now," remarked this boy, addressing his companions, "let's sort them out. All that are loaded, you know, have little white spots painted in their sides."

It happened that when the telephone was used to call up the boy in the country on the day before, the wire was crossed and two lines received the "ring." The conversation was also listened to by ears that it was not meant for, and immediately the second lad who heard the scheme got busy with some chums of his own. The boys arranged the piles of gathered nuts, feeling certain they would be pounced upon by the raiders, and they were. Torpedoes had been put in a goodly number of the nuts in each pile, and it was the biggest ones, really loaded, that brought disaster to the expedition. The nuts were sawed in two, the meat extracted, the explosives inserted and then the halves were carefully cemented together. With an electric hot-point attached to the starter battery of their own car the second schemers set off at will a small batch of popcorn, and it was the corn that gave the finishing touch to the scare given Rennie and his crowd.

Where's "The Happy Ending" For JULIA BRUNS?

This St. Louis girl has had a brilliant career on New York's Broadway. Now she faces a term in prison. But is there still another act?

By J. F. DRISCOLL.

THERE'S something wrong with the little drama now starring Miss Julia Bruns, herself, in person. The first act was good as first acts go; it served to introduce us to Julia, the heroine, who grows up in drab surroundings in St. Louis, works by day and studies by night and who, at the age of 16, sets out for Broadway, New York, with $10 in her purse and a burning desire for fame in her heart.

The second act was superb. The heroine is a nobody, in the chorus of a musical show until the eyes of a certain man in the audience light on her and refuse to go away. He is James Montgomery Flagg, the noted illustrator, and he declares Julia Bruns is the "perfect American beauty." Overnight she becomes famous. Many men propose marriage, but she says no to all, even an English Lord, for she is ambitious and hopes for greater heights.

But what a disappointment, an anticlimax, the third act is. It may be true, it may be life, but it's an unhappy ending. Julia Bruns arrested for theft! Julia Bruns brought low by narcotics. Julia Bruns not on the Great White Way, but at the East Fifty-first Street Police Station, New York City! Is there to be no fourth act? Are there no happy endings in real life?

MISS BRUNS is 29 years old. She was born in St. Louis and when a child lived at 1023 North Eighteenth street. She attended the Franklin public school, and was within eight weeks of graduating with the class of 1911 when her mother took her out of school. Her father, a professional musician, was dead. Former classmates say Julia's mother considered it a waste of money to provide the fancy dresses and other things for which a schoolgirl pouts.

Work followed school for Julia. For a while she was cashier in the Portland Hotel Cafe, opposite Union Station. Then she obtained a similar position at the Rozier Hotel (now the Park), at Thirteenth and Olive streets. Few traveling men could gaze upon Julia's profile without asking, "Who's the peach?" But the travelers and the illustrators were not the first to discover this American beauty. That honor goes to Miss Zoe Akins, the playwright, whose "Declasse," ironically enough, is a drama of a woman on the downgrade. In 1909 Miss Akins was producing "Alice in Wonderland" as a Christmas entertainment for the patrons of Self-Culture Hall, a social settlement house at Nineteenth and Carr streets. Scores of children from the neighborhood aspired to parts and from them Miss Akins chose Julia Bruns, then 13, to be Alice.

The production was a success, to judge by the applause of the first-nighters. Naturally, the producer and leading lady came in for compliments. Result: Miss Akins and Miss Bruns became stage struck.

MISS BRUNS had received musical training from her father, and she attended music and dancing classes at Self-Culture Hall. One who remembered the girl as she was then, Mrs. E. M. Grossman, director of Self-Culture Hall, told a reporter that Julia Bruns was then "a pretty child, with great brown eyes, brown hair, white and pink skin and a soft expression. She played with the other children about the hall and was most amiable, intelligent and affectionate. Her beauty was not extraordinarily striking, but her sweetness and affection were. She was a sensible little thing, too. The first thing she did when she went to New York was to subscribe to a magazine called 'Correct English.' She told me she was anxious to learn how to speak correctly. It is remarkable how beauty thrives in the despised congested districts. When Julia Bruns was playing about Eighteenth and Carr streets she looked like any other arab of the streets."

A girl as ambitious as Julia Bruns could not content herself with a cashier's niche. The Broadway bug had bitten her and in 1914 she packed her apparel into one suitcase and took a street car to Union Station. Her mother did not like the idea of her daughter leaving home at such a tender age. But, on the other hand, the traveling men at the hotel had said a pippin like her was sure to succeed.

She did not sleep well during the 36-hour ride to New York, one reason being that she rode in a chair car and another being her fear someone might pilfer her $10 if she slumbered.

THE morning after her arrival in New York she got up at 6 o'clock to read the help wanted advertisements in the newspapers. No actresses were wanted, the market then as now being glutted. There was, however, a demand for models and it occurred to her that she could pose and in that way meet people of the theatrical profession. She posed for nearly a year before her first chance came. Her initial engagement was in the chorus of "Everywoman," and her second in the "American Maid." It took seven weeks' rehearsing without pay to work five weeks with pay in this short-lived musical show.

James Montgomery Flagg attended one of the closing performances of "American Maid." He forgot all about the comedians and the score by John Philip Sousa when he saw a certain member of the chorus come on the stage. She was tall and willowy, with dark hair and beautiful features. She wore a white gown and carried a bouquet of red roses.

When the performance was over Flagg sought the manager of the house for an introduction to the chorine. Thus Mr. Flagg and Miss Bruns met, and to her he broke gently the news that, in his humble opinion, she was the perfect type of American beauty. Julia gasped with delight, but she did not contradict Flagg, who sketched hundreds of pretty girls and was qualified as a beauty expert. Nor did she disagree with him when he suggested she would be ideal for a magazine cover or two. Somebody—it may have been the illustrator or the theater manager or the press agent of the show—told the newspapers all about Flagg's "discovery." Miss Bruns awoke to find herself famous. Her pictures in the papers at last!

There were some, of course, who scoffed at Flagg's judgment. There were hundreds of beauties on Broadway; how tell one apart from the others? What is a perfect American beauty? they queried. Whereupon Mr. Flagg submitted these measurements of Miss Bruns as justification for his verdict:

Height, 5 feet 4 inches.
Neck, 12 1-2 inches.
Chest, 33 inches.
Bust, 36 inches.
Waist, 24 inches.
Hips, 35 inches.
Thigh, 22 inches.
Calf, 14 inches.
Ankle, 8 1-2 inches.
Length of arm, 25 1-2 inches.
Upper arm, 11 1-2 inches.
Forearm, 10 inches.

That settled most of the scoffers. Some few went to see the perfect type in person, but not enough to keep the show from box-office starvation.

—Murillo Portrait.

REMEMBER THIS? James Montgomery Flagg, who gave Julia Bruns to fame, at work on a war poster.

"AS FAR as my looks go, I suppose it is largely a matter of inheriting them from my mother," Miss Bruns explained in one of many interviews. This one was given to a Post-Dispatch correspondent who called at the tiny apartment, on Amsterdam avenue and Seventy-fifth street, in which she and her mother were keeping house. As soon as fame came she had telegraphed for her mother to join her.

"As far as my form goes, the form I have is the one I grew up in," she continued. "I never did anything with the especial objective of making myself shapely, or to conform to any established standard of perfection. I have always been a very healthy girl. If anything has made me as pretty of form as they say I am it was probably the fact that I am fond of gymnastics. In St. Louis I regularly attended the West End Turnverein on Beaumont and Morgan streets. I eat what I please, when I please."

Beauty is not an unmixed blessing, Miss Bruns learned. Even in those days stage-goers were ready to murmur the equivalent of "beautiful but dumb."

"I just hate being known as beautiful," she sighed one day, in the presence of a reporter. "I would rather be a great actress than the best-looking one. Nowadays, with face doctors and pretty clothes and hats, most any girl can seem pretty, but there are mighty few who can qualify as great actresses, and that is my ambition."

FLAGG'S magazine portraits of his favorite model made her face familiar throughout the world. Those who read Rupert Hughes' novel, "What Will People Say?" as it appeared serially in The Red Book Magazine will remember the heroine, Persis Cabot, who could not live on less than $200,000 a year and consequently spurned a $1500-a-year suitor. Julia was Persis.

Miss Bruns had a better reason for rejecting suitors, as she disclosed in an interview given at Hotel Jefferson here in 1916, following her return from Europe. "I am not after wealth by marriage," she said then. "I am able to make my own way, so why should I contemplate matrimony for any reason other than pure love. The man I marry must be an American and must consent to my continuing on the stage."

In London Miss Bruns had played in "Potash and Perlmutter" for five months, and in that time she received five proposals. She reported that a Lord proposed as follows:

"Julia, I love you. Will you marry me?"

"No."

"Why?"

"I don't love you."

"That is distressingly sad and I am sorry. However, we will continue to be good friends?"

"Yes."

"That pleases me. I must hurry to an engagement for tea. Good-by."

AT THE Olympic Theater here in 1915 Miss Bruns was seen in "Potash and Perlmutter." She was under a three-year contract to A. H. Woods. She also appeared in the movies in "The Blue Pearl," "The Squab Farm" and other productions. During the World War the stage was eclipsed, and when it was over Miss Bruns' star did not come out with its former brilliance. Since she achieved fame hundreds of other beauties had captured Broadway's blase eye. Miss Bruns was merely an actress, the leading woman was someone else.

A few days ago she rose from obscurity to give the shortest of her recorded interviews. Speaking from a cell in the East Fifty-first Street Police Station she said: "I am innocent of the charge."

The charge was grand larceny. She had been arrested at night in her home at 29 Sutton place, in a fashionable section, and transported in a taxicab to the station. Her two pet dogs accompanied her into the cell. The arrest was based on a complaint by a Chicago woman, a recent tenant in the Sutton place house, that jewelry valued at $4000 had been taken from her trunk. Police quoted Miss Bruns as confessing she took the jewelry to a pawnshop in order to obtain money for drugs, but Miss Bruns denied this.

There may yet be a fourth act—and a happy ending—to this little drama of life. Julia Bruns has overcome adversity more than once heretofore, and she is only 29 now. But life's looking-glass is dark for the girl who once was Alice in Wonderland.

Old Suggs—FRONTIERSMAN

$10,000,000

J. D. Sugg of Oklahoma and Texas was a real cow-puncher. He died a few weeks ago. This is a brief story of his life.

J. D. SUGG, cattleman.

"The old-time Colts of the range they used; but they shot quick and they shot true."

TO MISS NELLIE HARTER, a resident of Sanger, Texas, I bequeath all my stock in the First National Bank of Gainesville, Texas, amounting to about $25,000." Last month the attorney read that paragraph from the will of the late J. D. Sugg, old-time rancher and cowman of Texas and Oklahoma. The younger of the relatives and friends present, among whom he had divided his estate of $10,000,000, looked at each other inquiringly. They hadn't heard of Miss Nellie Harter. Who could she be?

The attorney, as he read the will, coughed dryly. "It was the devotion of Miss Harter to her invalid mother that won her that bequest," he explained with a professional smile. "Mr. Sugg said that any girl who had cared for her mother as Miss Harter had should be remembered. So he has left that stock—127 shares."

But some there were in that little gathering last September who knew that a romance lay behind that gift. That was not unusual in the life of J. D. Sugg. He was a picturesque and romantic figure, a characteristic cattle baron of the Western plains. Penniless he had come to the Oklahoma country to trade his bandana handkerchief for his first meal. He could ride long. He could shoot straight. He had lived more stories than Zane Grey has ever invented. But the grizzled men who had ridden and shot at the side of "Ikert" Sugg, as they called him, could remember but once that the love of a woman had entered his life.

FORTY years ago it was, and more. In the early '80s Ikert Sugg and his brother Calvin were almost broke. But in the face of disaster they had not lost faith in themselves. They had a ranch near Cow and Beaver creeks in Jefferson County, Indian Territory, and were struggling hard to get ahead. Across the Red River at the time was a little Texas village now forgotten. Its name was Cambridge. It had half a dozen houses and John Harter's general store, which was a trading point for all the range around.

Tall, dark, boldly handsome, brown as an Indian, Ikert Sugg was then a man of 30, in the prime of life. And old John Harter, at the Cambridge store, had a pretty daughter, Nellie, whom Sugg chanced to meet in her father's store.

Sugg may have been nearly broke, but it seemed to neighboring ranchers that he had a lot of chuck to buy at Harter's store. Sometimes they'd see him, too, sitting on the porch of the Harter homestead talking to the merchant's daughter, who was tied pretty close to home by the illness of her invalid mother. Tongues wagged. Sugg wasn't the sort of man you'd "kid" about his personal affairs. But the men of the range would tell each other what a lucky fellow Ikert was. And it may have been that the women—not too many in that new country then—agreed that Nellie Harter was a lucky one as well. On the Texas border they were accepted sweethearts. "That gives Ikert Sugg something to work for," men would say. "No wonder he's workin' like he is and gettin' on his feet."

Suddenly the visits stopped. Ikert Sugg had taken his trade to another town. No more did he pass the time of day with other ranchers in John Harter's store. The front porch at the Harter homestead had a vacant chair. The cow country wondered—and then forgot. Not until the reading of the will did old-timers in the cow country have an inkling of what had blasted that romance. Ikert Sugg remained till his dying day a bachelor. And that devoted girl whom he once loved is Miss Nellie Harter still.

IF there was but one love story in the life of Ikert Sugg there was adventure galore. He was born in Mississippi in 1854 and was the youngest, but not the unluckiest, of 13 children. The Civil War, through which his father had served in the Confederate Army, left the family penniless. They moved to Arkansas and his mother died. At 14 J. D. Sugg left home and set out for Missouri to seek his fortune.

He didn't find it. But he did get a job stemming tobacco at Camden, Missouri, and there he stayed for a year. Then, at 15, he turned his steps toward Texas, walking all the way across Indian Territory.

At the Texas border the Red River barred his way. There was a ferryboat, but J. D. Sugg had nothing to pay the ferryman with. "Can't I work my way across?" he asked. It was evening and the boy was hot and tired and dusty. His feet burned in the sand like leaden lumps in acid.

"Sure," said the ferryman. "Get aboard. We'll anchor in midstream tonight to get away from these gol-durned mosquitoes. I'll land you tomorrow in Texas."

That's how Ikert Sugg entered his promised land. In the morning he was just as hungry as a 15-year-old boy can be. For several days he had eaten no real food—had lived on blackberries. But he tightened his belt and pushed on, the smell of coffee and bacon following him from the ferryboat with tantalizing persistence. Two miles from the river bank he came upon a negro cabin. Again the smell of bacon and coffee assailed him. The boy could stand it no longer. He approached the ancient negro "mammy" who was there alone.

She looked him over. "Yo' pore chil'," she said, when he had made his plea. But the red bandana about his neck had caught her fancy. "I'd jest admire for to have that," she said. And he struck a bargain. The handkerchief paid for his food.

HE was only a boy, but he had the endurance and the purpose of a man. He got himself a job with a cattle outfit. He bought himself a horse. And when once he had his broncho, he got him a job as a horsewrangler with an outfit driving cattle northward over the Chisholm Trail. Even as a youth he was marked among his fellows. None could ride better, none could shoot straighter, none could quicker rope a cow. They were long, weary trips from Southern Texas up into Wyoming. These took eight months. After several of them Ikert Sugg was made the foreman of the outfit. It was a job that paid, but saving was slow work.

So he had a hunch. Up into the plains of Kansas, Colorado and west and south into New Mexico, where men were building railroads, Ikert Sugg began to range as a buffalo hunter. He would take a contract to supply a railroad camp with meat. His swift cow pony was almost as smart as its master in this game. His rifle spoke quick, when opportunity offered, and his shot was sure. With the money that he made he bought a brand, a handful of cows from a disgruntled rancher who was quitting the range and started for himself in the Mud Creek country of old Indian Territory.

Ikert Sugg was a hand with cattle and a shrewd judge of stock. He prospered. His brother Calvin joined him. "Them Suggs boys," said the men of the range, "is powerful hands with cattle." Down in the cow country men always added that extra "s" to their name when they spoke of J. D. or Calvin Sugg.

Captain W. H. Daugherty agreed with the verdict of the cow country. Captain Daugherty was president of the First National Bank of Gainesville. More than that, he was a good judge of stock, a good judge of men and a friend worth having. Ikert and Calvin Sugg found that out in the panic of '93. When the bottom dropped out of the livestock market they had 40,000 cattle and 5000 horses on the range. Also they had notes and mortgages in every bank in Texas. The crash came. The Sugg boys were broke.

CAPTAIN Daugherty hadn't forgotten that these two were real cow men. Quietly he visited the bankers of the State. He bought up Sugg notes and mortgages at 40 cents on the dollar. Every cent they owed was owed to him before they knew it. Then he called them into his private office in the Gainesville Bank. It was winter. They were short on feed.

"Well, boys," said the Captain, "what's the situation?"

They didn't tell him they were living on short rations themselves—except for beef. Beef they had in plenty. But groceries, more feed, could not be bought with cattle. Cash there was none. J. D. Sugg played his hand as it lay.

"Here's what I owe," he said, not knowing that the Captain's knowledge was just as complete as was his own. "And out there on the range is the stock. Looks to me like the banks have bought 'em. Looks to me like they've bought me, too. But, Lord, I'd like to get out of this blamed country so at least I could earn a living."

Then Captain Daugherty spread his hand out on the table. There were the notes and mortgages—every one.

"Looks to me," said J. D. Sugg, smiling grimly, "that you're the man that's bought me and my stock."

"How much," asked the Captain, "will it take to see you through?"

Sugg named the sum.

"Get the supplies you need," said Daugherty, "and get back to them cows."

THE judgment of Ikert Sugg was right. The boys hadn't drawn quite up to the limit of their special account before the market had turned. As fast as the money came in they turned it back to their banker. Within three years of the day he had been called into that private office, Ikert Sugg entered it again. This time he carried with him two checks. One paid up in full every cent due on the loan, the notes and the mortgages. The other was for $25,000.

"I just wanted to show you, Captain," he said as he handed the banker the latter, "that Cal and me appreciate what you did."

Captain Daugherty looked at the check. "Take it," he said, "and buy winter feed."

That was the nest egg. Thirty-two years later it had grown into $10,000,000.

"OLD SUGGS," or "Ikert" Sugg—men called him variously these names as they chanced to choose. But among menfolk there were no differences as to the kind of man he was. "Old Sugg," they'd say, "never yet forgot a friend or a single kindness."

That rule continued through the later years of his life. One of his first friends was Montford J. Johnson, who in early days had a cattle ranch on the South Canadian River and who had urged Ikert Sugg to go into business for himself and later had helped him and his brother in their early struggles. The elder Johnson had a son, Ben. When the boy became of age Ikert Sugg showed his gratitude for the elder man by making the son a partner in many of his business enterprises. Ben Johnson became vice president and managing officer of the First National Bank at Chickasha, Oklahoma. Then came the World War.

The bank, of course, was loaded heavily with livestock paper when the market failed at the end of the war. Ben Johnson kept his counsel, but the word was whispered about the State's financial circles and eventually it came to the ears of old Ikert Sugg, way down in San Angelo, Texas.

"What! Ben Johnson fail!" he said. And with purpose in his eye he took the train. When he reached Chickasha a day later it was with $800,000 in cold cash. He put the money in the vaults of the First National between darkness and dawn. Ugly rumors had been circulated on the street. A run on the bank impended.

Next morning before the bank opened J. D. Sugg had stopped those rumors. "There's $800,000 in those vaults that I know of," he said, "for I put it there myself. I'll back Ben Johnson to the limit. Now, howl, you coyotes, howl!"

IT was back in the days of the eighties, while J. D. Sugg was living in the Red River country, that he engaged in a battle with cattle rustlers of which old cowmen still tell. "Old Sugg," they'll say, "shot three cattle rustlers one morning before breakfast, down on the Texas border."

Those were days of struggle, you remember. The Sugg brand wasn't running then over a score of counties, and in two states. Sugg knew just what stock he had. And one morning he discovered a small bunch of them was missing. There were bad actors in the Territory in those days; men who held life cheap and property still cheaper. It wasn't too far to the Mexican border to make cattle stealing a profitable trade.

Three such men, Marion and Will Stedman and Will Parnell, lived on Mud Creek, down below the Sugg Brothers ranch, through which it flowed. When Ikert discovered the cattle were gone, and he found that out one morning before breakfast, he saddled his horse, and with Jim Runnells, one of his punchers, rode out to find them. They didn't stop to eat before they took to the trail, but set out at a lope from the ranch house. "We'll get some grub," Sugg told Runnells, "at Sudgen, where we've got to stop to get more ammunition."

What the search would reveal they didn't know. But the tracks of the cattle, as they could see, led off to the southwest, and with them were the hoofprints of three horses. It might be a day, it might be quite a week before the riders stumbled on those cattle hidden in some secret hill fold. But they were not to wait a week for action.

"LOOKS to me," Sugg observed, before they swung from off the cattle trail to cut in to Sudgen, "like one of them prints was made by that flea-bitten roan Will Parnell rides." He didn't have much use for Parnell. He didn't think any better of the Stedman brothers. "A plumb bad outfit," he'd have said had anyone asked his opinion of those neighbors.

They were plumb bad, and shiftless, loafing ne'er-do-wells, who couldn't make, the three of them, one good cow hand. They had managed to get together a few cows, building up their little herd with slick-ears. "They're onery brutes," was the verdict of the range upon the trio. Their names came first to the tongues of men when a few cattle, or anything else, mysteriously disappeared. Such petty thieving was exactly the career to most disgust those Texas border cattlemen. It was soon to end.

You can picture Ikert Sugg and his friend Jim Runnells swinging at an easy lope into the little street which was the town of Sudgen, on that early spring morning. You can see them swing up before the general store, throwing the reins over the heads of their ponies as they dismounted. They were scarcely on the sidewalk before from out the door of the nearby saloon three men came into the street—Marion and Will Stedman, and Will Parnell.

There was something in the eyes of J. D. Sugg as the rustlers approached that seemed to warn them of impending trouble. One of the Stedmans made a motion for his gun. Right there on the sidewalk they shot it out, while nearby citizens dodged to the nearest doors for cover. Old-time Colts of the range they used but they shot quick and true, and you'd never think, had you been there, that an automatic could be quicker.

Marion Stedman fell at the first exchange of bullets. Then a screen of smoke from the black powder hung so thick in the streets that those who anxiously peered from windows opposite could see no more. For fully five minutes the fusillade continued. Quiet then and Jim Runnells walked into the store, limping from a bullet scratch on his left leg. J. D. Sugg followed. A bullet had grazed his right arm.

Out in the street when the acrid fog of smoke lifted they found the body of Marion Stedman. Bill Stedman and Parnell were lying wounded. There was nothing doctors could do. By night both men were dead.

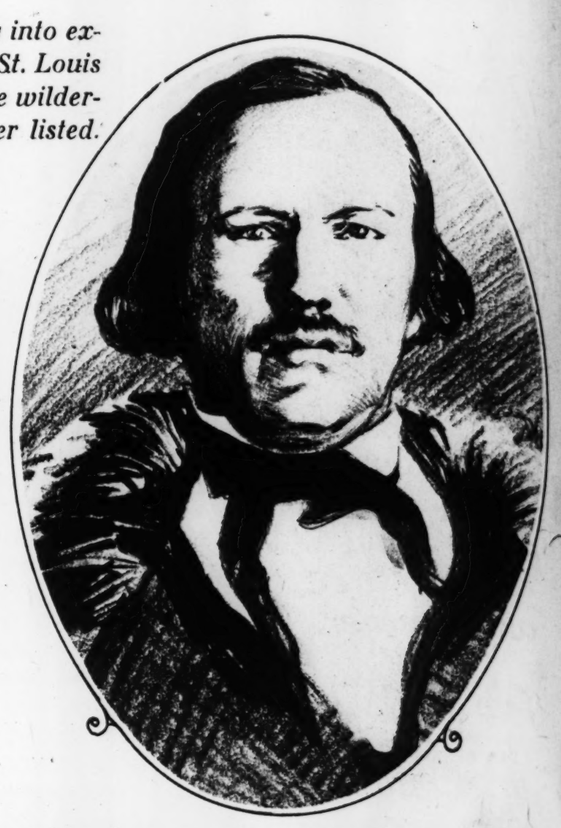
FROM their ranch on Beaver and Cow creeks the Suggs' operations spread over the Southwest. They amassed a huge fortune in the old Indian Territory. And when J. D. Sugg followed his brother to the grave last August, the estate totaled well over $10,000,000.

Ben Johnson was named executor of his will. Every relative was remembered. Some of his nieces and nephews were given $25,000. Others received as high as $2,000,000. And old friends were not forgotten. There was John Yeary, who for 40 years had punched cows for the Sugg outfit. John had a cow pony and a handsome pair of spurs to show for his "40 years of gathering." The will provided he should take his pick of any 160 acres of that part of the Sugg estate which lies in the Washita River Valley. It's worth $200 an acre. And there was John Sacra, who received 57 acres of land lying between the Rock Island tracks and the Frisco in the city of Chickasha. Located on that property are the great feed yards where thousands of cattle are brought to be fattened each year.

And lastly was that bequest to Nellie Harter. In life Old Suggs had never forgotten a friend. In death he remembered his sweetheart of long ago.

The SANTA FE TRAIL

One hundred years ago today the old Santa Fe Trail swung into existence, and now, looking back, it is interesting to find that St. Louis owes much of its present prosperity to this trek through the wilderness. As heroes of the Trail many St. Louisans are forever listed.



KIT CARSON, Prince of the Trail. The Franklin, Missouri, boy who ran away into the wilderness to become famous.

By HARRY R. BURKE.

NINETEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, according to the Chamber of Commerce, is the annual volume of business in this city. And of that commerce, trade experts say, 60 per cent is trade with the great Southwest. To put it otherwise—almost twelve hundred million dollars of St. Louis' business comes from that territory bound to St. Louis by ties of blood when the Santa Fe trail was established just 100 years ago. For this is the centenary of that fateful year when, after Senator Thomas H. Benton had procured from Congress an appropriation, Major George C. Sibley of St. Charles with Benjamin Reeves and Thomas Mather set forth to find the trail to the City of the Holy Faith, the trail that would ultimately weld into these United States that part of the Mexican territory which was ceded to America in 1848.

They were ties of blood indeed that bound the City of the Holy Faith to the city of the good St. Louis. The blood of innocent women and children who were massacred along the trail; the blood literally drawn from the parching bodies of strong men by the sun of the Great American Desert; the blood of soldiers who fought to defend the travelers on the trail from the tomahawks and scalping knives of the marauding Indians; and the blood of the innocent Indians, too, for the traders and freighters and emigrants, who for more than half a century traveled the trail to the City of Santa Fe, all believed in Sherman's maxim: "The only good Injun is a dead Injun."

There is evidence indeed that much of the goods sent down to the City of the Holy Faith were—to use the modern term—"bootlegged." "It will not be denied," said the Missouri Republican of February 16, 1830, "that most of the traders are professed smugglers." Yet the traders could say to the people of Santa Fe 100 years ago, as the Chamber of Commerce "literature" says today: "You can save money buying from St. Louis."

This was the situation, then, when Major Sibley and his fellow commissioners on August 10, 1825, met at Council Grove, where the old trail crossed the Neosho River, in what is now Morris County, Kansas, with the Chiefs of the Great and Little Osage tribes and paid them $800 for the right to peacefully occupy the trail they chose—forever. It was an old and prehistoric trail, a trail which may probably have been followed by the Mound Builders in coming north and east from a far more southerly civilization than that which they established here before the dawn of history. The Osage Indians kept their word.

Again and again, from the days of Coronado, the Spaniards from Santa Fe had struck north and east to reach the fabled riches of the Missouri country. Now Missouri was striking back. The trail proper started from the town of Franklin, Missouri, opposite the present Boonville in Cooper County, where it was extended from the old Boone's Lick road, continuing westward from the St. Charles road. But there was walking enough without that stretch, so the supplies were sent up from St. Louis to old Franklin by boat. Later Franklin was to give way to Fort Osage, Blue Mills and Independence as gateway to the trail and they gave way to Westport which took control between 1840 and 1846 and until the Civil War was the point to which supplies were boated from St. Louis for the long journey overland.

THERE were various adventures and Auguste Chouteau and Julian de Munn were among the adventurers. De Munn got on to Taos, and then to Santa Fe. He sought permission to hunt in Spanish territory but the Governor lacked Spain's approval. There was a return to St. Louis. Two years later he started once more. At Taos he was arrested and taken back with an escort of 200 men to Chouteau's Island, just at the American boundary on the Arkansas River near the Eastern Colorado line. Another year and Chouteau and De Munn were both arrested by the Spaniards there, taken to Santa Fe and imprisoned for 48 days. Their furs were confiscated—all the profit of three years of the hardest kind of hunting and exploration. It is reported that the Spanish Governor was delighted with these well-bred gentlemen, his prisoners. Every day he had them at his house to dine. All his best was set before them.

"What more," he asked, "can I do? Is there anything more you could want?" He was half apologetic.

"Yes, Senor Governor, my liberty," Auguste Chouteau answered. It was an insult. Apology gave way to rage. Chouteau was ordered from the dining room to prison. And in prison he stayed, until, after his goods were confiscated, he was released.

But it was William Becknell of Old Franklin who made the first successful trading journey over the Santa Fe trail, and it was he who fathered the lower route. His first trip had been in 1821-22 and was profitable indeed. In May, 1823, he set forth again, this time abandoning the surveyed way at "The Caches" and pushing across an unexplored desert on a route almost identical with that firmly established later from the Cimarron Crossing. He hoped to reduce the time it had taken to get to Taos on the earlier journey.

But he had failed to take the desert into his account. His party left the Arkansas with water enough to last no more than two days. They found no springs. Not a tree, not a path was there in that trackless waste. They guided themselves by a pocket compass. The pocket compass could not bring them to water.

On they went, their lips parched with alkali, and black and thick. Mirages danced before their eyes holding out the hope of water. The sun baked and tortured them. In the agonies of thirst they almost went mad. The dogs of their train were killed and the men drank the animals' blood. The ears of their mules were cut off to provide them fountains. This drink but increased their agonies. Only the intrepid Captain held firm as he gazed across the shimmer of the desert with fixed and staring eyes and saw—everywhere—unending plains.

Then there stumbled into their path a superannuated bull buffalo, that had just come up from the Cimarron River. They killed him. The agonized men drank the contents of his stomach. Captain Becknell back-trailed the buffalo. The track led him to the waters of the Cimarron. Canteens were filled with water to be taken back to those too weak to travel. After they had thus been revived the trip continued and its goal was won.

Eight years later Captain Jediah S. Smith of St. Louis was to meet a more tragic fate in that same country. With Captain William Sublette he had entered the Santa Fe trade. Twenty wagons were in their outfit, the finest caravan that ever set forth over the trail. They, too, turned from the Arkansas before they reached the Cimarron. The country was all burned up. They wandered through the days and nights tortured by the agonies of thirst. Death faced them constantly. The stock were suffering not less than the men. Smith noticed an old buffalo trail and knew it must lead to water somewhere. He refused to permit his comrades to accompany him. Fearless, if weak in body, he started out alone over the burned and yellow desert with its blinding sands, its blue heat waves dancing in the air.

FOR miles he walked, his face stung by alkali, his lips parched, and so weak that he could scarcely lift his feet as they stumbled through the loose sands. At the top of a low and long acclivity he seemed to see below him a stream. Was it water? Or a mirage? He slipped and stumbled down the bank. At the bottom was a bed of sand. The river was the Cimarron. But it was dry.

Smith was no tenderfoot. He dug for water. With his hand he scooped low in the loose sand. It grew dark and moist. The man sat back to wait. A few drops trickled through the sandy walls of his little well. They gathered in the shallow basin. He touched them with his hands. He licked his fingers. It was as the wine of life. It was good, sweet water. And then he waited for the pool to fill. Slowly the trickle accumulated. He would fill the canteens now. But first he would bend to drink.

Flat he lay, to place his lips to the cool nectareous fluid. Two Indian arrows fatally pierced him there. Comanches had discovered the man and ambushed him. Yet before he died he had raised himself and seized his rifle. Two Indians fell before a dozen other arrows had nailed his body to the sands. The Indians scalped him there. The spot where he fell was never known. Only the boasting stories of the Indians revealed his fate.

Down into New Spain went goods, silks, velvets, woolens, calicoes, drilling, shirtings, hardware, guns, axes, tools and knives. Up from the Santa Fe came horses and mules and furs and gold. It was from the City of the Holy Faith that the first Missouri mules came but as soon as this State began to raise its own in sufficient numbers that trade passed. In New Mexico was mining. Thence came up to St. Louis—silver and gold.

It was for the sake of this gold that Don Antonio Jose Chavez met his death in 1843. He was a trader on a large scale, who lived in splendid style at Albuquerque and who made all his purchases of the dealers in St. Louis. In February, 1843, he left Santa Fe with his own wagon train, his private coach, several personal servants and a following of retainers.

Like an overlord he traveled. You can picture his coach, with its great, leathern Concord springs. You can picture faithful Indian outriders. You may see with the mind's eye the wagon train which followed, great, wide-boxed prairie schooners, pulled by mules with their jingling bells. Each year he made his journey. Among his people he believed himself safe. Texans were threatening raids on the trail in 1843. Governor Armijo of New Mexico had been warned of this by Kit Carson. The Governor was then at Taos whence he had sent 100 men on to intercept the Texans while he himself raised 1000 more. Of the company of 100 but two escaped when the Texas raiders were encountered. Armijo heard the news and turning fled back to the City of the Holy Faith. Don Antonio Jose Chavez was of sterner stuff. He made his way toward Westport Landing where he was to leave his caravan and his retainers while he took the boat to St. Louis to make purchases.

John McDaniel, a Texas adventurer and ruffian, had come to Westport from Texas and there had raised a band of nine unsavory and murderous loafers who were to accompany him back to the Texas border, to ally themselves to one of the raiding bands and make forays against the Santa Fe caravans. These men had word of the coming of Chavez. Determining that the rich Don should be their first victim, they rode to meet him down in the Kansas Indian country. Where Cow Creek debouches into the Arkansas, at what is now Hutchinson, Kansas, the Spanish caravan would camp for the night, they knew. And there they lay in wait for their victim.

It was dusk when the caravan reached the camping place. With wild Indian cries the murderers set upon it in the dark. In the confusion but two of the Spanish caravan escaped the first onslaught. One was the Don, held prisoner until the outlaws could make sure by torture that they had all his gold. The other was a Mexican peon, a wagon driver who cut loose the mule he had just picketed and made his escape.

DON ANTONIO JOSE CHAVEZ was taken south from the trail a few miles, held captive through the night and next morning, after attempts to make him confess the hiding place of his hoard had been successful, was shot down in cold blood. His body was thrown into a ravine.

A few days later a company of troops from Fort Leavenworth, guided by the Mexican teamster who had reached that post, met John Hobbs, a veteran scout and trapper in that country. Hobbs and his men led the soldiers in pursuit of McDaniel and his gang. Four days later they met. One man was killed in the encounter. The others, taken prisoners, were brought to St. Louis and hanged, except one of their number, a doctor, who was imprisoned after he had turned state's evidence.

Chavez's wealth — some estimates say $15,000 and some say $60,000—was recovered when the murderers were caught. Col. Owens, a Santa Fe trader and a friend of Chavez, invested it in a stock of goods and sent the loaded caravan back to Albuquerque by Dr. Conley of Boonville, Missouri. Mrs. Chavez employed the physician to sell the goods upon his arrival. He profited beyond her expectation. He was given charge of all her business interests. In two years he had married the lady, and according to reports theirs was a happy life.

INDEED, it was from St. Louis that there went forth the men who made the trail the home of great adventure. There was Kit Carson, greatest of all scouts, who, apprenticed to a saddler at old Franklin, ran away when 16 years old to live the free life of the plains. There was James P. Beckwourth, by many called a villain, whose father was a Frenchman on the Mississippi banks but who ran away from home to become a trader and an Indian chief. There was Jim Bridger, who trapped for the big St. Louis concerns, whose daughter was educated here, and who was known both Southwest and Northeast, though he looms larger in the history of the latter. And there was Chief John Smith of the Cheyenne Indians, who had run away from his St. Louis home when a child to become an autocrat of the plains and mountains, levying tribute on every trade by Indians or Mexicans. There was Charlie Bent, half-breed son of Colonel Bent, the founder of Bent's Fort, who was educated in the best schools of St. Louis but who used his education to become the leader of a blood-thirsty band of young Indian cutthroats, who murdered and robbed indiscriminately. Bent pretending to be a starving plainsman until he had spied out the strength and weakness of the wagon train he had encountered and then giving the signal for its annihilation by his men.

As to the romance of the Santa Fe Trail in the hundred years since Major Sibley laid it out these are but hints, but they are history. Folk-tales, too, have grown up about that famous path and not the least of these is the yarn spun by Colonel Henry Inman, the friend of old Kit Carson and of all these other men. "It was in 1846," he says—before there was even a conjecture of our war with Mexico—"when a caravan of 29 traders on their way from Independence to Santa Fe beheld, just after a storm and a little before sunset, a perfectly distinct image of the Bird of Liberty, the American Eagle, on the disc of the sun."

Probably it is a fiction, but before 12 months the American Eagle did fly across the sunburnt land to make it her own—forever.

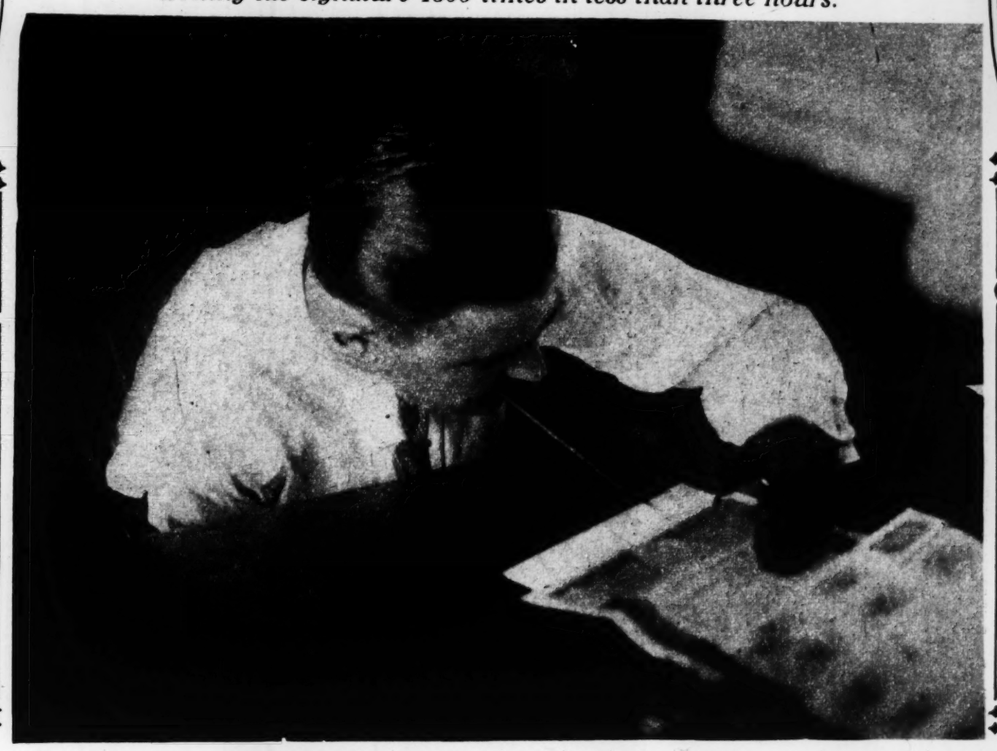
Signing bonds with his Teeth

ONE Thing Sam Sloan Does

Though he lost both his hands at the age of 12, Sloan has triumphed over all obstacles—Now he is State Treasurer of Arkansas, the youngest on record, and recently he showed what a man without hands can do, by writing his signature 1300 times in less than three hours.

PEN IN TEETH, Sam Sloan (above), State Treasurer of Arkansas, signs his name like this.



STATE BONDS are signed in this way, and legibly, by Sloan.

MRS. SAM SLOAN, wife of the Arkansas official.

WHEN one has two good hands to work with, the task of signing a name 1300 times in three hours isn't exactly a small one. When one hasn't any hands at all it takes on the aspect of an utter impossibility, and that, no doubt, is what it would be for most of us unaccustomed to wrestling with physical handicaps. For Sam S. Sloan, State Treasurer of Arkansas, however, the feat of signing his name 1300 times in three hours and without any hands to do it with is simply part of an ordinary afternoon's work. Wielding a pen with his teeth, he accomplished that very thing only recently when $650,000 of State bonds had to be signed for delivery to a St. Louis purchaser, and while doing that he did a lot of other detail work as well. Four hundred and thirty-three signatures an hour—and written with his teeth! Try signing your name once an hour with a pen held in your teeth.

With all due tribute to a man who can accomplish such a task as this, it must be stated that this achievement is not what has made Sam Sloan famous, nor, indeed, is it any other one particular feat. But this serves as a good single example of Sloan's method of dealing with obstacles. This is what did make him famous: his way of meeting and overcoming obstacles that seemed insurmountable.

When a cotton gin accident robbed Sam Sloan of both hands and arms at the age of 12 there were not many among his neighbors who would have staked a plugged nickel on the boy's prospects for becoming a self-supporting citizen, to say nothing of his prospects for becoming a State official. His family was poor; he had little education and little chance of getting any more. Work with his hands was the only kind he had ever known and now he had no hands. It was a discouraging future that loomed before him and when two years later a boiler explosion in that same cotton gin ended the life of his father the outlook seemed desperate indeed.

But Sloan was not of the sort that countenanced discouragement. He got an education in spite of difficulties. He not only took care of himself, but contributed to the support of his mother and sisters, and then, at 26, entered one of the highest offices his State could offer. Now they are talking of Sloan for Governor of Arkansas. If there is a lesson to be gained from the careers of self-made men, surely an inspiring example is to be found in the hard-won achievements of Sam Sloan.

THOUGH the caliber of the young Treasurer has for some time been familiar to his home State, it was the recent bond-signing performance that brought upon him the attention of the country at large. There were 650 of these bonds, issued to finance the erection of two new buildings at the State University at Fayetteville, and the law requires that each bond be signed twice by the State Treasurer before it is delivered to the purchaser. When the Mississippi Valley Trust Company of St. Louis bought the entire block of securities a short time ago Sam Sloan's job was cut out for him, with only a day to finish the task. But a day was far more than he needed.

"I just rolled up my sleeves, figuratively speaking, and sailed into it," he said to the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine correspondent who visited him. "It really wasn't a big job at all. In three hours I had every bond legally signed, and that," he grinned, "was 433 signatures an hour. Besides the signing there was the blotting and arranging of the separate bonds to do also, but I got through with the task in time to go home early."

As the facsimile signature reproduced on this page will show, it is no slipshod "hand" that this armless man achieves with a pen in his teeth. It is neat, most legible and even attractive, and he does it without any special writing apparatus or any special pen staff or point. The only special attention his writing equipment gets is its keeping under lock and key for the sake of sanitation. The bulk of his routine work he does himself, although he has under him a loyal and efficient staff of eight helpers. When he started out in politics he did all of his own work and did not have an assistant until he entered the State race last fall.

SLOAN began his political career as Treasurer of White County—the county which was his birthplace and which witnessed the tragedies of his early life. He was just 21 when he was elected. In that race he had four opponents. But when the ballots were counted he led his nearest rival by 1100 votes. That was the testimonial of his home county, which had only 3800 votes to divide between five candidates. Four years later he decided he might make good use of his experience in a bigger job and, acting upon the counsel of his wife, entered his candidacy for the State office.

His venture had hardly been announced when his home county rose to the occasion with another testimonial of confidence, the first act of his 3800 neighbors being the presentation of the $600,000 bond required for the office of State Treasurer. This gesture, they explained, was to express their trust in a native son and to insure for his home county the honor of furnishing the bond. Subsequent events proved that the citizens of White County made no mistake. During his campaign Sloan visited only one county besides his own, but sentiment throughout the State was so strongly in his favor that no other candidate entered the race. He was elected without opposition. He entered office just a few months before he was 26, thereby hanging up a record as the youngest Treasurer the State ever had. His friends also will tell you with a show of pride that he is the youngest State Treasurer in the entire country. In Arkansas they are proud of the record of this armless boy and the pride increases visibly as he continues to conduct his job in the State Capitol with a master touch.

About three weeks ago Sloan paid out $2,285,391 of the State's money in one day, the largest amount ever paid out of the Treasury in a single day in the history of the Commonwealth, and yearly he handles more than $25,000,000. "Handles" may not be quite the correct word for the operations of a man with no hands, but that is what he does. He "handles" the job with rare competence.

Personally Sloan is big, genial, active and rather striking in appearance. He radiates good nature and friendliness. Everybody knows him and calls him "Sam" and he is declared to know more persons by their first names than any man in Little Rock.

He was born on April 5, 1899, in the little village of Garner, in White County, in the cotton country. There are hardly a hundred inhabitants in this dusty hamlet, but the place is now historic in Arkansas, because Sam Sloan put it on the map. He went to country school there and later, after he had lost his arms, attended high school at the nearby towns of Bradford and McRae. That was all the schooling he ever had, but it served its purpose well, for Sloan's mind is quick and steady and he guards the State Treasury like an eagle.

That cotton gin at Garner was a fateful place for the Sloan family. Sam, as a boy, used to work at the plant on Saturdays and during vacation. He had not yet finished district school when one day his hands were caught in the machinery and mangled so badly that both arms had to be amputated near the elbow. Ten days later Sam's courage began to show itself when he wrote a cheerful letter to Dr. J. C. Cleveland of Bald Knob, Arkansas, telling of his rapid recovery. It was his first letter written with his teeth and it was badly scrawled, but that was before he had much practice. He writes no scrawling letters now, even with his teeth. The doctor's wife has that letter yet, Sloan told the correspondent, and she and Dr. Cleveland were among his most loyal supporters in the race for State office.

Again the cotton gin was to get in its tragic work when, two years almost to the day after Sam's accident, an explosion left him fatherless. That left his mother with five children to support and only two of them were old enough to contribute measurably to the family's keep. Besides, one was without hands to work with. It was a dreary outlook for this Arkansas mother and her fatherless brood, but she managed to send Sam to high school for another year before he resolved to make his own way to such fortune as might be in store for him.

FIRST he tried his luck as a salesman, traveling in Arkansas and Missouri. Later he worked for a railroad company as assistant to the yardmaster. Incidentally, he made good in both jobs. "I had a good time in those years, too," he told the correspondent, and he still has a good time in life, for he and Mrs. Sloan and their young son, Sam Franklin, are enthusiastic campers. Every vacation, and often in between, they pack their Ford with tent, blankets and frying pans and journey to one of the beauty spots of Arkansas for a few days' outing in the Ozarks.

The correspondent was wondering how Sloan manipulated that Ford with his artificial arms and inquired about it. "You know," he said, "the first time I ever got in a Ford I drove it off by myself. My friends there in Bradford said: 'Go on if you must; you'll kill your fool self anyway and it had just as well be in a Ford.' But the driving came naturally enough, for I had watched others drive until I thought I knew how. Besides you drive a Ford mostly with your feet anyway, so the lack of hands didn't make so much difference." Now Sloan drives his car all over the capital city and wherever else he cares to go. The only difference between his Ford and others is that he has had a larger steering wheel made for his car.

When Sam Sloan first entered politics he kept his youth a secret as far as it was possible to do that. Of course, he couldn't fool the people of his home county. They knew him too well. But he didn't advertise the fact that he was still under 26 when he began his campaign for State Treasurer. "Some people," he said, "want to wait until a man is 40 to see whether he has decided to be crooked or not and that was why I felt a little shaky about letting them know I still had 14 years of the trial period ahead of me." However, the days of secrecy, it may be said, are past for the youthful State Treasurer. He has made good in a phenomenal way and the whole State is his friend. Not only is he one of the most popular State officials Arkansas has ever produced, he is also becoming an acknowledged power in State politics. In Arkansas politics the day of the young man has arrived, Sam Sloan believes.

"Why, we haven't an old man in the State House," he declared. "There's Governor Terral who is hardly out of his thirties; and there's Jim Higgins, Secretary of State, who is almost a kid like myself, but these youngsters work."

That they do work no observer will dispute. And none of them works harder than Sloan. The day the correspondent visited him he was in his office at 6 a. m. He had a special job he wanted to get done and was doing it long before a single one of his employes had arrived. That is the way he works on every board and commission of which he is a member, and he is a responsible member, too, of nearly every important State board. That is because he is the watch dog of the State's finances and the taxpayers know he keeps a careful "hand" on the checkbook.

There isn't any secret to his success, the youthful State Treasurer declares. "My folks and my county have been solid behind me all the time and that's the reason for whatever success I have had. If I can help it I will not disappoint them."

Sloan has three more years to show his mettle as State Treasurer and then he will be a year too young to be elected Governor. But political prophets are putting high odds on Sam Sloan for the chief executive's job, and although he laughs when told that he will some day be Governor Sloan of Arkansas, he admits that stranger things have happened.

There will be in Sam Sloan's romantic and dramatic history much to tell if he is elected Governor, but the story must always begin back in that quiet, out-of-the-way village in White County, whence, born of tragedy, has come a daringly courageous story of human achievement. Arkansas calls itself the Wonder State. The Legislature was so sure the title was deserved that on January 26, 1923, it officially adopted the name by House and Senate resolution. Now a good many people in Arkansas believe a new reason for this boastful slogan has been found—and that this reason is Sam Sloan.

SLOAN'S career forms an interesting parallel to that of the late Michael J. Dowling, crippled financier and once Speaker of the Minnesota House of Representatives who educated himself and rose to a position of power and service to humanity after a Northwest blizzard had robbed him of one arm and both legs. Dowling's career is over now, but his spirit still lives in his philanthropies and in his example of courage. Born in Huntington, Dowling left the parental roof at the age of 14 and went West to become a cowboy. It was in the winter of 1880 while he was employed on a Minnesota cattle ranch, that fate imposed upon him the handicap he was to bear through the rest of his life. Caught in a terrific storm, the boy lay all night in the driving snow and when dawn came was scarcely able to drag himself to a neighboring house which he had been unable to find in the blinding tempest. When medical attention reached him it was found that both feet, his left hand and part of his right hand would have to be cut away. Doctor's bills took all his savings and, with family ties broken, he faced the prospect of becoming a county charge.

Then there arose in him the spirit that has made his name famous and that has made equally famous the name of Sloan. He bargained with the County Commissioners to fit him out with artificial hands and feet and pay the cost of two terms in college. From then on he made his own way. After completing the two terms he taught country school. Then he painted fences, ran a roller skating rink, wrote life insurance, edited a newspaper, sold real estate, became a banker and finally entered politics. He was elected Representative in the State Legislature in 1900 and a year later became Speaker of the House. After several years' service he was mentioned for Governor but withdrew after entering the race and devoted the remainder of his life to his banking business and to aiding children who suffered from physical handicaps such as he had known himself. The Michael J. Dowling School for Crippled Children now stands as one of the monuments to his memory.

And now the courage of Dowling is manifesting itself again in Sam Sloan. Sloan is yet a mere boy. He has many years ahead in which to scale even greater heights of success, and those who know him well are confident he will allow no opportunity to escape him. Because he has already accomplished so much, it is natural for Sloan's friends to expect from him much more.

THE Arkansas Treasurer with Mrs. Sloan and their son, Sam Franklin.

Labeled: "JUNK." Value: $250,000

IF This Latest Find Is a RUBENS

The proprietor of what is called the "Old Curiosity Shop" in Toronto bought for $100 a painting black with age, cleaned it as he used to do in the Paris art shops and now feels sure that he has discovered a long-lost picture by the great master—Jean Kosto's junk business has been profitable and enabled him to gratify his fondness for fine paintings—The mystery of the vanished canvas, "The Adoration of the Shepherds," formerly at Antwerp.

JEAN KOSTO of Toronto, junk dealer and art connoisseur.

RUBENS painted this big canvas, says Kosto, and some experts agree with him. "The Adoration of the Shepherds" disappeared from a church in Antwerp in the eighteenth century. Has it been found?

A CORNER in the crowded prosperous "Old Curiosity Shop" of Kosto, who believes that he paid $100 for a genuine Rubens.

KING STREET, TORONTO — 405-407 is the number, the building a dingy, old-fashioned brick . . . the place is in Toronto's Ghetto. Quaint, old-fashioned windows with iron center-posts . . . small panes of glass. Before a narrow door an old iron sphinx with a curious Roman column rising from it. In those windows is unending interest for the loiterer. For the kiddie as well. Small tools, old, and some of them rusty . . . hatchets, hammers, saws and files . . . a bridle-bit, a pair of spurs . . . long brass rods and fountain pens and butcher's scales . . . a samovar . . . great walnut bureaus, some wax flowers under glass, a what-not, tables that are topped with marble . . . and irons and brass fenders. One looks and looks. Always there is more to see.

This is the "Old Curiosity Shop" of Toronto. It is Jean Kosto's junk store. It may be—and experts say it is—the home of a missing masterpiece of Peter Paul Rubens, the long-lost "Adoration of the Shepherds," the "Basket of Eggs" picture, which disappeared three-quarters of a century ago. Such a picture—it may be the very picture—Jean Kosto owns. He bought it when he was a waiter—but a waiter with the heart of an amateur and the eye of an art expert. He pawned his watch and his necktie pin to buy it. He borrowed from his waiter friends to raise the $100 that was asked.

Today Jean Kosto wants $250,000 for his picture. He has installed it in a private art gallery above his junk shop. In that home it is surrounded by unquestioned masterpieces. Jean Kosto, a bachelor, sleeps near it on the floor that he may sleep light. The room that holds it is double-locked but he takes no chances with thieves.

It is no accident that the junk man owns the picture. Jean Kosto is not the least of the curiosities in his "Old Curiosity Shop." He did not buy his picture blindly. He knew it was a masterpiece, suspected it was a Rubens. What picture it was he knew not.

Kosto is a Rumanian. He came to Toronto 12 years ago—a boy of 23, penniless, strong—and accomplished. He had knocked about the Paris art shops and he had a knowledge of seven languages—Rumanian, Bulgarian, Turkish, Russian, Italian, French and English. There wasn't any living in the lot of them. So he went to work as a mechanic. What had he to do with machinery? He possessed a Levantine shrewdness. He knew that men must eat. Therefore he set up a little restaurant. Jean was his own first waiter in a narrow but cleanly place. Trade grew. He added other waiters. He had to expand a little and that took money. It was about this time he found the picture. He borrowed from his own employes to buy it after he had raised every cent he could on his watch and pin.

ABOVE Jean Kosto's "International Restaurant" was Patrick Regan's tailor shop. Patrick was a curious old-fashioned Irish tailor and draper. He ate in Kosto's restaurant and the two men became friends. Jean Kosto went upstairs one day to purchase a suit of clothes. He saw the picture. There was no order for the tailor on that day. There it hung, in the dingy steamy woolen-smelling tailor shop, among the curious old fashion plates of a dozen years before and the flashy new fashion plates of now. Gentlemen in top hats and spats and skirted coats looked across from the walls upon a dusty grimy picture that Pat Regan, carefully pushing the pins with his tongue to the corner of his mouth, declared was "hand-painted."

"It's a genuine hand-painting," said Pat. "It's worth money. I paid 35 dollars for it, and 50 cents. There was a bachelor named Lees that used to live here. I made him some clothes once. An aristocratic sort of man, who lived in a big house by himself. Well, it was his. I bought it at the auction when he died."

"I knew," said Kosto, "that I stood in the presence of a masterpiece. It was black with age and one could scarcely see the design as it hung there on the wall, but under the grime I could see the flesh of Peter Paul Rubens' brush."

The deal was made. Kosto at last got his treasure home. Then he set to work to clean it. In the art shops of Paris he had worked as a restorer. Under his deft fingers the dirt vanished, the bloom of the old colors glowed with the depth of smouldering fires. Figures, flesh and sculptured muscle. To Kosto there was no mistaking. But Rubens or a Rubens pupil? Which?

While he prosecuted his search, and every catalogue was studied, every monograph was read, every library was ransacked to find a clue, Kosto changed his occupation. Men must eat, but there is a trade which profits more than catering to the stomach. To buy that which has little or no price and, finding a buyer, sell it at a big advance, there lies the road to profit. So, Jean Kosto disposed of his restaurant. He opened up the junk shop. Other odds and ends than this old picture that the tailor once had owned might bring a fortune. He has prospered. The shop has grown. Through two rooms its stock is ranged, a helter-skelter to chance visitors, but in Jean Kosto's eyes a fixed arrangement. At once he can lay his hands on anything. Everything is in its place. Every place is clean.

BUT meantime, while Jean Kosto has been making money he has been buying pictures, too. To provide a setting for the painting he believes to be a Rubens he built on the second floor of his shop a private art gallery. Then, as profits accumulated or as chance discovered a worthwhile painting to him, he bought. The Rubens has a company now, not of fashion plates but of masterpieces. There are almost a hundred paintings on the drapery-hung walls of the gallery. Among them is a panel by Albert Cuyp, the famous Dutch landscapist; there is a gay French fete by Monticello, whose glory of color made him one of the glories of nineteenth century French art. There is a Jose de Ribera. There is a Morland. Some of these have been stalked by Kosto, as a hunter stalks his prey. Some of them have been bought almost by wholesale.

As when he visited the gallery of Albert Britnell in Toronto. Britnell must have wondered at the visitor. Evidently the man was an athlete, of medium height, with a wrestler's chest and shoulders and neck. He was dressed in khaki trousers, wore a gray flannel shirt that was innocent of collar, boots, and a hat that flapped in whimsical shapelessness above his rounded face. Mr. Britnell is nothing if not polite. He was courteous to the man. He let him see the pictures in a half-amused way. Suddenly he discovered he was becoming interested in his picturesque visitor's comment. This man knew pictures. He talked as an expert might talk. Moreover his comment was keen, incisive, pointed.

"He pointed about," said Mr. Britnell, "asking the price of this, or that. I was puzzled at my curious visitor. No use denying that. Then suddenly he said:

"'I'll take those I've pointed out. How much?'

"I added up $3500. It seemed too bad to spoil what appeared to be almost a whimsical game, but I named the sum. From his pocket he pulled a roll of bills and paid me cash on the spot.

"'Where will I send them?' I asked. 'To the Old Curiosity Shop,' he answered. It all seemed like a play, a comedy. But there was the cash."

JEAN KOSTO will bargain with you to a penny for the contents of your attic. That is for existence's sake. With his pictures he lives, and with music. His friends have memories of both. They remember with pleasure the visits to his galleries. It is like a lecture, they say, to hear Jean Kosto discuss his masterpieces.

But with no less pleasure they remember musical evenings in the back of his store when, seated on old easy chairs, they gather round to hear him play his accordion. It is an instrument he carried to Paris with him from the Balkans. It has comforted many a lonely hour in the bitterness of his youthful struggles. There sits Jean in a haze of blue smoke, a smile upon his face as he plays the old folk-songs of the Slavs; tunes and hymns so old that man has little memory of whence they came; plaintive melodies that sing of homesickness like the melodies of another Slav, Anton Dvorak, in his "Symphony from the New World;" lively dance tunes which evoke visions of mountain villages and country boys and girls in their quaint and colorful embroidered wear, frolicking, rejoicing, over the feast of some patron saint. . . . Tears come to the eyes of the fellow-countrymen for whom he plays and the lines of faces hardened by the struggle of an alien civilization grow soft and tender as childhood memories are recalled.

The great world sees Jean Kosto as a curiosity, an art expert, or a clever business man. But to the people of the Balkans who live in that slum district on the edge of Toronto's Ghetto he is a friend. If a countryman's business is hardly prospering, you will find Jean Kosto kneeling in the window arranging a display of those goods the other sells. Tomorrow you may find him helping some family to move from an old home to a new. "What's the use of being rich, if you haven't time to help your friends?" he asks.

And the children adore him. Every Saturday morning a crowd of dirty-faced and often ragged youngsters is clustered about his door. They clamor and push for places until Jean arrives with a merry smile. From his capacious pocket he draws forth a fistful of coins. To every child he gives a nickel. Their cries of delight, their whispered planning as they leave him, their cries of: "God bless you Jean," warm the cockles of his heart.

"It's worth while being rich," he says as he looks at these children of the gutter. "A man," he adds, "who owns a quarter of a million dollar Rubens, can afford to remember the kids."

IF HE likes you, Jean Kosto may take you in to see the picture experts have declared is the missing Rubens. You pass back through the store. "A wilderness"—you make a mental note like this—"a wilderness of junk." Everything you can imagine. Nothing particularly to describe. Perhaps one wonders as he passes through the narrow way what stories there are to tell of the homes from which this is the wreckage. A stairway at the back of the room leads to the second floor. Up there Jean Kosto lives. His room is plain. A table and a few chairs comprise the furniture. For bed, you will recall, he uses the linoleum-covered floor. A stair step is his pillow. It is one of two steps in a corner which mount to a floor just a little higher than his living room. From them leads a hallway into which two doors open.

Of the first of these Jean Kosto turns the key. The room is dark. No windows. The walls are hung with some warm gray material as the light discloses when Kosto presses a button. Twenty bulbs throw their light downward over the faces of as many paintings. A velvety carpet muffles footsteps on the floor. One feels an almost religious air about the place. You admire the works before you.

"But these," says Kosto, "these are nothing. Come with me."

He is as eager as a lover as he leads you to the second door. Likewise it is locked. Jean turns another switch as he lets you in. The room is almost a replica of the first. Each of the four walls has its pictures. Over each shines a light.

"Stand back. Stand here." Kosto touches you on the arm. You face the largest picture in the room. It is the "Adoration of the Shepherds." Jean Kosto makes no question that this is the original. The attributions of experts support his conviction. He isn't thinking of that. He is now the amateur—the lover of painting. He has thought only for that which he sees.

"Isn't it wonderful? Now look at it! Come a little closer! Look at that brush work. Isn't it marvelous? See how the artist paints the finger nails of the Virgin. Just one stroke of the brush! Only a master could do that!"

HE TELLS you something of the painting's story now. "I had searched for a record of it. All of five years I had searched. Then a friend loaned me Smith's 'Catalogue Raisonne' of Rubens. I was turning the pages mechanically . . . hopelessly. But, in Volume 11, on page 12, I came upon it. 'The Adoration of the Shepherds,' the catalogue said. It was painted for the Church of the Dominicans in Antwerp, from which it was taken long ago. I knew now why it was not in the catalogues. It had vanished. I knew that I was right. I had a master! I had a Rubens!"

Thus Smith's catalogue described the treasure which Kosto believes he has discovered:

"'The Adoration of the Shepherds' (Basket of Eggs). This composition consists of eight figures and represents the Virgin seated on the farther side of the crib in which the infant Saviour is reposing; her right arm is under the pillow and the left is raising up the covering of the babe, while a shepherdess kneels in adoration before Him, having her simple offering of a basket of eggs and two fowls on the ground by her side. Two shepherds rendering their homage are on her right; and a third, leaning on a staff, and a female with a can on her head are behind them. St. Joseph stands to the right of the Virgin and three cherubs are above him. An ox and an ass are in front."

The canvas, which is 7 feet by 4½ feet, disappeared from the Antwerp Church apparently in the eighteenth century. The Illustrated News of New York published a wood engraving of the picture in 1852 and a description of it. But no record is to be found of where the picture was at that date of publication, 75 years ago. Nor can Kosto's searchings reveal its wanderings—if, indeed, it be the missing masterpiece—from the time it left Antwerp until it came into possession of the recluse Lees in Toronto.

IN ONE point does it differ from the description in Smith's catalogue. The three cherubs do not appear above the St. Joseph. Lawrence Harris, leader of the "Group of Seven" and one of Canada's distinguished artists and experts, accounts for this by his belief that it may have been cut from the original frame in which there were a few inches more of the picture—both top and bottom.

"The composition," he says in his attribution, "is superb. The active part of the composition is enclosed in a great triangle formed by the floor and the backs and heads of figures, animals, a beam and a wall. In the center of this the mother and child are encompassed by several figures. The organization, the faultless mutual accommodation of all factors into a living, functioning whole, the interweaving harmonious colors, lines and forms, all this convinces one that the picture is the conception of a very great master. The deftness and surety of brushing, the use of direct flesh-painting where it best serves, as in all the hands, heads, limbs and whites of the headdresses and the child's swaddling clothes, and the employment of glazes on the manger and the richly colored robes to give intensity and brilliance leave one convinced that the picture can hardly be a copy. The composition, the use of familiar models, the poses of the figures, the painting of the animals, the rich fullness of the ensemble, the glowing colors and the amplitude of the forms make it appear almost certain that the picture was painted by Rubens."

"I have no doubt it is by the hand of Rubens," wrote E. Wyly Grier, former president of the Ontario Society of Artists.

"THIS painting is unquestionably by the hand of Rubens," wrote George Theodore Hamilton, formerly teacher and painter of Philadelphia, but now of Toronto. "Experience has bred in me every possible prejudice against accepting as authentic the claims put forth when a supposed masterpiece is found. Not one in thousands ever survives the noise that is made about them.

"No artist but Rubens would have been capable of covering this 30 square feet of area with the particular and compelling technic here shown. The most versatile pupil or master, had he attempted imitation, would have revealed his imitative processes in the underlying impasto. The technic here is exactly that which Rubens mastered in his own swift, miraculous way, a distinct creation in itself, growing out of the temperamental and intellectual qualities of his mind. In the figures the sculptured muscles, sinews and bones are all here as the incisive mind of Rubens would have them.

"Besides these the composition, the anatomy of the figures, the drapery, the similarity of this to Rubens' other canvases of renown especially in the men's and women's faces; the physical strength of his figures—all these point to Rubens, but I regard the qualities I have mentioned heretofore as the only sure basis for convincing proof."

There the matter rests. To Kosto this is proof. Others may deem it but opinion. The best evidence would be the history of the painting in its wanderings. What stories could it tell? Perhaps some day the world will know. Meantime Jean Kosto is satisfied. He has his "Rubens." He has his accordion and the old folk-tunes. Every Saturday the children come for their nickels.

"Life's pretty darn good," says Jean.

WAR
In the Pacific

In presenting on this page a resume of the most interesting parts of a new book, "The Great Pacific War," the Post-Dispatch in no way signifies agreement with the theories and ideas advanced by the author, Mr. Hector C. Bywater.

By GUY FORSHEY.

LOOKING back now upon the great war in the Pacific—the mighty conflict of 1931 between America and Japan—one observes, upon mature reflection, that it was all a colossal mistake. Of course it is quite the customary thing to view wars as mistakes after they are over, but this especially—this Japanese conflagration which raged for two years over island possessions—was a costly blunder. Consider the thousands of lives wasted. Think of all the money that went to the bottom of the Pacific in destroyed ships and shattered aircraft. Think, too, of the sorry defensive plight in which the oncoming of that struggle found the United States. Now if we had had a hundred airplanes at the defense of Manila back there in 1931 instead of only 40 the conflict might have been shortened by a year and a half. If we had only kept a few more battleships ready for service in western waters and had taken better precautions against the blocking of the Panama Canal——

But what, the reader demands, is the meaning of all this nonsense? War with Japan! Defense of Manila! Back in 1931! Is this insanity? Not at all. We were merely discussing "The Great Pacific War," a most startling book by Hector C. Bywater which has just been published by Houghton Mifflin Company. A member of that school which has taken particular delight in prophesying a war with Japan, this author, it appears, couldn't wait for the conflict actually to take place. It has been in prospect for so long already. So he has written a history of it in advance, and has written it with all the dogmatic fidelity to detail that first-class historians usually employ. Of course he doesn't claim to know anything about what is going to happen in 1931, but in spite of that he probably knows as much as many historians of the future will know when they sit down to write in retrospect about the same subject; and his work forms an interesting commentary on a subject which has been from time to time one of large public interest.

Other naval experts may dispute the value of the imaginary maneuvers Bywater outlines and those versed in international relations may deny his assumption that Great Britain would remain neutral in such a conflict; but if a war with Japan should actually develop within the next few years there is small doubt that this author's book would prove to be of value. At least it calls attention in advance to a few disasters that in real war might be averted—the debacle at Manila, for instance, and the blocking of the Panama Canal. Says Bywater in his preface:

"Although this book portrays the course of an imaginary conflict between the United States and Japan it has not been written to support the view that such a conflict is either close at hand or inevitable. No doubt there are elements of danger in the immigration controversy, while further cause of friction may attend the growth of American commercial enterprise in the Far East. For the moment, however, the Pacific horizon is fairly free from clouds. But if war between the two nations is happily improbable, it remains a contingency that cannot be dismissed as wholly impossible." With this explanation Bywater proceeds to hostilities.

WILLIAM MITCHELL
SAN ANTONIO TEX

"A PISTOL shot fired at Sarajevo in June, 1914," he writes, "touched off the European powder magazine, causing an explosion that convulsed the earth. It might be said with equal truth that a bomb bursting in Tokio on January 5, 1931, gave the signal for the recent tremendous conflict between the United States and Japan, the echoes of which have scarcely died away. Thanks to the documentary evidence now available, it is possible to trace, link by link, the connection between this attempt on the life of Prince Kawamura, the Japanese Prime Minister, and the subsequent events which culminated in the Pacific War."

The United States, loath to take seriously her Far Eastern rival's threatening attitude, was leisurely concentrating a few warships on the Pacific side when Japan struck her first blow, catching America hands down. That was the blocking of the canal. Late in February, 1931, a huge Japanese freighter, bound from Hamburg to Kobe, started through the canal with a cargo of machinery. Midway in Culebra Cut she blew up, bringing down the walls of the ravine with her. The theory was that she had met another Japanese ship at sea after leaving Hamburg and had taken on at least a thousand tons of dynamite. How this vast store of explosives escaped detection by the canal inspectors remained a mystery, but the important point is that the scheme worked. Members of the crew did not sacrifice their lives for nothing. The canal was effectively blocked for months. Shortly afterward an unarmed Japanese merchant steamer maneuvered so as to draw fire from a U. S. submarine off the Brazilian coast and that opened the way to Japanese attacks on American shipping.

Having effected the Panama Canal coup, Japan was then in a position to strike at the Philippines and Guam without fear of interruption from the bulk of America's fleet, which, after being fitted out for so long a voyage, would have to spend weeks in a journey around the Cape before it could even constitute a menace. Japan made use of the opportunity. Paralyzing wireless communication by use of some powerful agent of radio disturbance, the Oriental descended upon the Island of Luzon. After days of colorful rumors from Chinese ports telling of a naval disaster at Manila, there came this pregnant official war bulletin from Tokio:

"In the afternoon of March 6 our South Sea naval forces encountered the American Asiatic squadron outside Manila Bay. By skillful maneuvers it was brought to action under favorable conditions, the battle lasting three hours. The enemy was totally destroyed, in spite of a brave defense. We sank five cruisers, one large auxiliary, nine destroyers and several submarines. A number of prisoners have been taken. Our losses are small. Operations in the southern seas are continuing to our advantage."

IT WAS true. The American squadron, although fighting valiantly, had been annihilated. The way then lay open for invasion of the islands by an army and this was soon to follow. On the very day of the naval encounter a fleet of Japanese transports sailed for Luzon with 100,000 fighting men on board. The force outnumbered the American defenders by at least six to one, it had a proportionate superiority in artillery and guns of half the Japanese fleet to cover its landing while the nearest American warships, aside from those at the bottom of the ocean, were at Hawaii, 5000 miles away. America realized too late that the Philippines and the brave garrison at Manila were doomed. So it proved.

At 5 o'clock on the afternoon of March 11 aircraft sighted two lines of transports steaming up the bay. This was the moment for which the American airmen had been waiting. Although the fight was hopeless from the start, great was the account these flyers gave of themselves in that memorable encounter. I quote from the book:

". . . Once past the smoke screen the transports were in full view—24 big ships, all crowded with men, slowly advancing up the bay in two columns lined abreast. Planing down in wide spirals, the American flyers discharged their bombs at a height of only a few thousand feet. . . . Clear above the thud of the antiaircraft guns and the rattle of small arms came the crash of detonating bombs. The largest transport in the first column was the N. Y. K. steamer, Sado Maru, her decks brown with masses of khaki-clad troops. Ae the first plane crossed the line three 500-pound demolition bombs plunged into this ship, and in an instant she was transformed into a mass of floating shambles. Hundreds of men were blown to fragments, as many more lay in ghastly heaps, maimed and shattered by the explosions, while a pillar of dense smoke rising amidships told of a fire caused by one of the bombs which had burst below deck in a compartment filled with inflammable stores. Of the ten other transports in which bombs took effect, all suffered terrible casualties. The Wakasa Maru was so badly holed that she foundered in a few minutes, with the loss of half her complement of 2200 soldiers. In another ship, the Tsubari Maru, phosphorous bombs set fire to large petrol tanks in the hold, flames from which speedily enveloped the hull from end to end, driving all the men overboard. . . . It was afterwards claimed by the aviators who carried out this first attack that if a hundred machines had been available instead of only 40, the Japanese transport fleet would have been practically wiped out and the landing frustrated; nor in view of the havoc they caused, could this claim be disputed. Even as it was, the enemy lost more than 6000 men killed or wounded. . . . But the American airmen had shot their bolt. Only eight of the 40 machines got back to the aerodrome. Though a shrewd blow had been delivered at the enemy his advance was not arrested."

IN THE face of a deadly fire from the inadequate American coast defense, the yellow horde then swarmed ashore under a barrage from the guns of the fleet. The American trenches were stormed and overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers. Of the American force only 2000 remained. At last the long-feared thing had happened. The Philippines were in the hands of Japan.

A similar fate was in store for the Island of Guam, with the result that both of these Pacific possessions were lost before the great majority of American citizens at home knew that open warfare had begun. Guam was first visited simultaneously with the Philippine attack, several bombing planes demolishing the radio station at Machinao. Two weeks later two American naval transports, diverted from their Philippine destination by news of the Asiatic squadron's destruction, steamed into Apra (Guam's capital) with a heavy cargo of artillery and supplies just a few days ahead of the Japanese fleet. By virtue of these needed reinforcements Guam was able to put up a defense but little less heroic and spectacular than that of Manila. Fighters in the air again covered themselves with glory, and took a heavy toll of men and ships, but all to no purpose. The whole of the Japanest naval power was available to crush them, while the bulk of America's fleet had not yet rounded Cape Horn. Guam fell on April 4 and with it America's last important coaling station west of Hawaii.

There followed, then, several months of comparative quiet while slow-plodding America got ready for war, recruited a powerful naval force and laid its plans for a fight to the finish. A few submarines appeared off the coast of California; other submarines met an American squadron in the Straits of Magellan and, although destroyed, accounted for several ships; armed merchant vessels cruised in the Atlantic, wrecking the Leviathan and other great craft and to cap it all a disguised Japanese merchantman sent squadrons of airplanes ashore for a simultaneous bombing of San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles. Loss of life was heavy and the damage immense.

Finally, America's great war machine got itself in motion, but by that time it was confronted with the necessity of fighting its way across the wide Pacific step by step, recapturing and equipping bases as it went. That was a process of months.

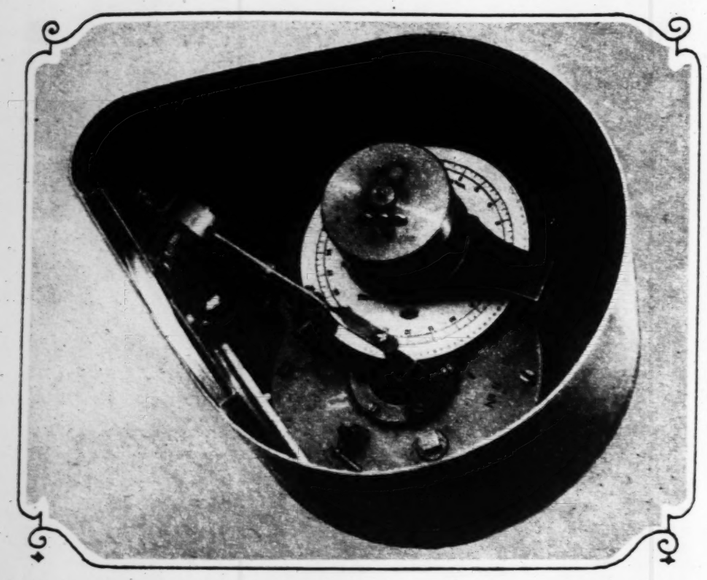
The first great naval campaign ended disastrously. It contemplated the sending of an expeditionary force against Port Lloyd, in the Bonin Islands, a group which lies only a day's travel from Japan's great naval arsenals. It failed because it depended entirely upon the chance of effecting a surprise attack. After suffering heavy damage in a storm near Wake Island the expedition was sighted by Japanese submarines, pursued by greatly superior forces and defeated.

The next venture was to end more happily for the United States. By feinting at attack on Nippon through the Aleutian Islands, America was able to draw the attention of the Imperial Navy to northern waters while a powerful squadron was speeding toward the South Seas. Some 200 miles off the Island of Rotumah it encountered a Japanese squadron on the way to attack Tutuila in the Samoa group. In the battle that followed the Japanese force was obliterated. This was followed closely by the American seizure of Truk. The end was in sight. With a large part of the Japanese fleet at the bottom of the ocean; with a base established within striking distance of Guam, and with food shortage and panic seizing upon the crowded Oriental nation, and on top of all this, with China cutting off Japan's source of munitions, the gloom of defeat was hovering just above the peak of Fugiyama, and it was to descend rapidly.

BY a well-timed thrust, American squadrons now pouring into Far Eastern waters seized the Pelew Islands and then came the greatest sea fight of all, and the last—the battle of Yap. Entering the engagement with 16 battleships, 32 cruisers, 115 destroyers and 190 airplanes, besides a formidable array of auxiliary craft, the Americans crushed the crippled imperial fleet as if it had been a fleet of fishing schooners. Guam fell. Manila was recaptured, with scarcely an attempt at resistance, and the Yellow Peril was no more.

So ends Bywater's appalling story of the Great Pacific War. There are many who believe the conflict is yet to be fought in grim reality, but if they read this author's account of what happened "back in 1931-32" they will be forced to the belief that the real war, when it does come, will be about the most useless bit of bloodshed on record.

SMOKE



SMOKE EXTRACTOR used in Shaw's Garden to gage the amount of soot in the atmosphere. The air rushes through the filter paper into a vacuum tank below, leaving a deposit of soot on the white chart.

To determine exactly what sort of air St. Louisans breathe, the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine engaged a chemist to analyze the atmosphere. His findings and an account of various similar experiments made at Shaw's Garden are here presented.

GALVANIZED IRON pipe after three years of service in the city. In the county, says Dr. George T. Moore of Shaw's Garden, this same pipe would have lasted THIRTY years.

WITH the approach of winter and the furnace-firing season St. Louisans are finding themselves again in the unhappy plight of Hamlet's Ghost. "My hour is almost come," quoth that doleful apparition, "when I to sulphurous and tormenting flames must render up myself." Had he said "smoke" instead of "flames" there would exist abundant ground for the conviction that the spirit of Denmark's murdered king was lamenting the prospect of a winter in St. Louis. Other regions, no doubt, have achieved more notoriety for flames than St. Louis, but there are times when this city, gasping under its blanket of smoke, is about as well equipped to administer the sulphurous phase of punishment as any uncomfortable hereafter Shakspeare might have had in mind.

The citizen whose business brings him into the downtown district every day may wonder sometimes just what he is inhaling along with his breath of life. He may wonder why his throat burns and why he suffers on occasion the stifling sensation of semi-suffocation. To settle this question, an air analysis has been made for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine by H. E. Wiedemann, chemist, with offices in the Chemical Building. The results are interesting.

It may be recalled that September 19 was bright and sunny and very hot. The temperature mounted far into the nineties and the smoke nuisance seemed as nearly absent as it has ever seemed. On that day an air sample taken on top of the Chemical Building, at Eighth and Olive streets, disclosed .001 per cent of sulphur or .002 per cent of sulphur dioxide. That is, a volume of air weighing 100,000 grams contained one gram of sulphur, or two grams of sulphur dioxide. Sulphur, it must be understood, does not exist in the air as a solid. It is present only as sulphur dioxide, the gas given off when powdered sulphur is burned.

One part of sulphur in 100,000 of air doesn't seem to be an amount sufficiently large to cause alarm. It would take a good while to get suffocated at that rate. However, it must be remembered that .001 per cent represents approximately the minimum present at any time. On damp, smoky days such as those of last October the amount is about 10 times as large. But taking the approximate minimum as a guide, let us see how the percentage works out.

THE St. Louisan of average lung capacity inhales on the average 400 cubic feet of air in 24 hours or 144,000 cubic feet a year. This amount of air would contain 52.53 grams of sulphur, or about enough of the yellow powder to fill a wine glass. Since it would be inhaled as sulphur dioxide, the weight of the gas would be a little more than 105 grams. A hundred and five grams of sulphur dioxide gas occupies a volume of 1½ cubic feet. Should a man take one good breath out of a gas tank of that size he would crumple up just the same way as do the tender plants (illustrated on this page) at Shaw's Garden.

Only the minimum is considered in these figures. Suppose every day witnesses a smoke cloud, and sulphur dioxide, as a consequence, is ten times as abundant. In a year's time Mr. St. Louisan would breathe more than a thousand grams of sulphur dioxide — from 15 to 20 cubic feet. That much, even distributed over a year, would be enough to cause serious discomfort. Somewhere between these extremes the citizen strikes an average; but what that average is depends largely on how much care householders and industrial firms exercise in keeping their furnaces from spouting clouds of smoke. There is discomfort enough even in the minimum amount of sulphur fumes coupled with soot and dust and grease common to city atmosphere.

When one stops to consider the amount of sulphur that is poured into the air in St. Louis every year, the marvel is not that the man in the street breathes so much of it, but that he gets so little. This city, according to the records of fuel dealers, consumes approximately 6,000,000 tons of coal a year, or an average of about 16,000 tons a day. Of this total, about 5,880,000 tons is Illinois soft coal of various grades—the sort that sends smoke clouds rolling thick and black from the chimneys of factories and apartments. Even the best of this soft coal is from 1 to 2 per cent sulphur, and inferior grades contain a great deal more. Suppose the average is 2 per cent, a low estimate. This means that in every ton of coal burned there are 40 pounds of sulphur to be disposed of. Let us see what becomes of it.

TO begin with, about half of it is deposited in the ash and cinders and in this form is hauled away as sidewalk and street paving material. The other half goes out the smoke stack as sulphur dioxide fumes. Twenty pounds of sulphur sent into the atmosphere for every ton of coal consumed means that in a year 58,800 tons are broadcast over St. Louis and the surrounding country. Enough sulphur to fill two box cars!

Of course a variety of forces enter into the distribution of the gas after it leaves the furnace. Being hot, most of it is carried high into the air. Atmospheric currents waft it far and wide so that it settles to the ground over a tremendous area. People inhale small quantities of it, as analysis of the air shows they must, but they exhale it again without serious harm resulting. It is upon delicate plants, evergreen trees and various kinds of shrubs that the sulphur in the air works its greatest devastation, and that comes about through other chemical changes that the sulphur dioxide gas undergoes after it leaves the chimneys.

Sulphur dioxide, as its name indicates, is composed of sulphur and oxygen, but it is an unstable gas. Upon being released into the air, it takes up moisture and becomes sulphurous acid, and finally, with the addition of more oxygen, becomes sulphuric acid, a powerful oxydizing agent which is not only deadly poisonous but potent enough to attack and destroy most metals. Fortunately for humans, sulphuric acid does not form rapidly. If it did, and each breath laden with sulphur dioxide gave rise to sulphuric acid in the lungs, life would indeed be brief and painful. As it is, animals, and that term of course includes human beings, are able to throw off the sulphur fumes before they have time to do much real harm. Such is not the case, however, with plants. Neither is it the case with metals.

ON this page appears a photograph of a section of galvanized iron gutter pipe taken from a building in the downtown section of St. Louis. That pipe was new three years ago. Now one side of it is completely eaten away. This represents the work of sulphuric acid which formed from the combination of sulphur dioxide in the air with the moisture in the drain. Fifteen or twenty miles away from the smoke of St. Louis similar gutter pipe commonly endures for 25 or 30 years. The same is true of other metal equipment such as iron fences, storage tanks and wire; though their life may be long in the country, away from the perils of smoke, they die an early death from rust in the large city. And rust is largely the work of sulphuric acid.

By means of a simple but ingenious device now in use at Shaw's Garden it is possible to measure the amount of soot present in the air at any hour in the day, and some of the findings are astounding. During the heavy smoke cloud of last October, it showed that the average St. Louisan was breathing a handful of soot every week.

The machine is said to be the only one of its kind in the United States and one of three known to exist. Dr. Moore acquired it about two years ago from an English scientist for research work at the garden. It has been in operation constantly, works along at 15-minute intervals night and day, extracts the soot from approximately two quarts of air and leaves the soot deposit on a disk of filter paper where it can be measured and studied at leisure. Since it takes its "reading" at regular intervals, the exact hour of greatest smoke outpour can be determined definitely. According to its records, this hour is 8 a. m. on week days and 9 a. m. on Sundays, a fact which indicates beyond possibility of dispute that the smoke with which the Shaw's Garden district is afflicted comes from residences and not from industrial plants or railroads.

Working from the known capacity of the tank and the known quantity of soot extracted from that volume of air, the scientist can determine with a fair degree of accuracy just how much soot a person inhales. That amount is found to be several pounds a year, but it does not mean that the individual is carrying that much around with him. Most of it is exhaled at once or thrown off from the body through other natural agencies. At that, enough of it remains to make its mark. Dr. Max C. Starkloff, City Health Commissioner, is authority for the statement that it is easy to determine by a post mortem examination of the lungs whether a person lived in this city or in the country. The lungs of rural residents, he points out, are pink—the natural color—while those of a city man are almost invariably darkened, sometimes almost to blackness, by the accumulation of soot.

THE MINIMUM amount of SULPHUR inhaled yearly by a citizen of St. Louis. This is an actual size reproduction of 52.53 grams of powdered sulphur.

Just what effect this soot has on public health, Dr. Starkloff declares, it is impossible to determine definitely, because so many other factors are involved. No specific diseases are directly traceable to soot alone, it seems, but the probability exists that many respiratory afflictions are aggravated by its presence.

Probably the most readily available demonstration of sulphuric acid's effect is to be seen on the plant life at Shaw's Garden. There every year such havoc is wrought that it is becoming virtually impossible to raise and bring into blooming the more delicate varieties of flowers. Even in the greenhouses, the plants are not protected from the ravages of smoke and its contents. Smoke penetrates anywhere the air penetrates and performs its deadly work. The accumulation acts as a gradual and persistent caustic eating its way into the tissues not only of the leaves but of the tender twigs and branches as well. The plant attains at best only a stunted growth, or often fails to bloom at all and finally dies a premature death. It is this condition that is forcing the removal of the garden to Gray's Summit, 40 miles west of St. Louis on the Manchester road. There plants will be grown and brought into blooming and then taken into the city for exhibition—and for death.

Sometimes there is a real catastrophe at the garden when smoke clouds are unusually heavy and atmospheric conditions contribute to more rapid formation of sulphuric acid. Such an occasion was the week of October 21-28 last, when orchids and chrysanthemums were killed within a few days; and such a time also was a period of several days in November, 1917, when hundreds of plants in the greenhouses were destroyed or seriously injured by the action of one smoke cloud. Orchids, chrysanthemums, ferns, cinerarias, azaleas and numerous other plants either dropped their flowers and most of their leaves or had the foliage so discolored by the action of the smoke that only a small percentage of them survived. According to Dr. George T Moore, Director of the Garden, those plants which were not annuals and which were not thrown away entirely, were so seriously affected that it required several years of the most careful attention to bring them back to anything like a normal condition. The appearance of many of the plants, Dr. Moore said, was as though they had been sprayed with a rather strong solution of sulphuric acid.

A concrete illustration of the difficulties which botanists and flower gardeners encounter in St. Louis may be found in the "before and after" photograph of a plant appearing on this page. There is shown a healthy begonia beside a plant that had just emerged from one blighting smoke cloud. It tells its own story. Note the nudity of the branches and the withered blasted appearance of what few leaves remained after the sulphuric acid bath. Any number of other examples could be found. Smoke's ravages extend all along the line.

The extent of the injury, according to Dr. Moore, is dependent to a degree upon the activity of the plant. In the day time, when the rate of absorption is greater, the action of poisonous gases is likely to be more detrimental. The effects are first apparent in the drying, blackening or curling of more delicate portions of the plants, such as the tips and margins of leaves, and then complete defoliation may take place. Especially is this to be looked for if the fog be of prolonged duration. Even if the plant survives, it is permanently weakened and becomes a ready victim for fungous attacks and other troubles.

NOT only has this sort of devastation been wrought upon the plants in Shaw's Garden, but upon those of all other gardens in the city. Each year witnesses a reduction in the number of radiant flowers. Florists no longer attempt to grow flowers in the city. They bring them into blooming as far from St. Louis chimneys as they can and transport them here for immediate sale.

Trees suffer from smoke just as do the smaller plants. Evergreens are notoriously susceptible—so susceptible, in fact, that it is next to impossible to find a healthy pine or spruce in this city. Look over the smattering specimens still to be seen in Forest and Tower Grove Parks and the few that are left in Shaw's Garden. All are found to be sickly and dwarfed.

Thirty years ago Shaw's Garden was noted far and wide for its complete collections of conifers and evergreens. That was in the days when the garden tract was in fairly open country and the smoke outpour had not yet approached its present stupendous proportions. Now there are left only a few dying Austrian black pines, a small Canadian hemlock opposite the old residence and one yew, opposite the Cleveland avenue gate house. The Austrian pine at the entrance of the orchid house is typical.

MOST of the other trees, original trees planted by Henry Shaw, also have succumbed, especially the white birch, hard maple, Norway maple and the various kinds of oaks. The death of the oaks has been notably rapid in the last five years and Forest Park has suffered heavily in this respect. According to Dr. Moore newly planted oaks seem to flourish up to the point where the bark begins to assume its permanent corky character and then there is a decided stunting of growth. The top dies first and in a short time the whole tree is killed.

Evergreens seem to fall most readily the victims of smoky atmosphere largely because of the fact that they do not shed their needles in the fall as other trees shed their leaves. This subjects them to an unbroken siege of sulphuric acid and soot, while their broad-leafed neighbors do enjoy some degree of respite in the winter months. Oaks, however, find smoky regions uninhabitable because of the soot which accumulates in the rough bark and, stopping the pores, slowly suffocates the tree. This effect is noticeable to a greater or less degree among all trees.

Sycamores are generally conceded to be the most resistant to the effects of smoke and therefore the best adapted to city life. An observer will notice that they are appearing in St. Louis in growing numbers as other trees give up the fight. Their resistance seems to be largely due to the fact that the bark scales and drops off, carrying the soot and dust accumulation with it. Soft maples are good smoke resisters also, but they are comparatively short-lived. Osage orange, black locust, lombardy poplar, the Chinese ginkgo, or maiden hair tree, and the tree of Heaven are about the only others that hold their own in smoky air.

Even if smoke were free from sulphur fumes, it would still be disastrous to many trees and smaller plants as well as exceedingly disagreeable to man, for the soot that settles down from the somber clouds overhead finds its way through every crack and keyhole. Plants in the comparatively well protected greenhouse beds in Shaw's Garden are literally coated with grime. Note the photograph of an orchid leaf bearing the word "smoke" upon it. The writing was done in the soot accumulation and the writing instrument was a match stick.

St. Louis smoke and what it does to comfort, cleanliness and health—here is a matter which seems to deserve attention.

FOR the love o' Mike what do you d with your money?" demanded R Luke. "You don' chase around wit girls, you're not rum hound, an' yo got luck enough fo two men whe you're shootin craps. What do you do with it?"

Harry Myrick, his partner in the firm o Luke and Myrick, "Death Defiers—Wi Walking, Plane Changing, and Parachute Jumping Our Specialty. We Will Try Any thing"—shifted uneasily and studied tha portion of the sands of Long Beach heaped in a well-patted cone between his legs.

"I didn't blow it," answered Dauntless Harry Myrick in an aggrieved tone.

"Well, anyhow, you're busted."

"Yeh, but—" Myrick paused, knocked th tip from the sand cone and transformed i with his fore-finger into the crater of a vol cano. LIVING or DEAD

Two partners who called themselves "Death Defiers" in their reckless professional exhibitions with airplanes were just the men to devise a spectacular method of revenge—For 12 years, Harry Myrick had been looking for the rascal who robbed him as he lay ill—Finally the thief was found and then things began to happen.

"WELL," he began, "it's this way: Back in 1910 I was out in the Straits running a merry-go-round for the Chinks an' the Malays with a guy named Joe Pelly. I picked him up in Shanghai. "Well," said Harry Myrick apologetically, "every time I get some cash I send it to some private detective birds who are trying to locate this Pelly for me. I want to find him. We've got a line on him. He busted out o' the coop in Texas in 1913. When I get through with him, he's got five more years to do there. Then they want to talk with him in Kansas about a swindling job an' elopin' with a girl an' never marrying her. Y'see? Say—let's walk."

He sprang to his feet. "When I get thinking about that bird, I get so mad I can't sit quiet."

They strode off down the beach.

"Say, Harry," remarked Red Luke, "I guess we can get along without a new bus for a while yet. And if those dicks need some more money, I got about five hundred salted down."

THEY walked a mile along the beach, glumly silent with their thoughts of Joe Pelly, and settled themselves upon the sand once more. At the edge of the water two boys and an Airdale were romping.

"Gosh, I'd like to have a dog!" observed Harry Myrick suddenly. "I ain't had a dog since I was a kid. Why not let's get a dog, Red?"

"You crazy little shrimp! We got enough trouble now jumping all over the country with parachute packs an' suit cases an' all the junk we got to carry. Use your bean."

"Yeh, I guess you're right," admitted Dauntless Harry Myrick sadly. "But we ought to have a dog, anyhow. I always was crazy about dogs." • • •

The name of Pelly was rarely mentioned during the two years which followed that conversation at Long Beach—two years in which the team ranged from Atlantic to Pacific, north and south—but there were times when it seemed to Red Luke that the firm was really Luke, Myrick, and Pelly, for there was always that invisible presence, eating up its share and more of the profits. Pelly became an affliction to be tolerated and not discussed.

"I've got him!" announced Myrick quietly, the afternoon of their arrival at South Haven, where they had gone to take part in an annual charity circus. He had been at the office of the chairman of the performance committee, arranging their program, and had returned to their hotel room hotfoot.

"HARRY MYRICK grinned at him and uttered a long-drawn sepulchral 'Ha..ha.'"

Red Luke, interrupted in the act of washing his face, stared at him. "Where?" he demanded.

"He's in business here." Harry Myrick gave a leering grin and nodded toward the central street of South Haven. "Big as life. Some sort o' real estate holdup. I mighty near ran smack into him as I was leaving this chairman guy's office in the bank."

Myrick's voice sank, and his brown eyes glowed with excitement. "I ducked an' he didn't see me. I says to the chairman guy—he's the president o' the bank—'Who's that fellow?' His face kind o' turns sour an' he says: 'That's George H. Platt,' says he. An' from the way he says it I know that Pelly's just as popular around here as a kidnaper at a mothers' meeting."

"And you didn't soak him?" asked Red, aghast.

"Soak him? Soak him? Say—do you think I been on this guy's trail for twelve years just for the fun of pasting him in the eye? Listen, Red—if Pelly was sick, I'd pay his doctor bills just to get him well."

"Well, what are you going to do?" demanded Red, giving his face a violent scrub with the towel.

"I don't know yet. Where's Stuffy?"

"Down at the field."

"Go get him. Bring him up here. I'll be doing a lot of thinking. Maybe I'll get the bright idea."

Stuffy Johnson, a big pink-and-white-faced Swede pilot who worked with them whenever their engagements called for a third flyer, was industriously refolding his parachute. The two airplanes had been anchored against any sudden squall, and a watchman—as per contract—had been stationed to guard them.

REGARDLESS of Pelly and the bills for private detectives who had detected nothing, the firm had been able to buy new planes. One of them was a light, sensitive machine which Red used for acrobatics; the other was a large plane, with broad wings upon which Myrick cavorted and gamboled. The larger machine had an additional advantage; in the body of it there was a compartment in which they could carry their parachute packs, luggage and tools. It had been designed and built for the purpose of running whisky over the Mexican border to the oil fields. Red Luke and Harry Myrick were among those present when the confiscated plane was auctioned off, with every cent they could find in the world.

For their purposes the machine was ideal. Besides being a baggage plane, it traveled slowly enough, so that audiences could get a good view of Harry Myrick performing his wing stunts. And the pilot's seat was far enough back so that Red could watch every move that his partner made and maneuver the plane to his greatest advantage. At the forward end of the compartment which had once held whisky they had cut a passenger's seat, which meant two planes for passenger work, at $10 a hop.

"Come on up to the hotel," Red said to Stuffy. "Harry's going to stage a show. Hurry up."

It was an hour later when they entered the hotel. Harry Myrick was seated cross-legged upon one of the beds, like an emaciated Buddha. He motioned to them to draw up chairs.

"Did you tell Stuffy about Pelly?" he asked Red.

"I told him all I know."

"That's enough. Now listen—I've thought this thing out. That's the way I do things. Most o' you guys 've got a lot of imagination, but it's all in your fists. Mine's in my head! See? Here's the big idea—Pelly probably thinks to this day that I croaked when he left me there in Penang! An' I told that guy I'd get him, living or dead!"

George H. Platt, nee Pelly, had looked South Haven over quietly and begun operations a full year before South Haven knew anything about it. One day late in June a full-page advertisement in the local paper announced the advent of the Dream City Land Co., George H. Platt, president. "Own Your Own Summer Home in the Millionaires' Colony! $10 Buys an Option on the Sweetest Little Summer Home You Ever Saw! Let Your Children Play on the Beach With the Children of the Rich. You May Not Be a Millionaire in Money, but You and Yours Can Be Millionaires in Health and Happiness! Come to Dream City!"

Lawyers, summoned too late to protect the serenity of South Haven, reported that George H. Platt had obtained options upon 200 acres of farm land to the north of the town. That was to be Dream City. It was legal and aboveboard, and other property owners, if they didn't like it, could either buy George H. Platt off or buy him out. George H. Platt's answer was, briefly: "Two hundred thousand dollars cash. Think it over, gentlemen, and act rapidly, for the price goes up every day."

Each train brought prospective buyers, who left the beach strewn with the litter of picnic baskets.

"Make yourself at home," George H. Platt told them. To the man who had financed his idea he said: "The big boys are coming through, all right. They'll disgorge. Just wait until we slap up a couple of frame shanties on Kill-Care Avenue!"

Red Luke and Stuffy Johnson paused before the show window of the Dream City Land Co. and gazed at the large bird's-eye picture, painted with more vigor than skill, showing the visionary summer cottages.

"This baby's after big jack, all right," said Red. "Come on."

They entered the office—waited for a moment until George H. Platt was disengaged.

"Mr. Platt," began Red, "my name's Luke. I'm the pilot who's going to fly for this charity circus. This is my partner, Mr. Myrick."

THE man's eyebrows went up at the name. He shook hands. "Any relation to a man I met while I was traveling in the Orient about 12 years ago?" he asked. "His name was Harry Myrick. Came from Nebraska, I believe."

"Nope," answered Stuffy Johnson. "My family comes from Canada."

"Just wondered. Unusual name. What can I do for you?"

Red launched forth upon a carefully prepared and rehearsed recitation of the wonders and glories of aerial photography. "I can make that bird's-eye thing look like thirty cents. . . . your lots'll look like they were right in Duryea's back yard . . . prints for three cents apiece . . . give one to every customer an' show him right where his lot is . . . let 'em take 'em home an' show the family . . . fifty dollars for the job, and not one cent unless you're absolutely satisfied"——

Red allowed George H. Platt to haggle over the price and bring it down to twenty-five dollars. It had been Harry Myrick's idea to start at the higher figure.

"Of course," concluded Red, "I'll want you to come up with me and give me the lay of the land. We want to do this job right!"

"I'd better send one of my agents. Pretty busy these days."

Red shook his head sadly. "No, that won't do. You're the boss, and you know how you want things done."

Harry Myrick, not daring to leave his room for fear that he might meet Pelly on the street, was waiting for them.

"He fell for it!" announced Red. "Ten o'clock tomorrow morning."

Long before the hour of the appointment with Pelly, Red Luke arrived at the field, accompanied by a carpenter, to perform a vital operation upon their big plane. The panel between the baggage compartment and the pilot's cockpit was sawed away, then replaced upon hinges. That accomplished, the carpenter was dismissed and Red made several experimental trips from the seat, past the control stick, over the rudder bar and into the compartment, where he sat, as though in a packing case, chuckling.

Stuffy Johnson came just as he was emerging.

"Whew! That's a tight fit!" exclaimed Stuffy.

"You can make it, all right," Red answered. "You'd better try it a few times first. Harry won't have any trouble. He's such a skinny little runt. How about the helmets?"

FROM his pocket Stuffy produced two light flying helmets of a blatant black-and-white check pattern. "We had a time sewing them. I got the cloth at a store and then we laid out an old helmet of mine as a pattern. Harry did most of it. He's pretty good."

"You bet he is! Harry c'n do anything—sew, cook, fight, fly. Say, when's he coming?"

"He'll be right along."

Stuffy took off his coat, got into a khaki flying suit—an exact duplicate of the one Red wore—and climbed to the pilot's seat; then disappeared into the compartment.

"It sure is a tight fit," he announced dubiously. "But I guess I can squeeze through."

"Sure you can. I'm not worried about that. I'm thinking that the bus is going to be darn tail-heavy. We'll make it, though. I dumped all the gas except a half-hour's worth. There's Harry."

In the small tent which had been set up to hold their paraphernalia the other two sat watching Harry Myrick while he changed to the close-fitting white suit he used for his wing stunts. Next he spread a towel under his chin like a bib, smeared a light coat of cold cream over his face, and dusted it with a yellowish powder. With the soot from a candle he darkened the skin about his eyes. The effect was cadaverous. When he grinned his face became a death's head.

"Gosh!" remarked Stuffy. "That looks awful!"

"There's others'll think so, too," Harry Myrick replied, inspecting himself in a small mirror. "Believe me, when I get my imagination going, things happen. It's nine-thirty. We better be getting aboard. Pelly might show up early. Send that watchman for a package o' cigarettes, Red. This is our party an' we don't want nobody else in on it."

Through the opening of the compartment Red peered in at them and laughed. "You birds stay plastered up forward, or we'll come down in a bunch of junk," he warned.

For three-quarters of an hour they sat there, cramped, waiting. Stuffy's legs went to sleep; he developed a crick in his neck; he wanted to smoke.

"And have this bus spouting smoke like a steam packet?" demanded Red. "Not a chance."

"If Pelly throws us down," announced Harry Myrick, "I'll go up an' wrap his neck right around his ankles. Wouldn't it be just like that dirty pup"——

"Shut up!" whispered Red over the edge of the cockpit. "Here he comes! Swing that door closed!" He advanced toward the president of the Dream City Land Company.

"Howdy, Mr. Platt? All ready for you." From the compartment he thought he heard a half-suppressed titter.

He mounted to his seat, kicked the door, and said: "Keep quiet, you fools, we can hear you all over the field!" He gave the starting magneto a whirl and the engine roared; then he went to Pelly and discussed soberly the various angles from which they should shoot pictures. Pelly wanted more than a dozen snapped, so they agreed upon two dozen. It made little difference, since they had no camera aboard.

He helped Pelly into the forward seat. Myrick and Johnson, against the panel at the victim's back, were remaining silent, but the silence was so ominous that Red nearly laughed, and he hid his head behind Pelly while he fastened the straps.

Pelly, important, cocksure, waved an impressive farewell to the friends who had accompanied him to the field and settled his hat more securely upon his head. It was inevitable, of course, that the hat would be blown off in the first blast from the propeller, thereby dimming the impressiveness of the occasion.

Red, in the pilot's seat, pushed open the door to the baggage compartment. Two broad grins answered his own expression. He opened the throttle. Pelly's hat went sailing; Pelly's arms shot up to grab it and were savagely wrenched back in the wind. He turned a pained surprised countenance upon Red.

The big plane, loaded too heavily aft, waddled down the field and lifted its tail reluctantly; reluctantly it took to the air and hung there, wavering and gathering speed. At last it commenced to climb; South Haven and the bare green fields of Dream City slipped beneath them.

Pelly turned inquiringly—motioned, but Red Luke's eyes were fixed far ahead of the plane. After several minutes Red glanced into the compartment, crooked a finger at Stuffy Johnson, who stiffly made his way to the door.

When Pelly next glanced about, demanding with the full force of outraged expression where in thunder Red Luke thought he was going, he discovered the pilot—khaki-clad, black-and-white checked helmet—standing up on his seat, gazing back toward the vanishing site of Dream City. Pelly rose in his seat as far as the straps would allow and yelled. The blast of wind caught his open mouth and strangled him.

THE plane, apparently unguided, running wild, began to lurch horribly, while the pilot balanced precariously in danger of toppling overboard. Then the pilot, face hidden, pointed insanely back toward Dream City.

"Sit down!" screamed Pelly into the roar of the engine. "Sit down!"

Harry Myrick, ear against the panel, listened, beaming, and nodded to Red Luke, who was crouched down over the control, hidden from Pelly's sight. Red gave Stuffy a jab in the leg with his elbow, yanked the plane about in another wild lurch.

Stuffy Johnson, still pointing toward Dream City, lost his balance and shot out into the immensity of the sky; and the plane, losing all semblance of control, lashed furiously. It whipped about and tumbled and reared up, dived earthward and took prodigious leaps.

Pelly, transfixed, throat dry and the palms of his hands dripping, grabbed the cowling and whimpered. Had he looked down he might have seen Stuffy Johnson's parachute open like a huge white flower against the green of the earth; but there would have been small consolation in that for him—alone in the air, nearly a mile high, riding a pilotless, careening, runaway airplane.

The plane handled more easily now, with Stuffy's 160-odd pounds overboard. Harry Myrick was making his way aft. He squirmed into the pilot's seat, keeping his head down. Red edged about to the compartment, where he sat humped over in the door.

The course of the plane became

FAMED WIT SAYS WE HAVE A MISS AMERICA; WELL, WHY NOT A MR.?

Lardner Annexes The New Title "Mr. Radio"

"WOULD BE MR. AMERICA, TOO, BUT I'M FROM GREAT NECK"

By RING LARDNER.

BY THIS time it is an old story that Miss Lanphier or something from sunny California was officially chose Miss America at the annual Atlantic City pippin konklave last mo., also that Miss Rena Jane Frew of Beaver, Pa., was formally christened Miss Radio during the world's radio exposition in N. Y. city. Miss Lanphier win the plume for being the most beautiful gal in the U. S. while Miss Frew got her medals for having tuned in on more distant stations than any other radio fan of the silly sex. Interviewed by newspaper men Miss Lanphier said she owed all her success to her mother. Miss Frew attributed hers to her antennae. Miss Frew, when seen by reporters, was in a xstatic mood.

DEVIL TAKES HINDERMOST.

Contests like these kind is always bound to call forth a good many shower bouquets of raspberries for the judges of same as friends and relatives of the defeated candidates won't never admit that the best man win, but it seems to me like they ain't libel to be near as much injustice in the beauty contest as in the radio brawl.

The gals at Atlantic City has got to prove their qualifications in costumes that cannot tell a lie, whereas the radio queen must be elected more or less on her own lisping word and if she claims that she got Honolulu last night and Odessa the night before, why you can only say is that so or what of it. Personly I have not heard none of Miss Frew's opponents make a squawk, but if they did they would probably have more of a leg to stand on than Miss Lanphier's rivals, though the legs of the last named is not to be sneezed at if the rotogravure sections speak true.

DO YOU KNOW ME, AL?

In his speech accompanying the presentation to Miss Frew of the diamond studded rubber heels or whatever the first prize may of been, Gov. Al Smith of New York said she had been picked as the American girl most typical of radio. This sounds kind of nasty to me and had I of been Miss Frew's brother, I would have sewed the Gov. for libel or else slapped his face and said you are a loud speaker yourself Smith.

As I say, the stories of these 2 contests is old stuff, but it may be news to my readers that as an aftermath of same there has been 3 similar competitions staged in different localities which strikes me as just as important as the ones that was given such wide publicity, and in one of these the writer took part and win first prize. Chief amongst the contestants referred to was one to decide on America's most beautiful man and I don't half to tell my many admirers that it was not in this one that I allowed the usage of my name as I positively cringe from any flattering reference to my eyes, ears, nose and throat and have actually went for several years without shaving in order to distract unwelcome attention from bleating nostrils and shapely moles.

PERFECT FOOLS.

No, the masculine pulchritude melee was put on without my entry which is perhaps just as well when you recall how some of the gals yelped when Dorothy Knapp and Miss Ray of the chorus attempted to crash into the scrimmage at Atlantic City, and further and more, just prior to this contest (the men's) they was such a big protest vs. the presence of professional beauties like Rudolph Valentino, Nick Altrock, Jack Barrymore and Ed Wynn that these 4 Venuses was obliged to withdraw.

The event was held over the hose house in What Cheer, Ia., and the winner was Mr. Hal O'Flaherty a local boy. The judges was the Shuberts, Peggy Hopkins, Judge Landis and the Mayo brothers. Mr. O'Flaherty in accepting the first prize, a soup spoon equipped with a copper screen to prevent oysters, vegetable and etc., from entering the mouth, said he owed his success to a railway accident. The second prize was a mask which can be worn at all times and completely hides the face. It was awarded to William A. Lange of San Francisco better known as Bill Lange who played center field for the old Chicago Colts and caught everything with one hand including the Deuce from the management. Mr. Lange attributed his triumph to a misunderstanding.

READ 'EM AND WEEP.

Following is Mr. O'Flaherty's measurements:

Head—Normal, 6 7-8; expanded, 7 1-4.
Neck—Normal, 14 3-4; expanded, 15 1-2.
Waist—Normal, 32; expanded, 42.
Ankle—Normal, 17; swollen, 19.
Feet—Winter 7 1-2 A; summer, 9 1-2 D.

An effort to have Mr. O'Flaherty christened Mr. America was knocked for a gool by a peremptory veto from President Coolidge.

"I'm glad he win if I couldn't," said Mr. Lange. "Who is he?"

TOO BAD REALLY.

In the men's radio event it was the writer of the present article who was unanimously awarded first prize and nicknamed Mr. Radio. This contest was to decide who had come farthest from getting the farthest away stations and I was elected after relating an experience that took place not longer ago than last week. On our radio, it seems that when the arrows on the different dials is pointed to No. 70, 68 and 68 respy. why you get one of the main N. Y. stations, Namely WEAF. Well one night I got tired of the entertainment on WEAF, and decided to try and get WRED which is Lansing, Mich. The numbers for this station is 28 1-2, 23 and 23 which I turned to same and in less time than it takes to tell it I heard the voice of the announcer saying this is station WEAF New York. The prize arrived in next morning's mail and turned out to be a bill for $14 from Dr. Nieseley for vaccinating the wife and kiddies.

In next week's letter I will give an acct. of one of the most interesting contests of all, namely the one to select the homeliest eggs in the world, male and female.

This Week's Cover

First of a series of pictures selected from the galleries of the City Art Museum in Forest Park.

FROM the City Art Museum, where it is a part of the Pettus collection of paintings, comes "The Cavalier," by the French artist Ferdinand Victor Leon Roybet, which is reproduced on the cover of this week's Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine. Roybet was notable for his paintings of cavaliers, musketeers and grand seigneurs and was prominent among the romantic figure painters and portrait artists of the last half of the last century.

Born in 1840 at Uzes in Gard he studied first in the Ecole des Beaux Arts at Lyons, but in 1864 went to Paris where two years later he exhibited at the Salon. His later years were spent as professor of engraving at Lyons. He died on April 20, 1920.

Many museums have examples of his work, for in the '70s and '80s he was a very fashionable painter. Never an artist of the first rank, he drew inspiration from Franz Hals and later from the Spanish colorists, with the result that his work was most pleasing to late Victorian taste. Thus examples from his brush are to be found in the Louvre, the Luxembourg, the Metropolitan, and in many other important collections. Fashion which had carried him to the fore left him "dated" however toward the last of the nineteenth century.

The picture reproduced here is a characteristic example of Roybet at his best. The dark beauty of the [illegible] colored cloak with its suggested [illegible] broidery is in the painter's [illegible] mood. There is clever brush work [illegible] a meticulous and almost photographic painting of detail as in the [illegible] beard and in the lace of the [illegible] chief. The grace of the pose, the [illegible] onair carriage of the seigneur are [illegible] most hall marks of the painter's [illegible]

Despite his one-time vogue but [illegible] is remembered of Ferdinand Roybet today. His pictures fit best into [illegible] age when every American nabob was building him a castle for a home. The painter was himself a victim of the same love for display and while he had advanced past the anecdotal phase of early nineteenth century art, so that for the most part his pictures were pictorial rather than literary, at the same time he let himself be submerged by the desire to do big and showy things in which his accomplishment was only second rate.

"The Cavalier" is painted upon a walnut panel and bears the artist's signature both upon the surface and the back. It is one of an unusually interesting collection of the work of nineteenth century French painters in the St. Louis Museum.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

—statuary suffers from old age and has to be rejuvenated by beauty doctors just the same as human faces and figures? It does, and reports which have just come to hand concerning the accomplishments of Thomas H. Bleakney, technician to the Pennsylvania Museum in Philadelphia, indicate that he is filling the role of beauty doctor to wood, marble and plaster statues with results that rival some of the marvels wrought by beauty parlors. Under his deft touches, aged carvings shake off their senility and bloom again in the pristine beauty of their better days.

Old age works its ravages on art objects through chemical changes and bacteria which mar the "complexion" and leave cracks and wounds to fill with dirt. Under Bleakney's direction, these inanimate faces are treated for their looks by means of soap and water, aseptic solutions and healing salves. Often the statue doctor's work resembles that of a surgeon, for wounds are cut into, cauterizations of diseased parts are made and even amputations are sometimes performed. Thymol, formalin, peroxide of hydrogen and ammonia are used sometimes.

THE FASTEST GUNMAN

ANOTHER thing I always wondered about was who, among all the rapid-firing gun-toters of the old West, was the fastest with a six-shooter. By a man who has made a life-long study of these strenuous frontiersmen I am informed that it was none other than our old friend Wild Bill Hickok, the Abilene Marshal who gained his two-gun reputation fighting on the side of law and order. He never picked a quarrel, but, as he once explained, "When I'm put upon, it seems everything gets cloudy and I lose all control of myself." That got him the name of Wild Bill, but it didn't stand in the way of his marksmanship. Once the McCanless gang caught him alone in a cabin and went in after him—10 of them, all armed to the teeth. Wounded with buckshot in 11 places and slashed in 13, Wild Bill unlimbered his six guns, killed four of the gang and drove the rest away with a bowie knife. After all that he was shot at last—from behind. An old enemy got him in the back while he was playing poker at Deadwood, S. D.

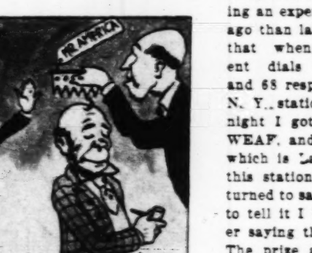
HOW TOMBSTONE WAS NAMED

WHAT was there so dead about Tombstone, Ariz., as to suggest this graveyard designation for the Copper State's one-time mining metropolis? Maybe others have wondered about it as I have. Well, here is the way it has been explained to me: While Geronimo was on the warpath with his murderous Apaches and the early settlers of Arizona were concentrating about the forts for shelter, a prospector named Ed Schieffiin came in with news of a rich strike in the Indian country. Remarking to an officer that he expected to go back and find a fortune, he drew this retort: "Yes, you'll go back and find your tombstone. Geronimo'll get you." But Schieffiin went back and when he did locate his mines he named the bonanza "Tombstone."

THE HOMECOMING

A COUPLE separated forty-four years ago by a flood, in which each believed the other had drowned, were brought together at Mulberry, Kansas, recently when their grandchildren from later marriages became acquainted and learned through comparing stories of the flood that their respective grandparents were once husband and wife. They still are husband and wife for that matter, although the woman has been married twice since the separation and the husband also has another mate.

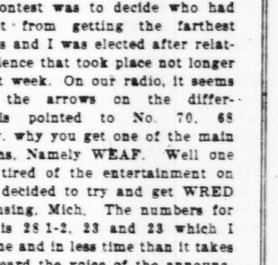
Forty-four years ago, Joe Kennedy, a Civil War veteran, lived with his 19-year-old blind wife in a cabin on the banks of the Maris des Cygne, northeast of Scott. One winter night the river was flooded and Kennedy went out to salvage the logs of his sawmill. He failed to return, and the wife, driven from the house by the water, took refuge in a tree, from which she was later rescued. When Kennedy did return he found the cabin had been swept away and gave his wife up as lost. He left the State for several years, but later returned and became wealthy. The "widow" remarried, outlived two other husbands and recently has been supporting herself by taking in washing.



THE EARTH AS A BOILER

WITH the rapid dwindling of the world's natural resources in stored fuel—coal, oil and gas—engineers and scientists, we read, have in recent months been investigating the practicability of harnessing the vast reservoir of heat in the interior of the earth. The latest plan, developed by a German engineer, proposes the drilling of two shafts, one straight and the other with a series of bends, to a depth of about three miles, which is more than twice the depth of any shaft now in existence. Both shafts would lead to a large subterranean chamber cut out of solid rock. Since the temperature rises about one degree Centigrade with every 100 feet downward, the walls of the chamber at a depth of three miles would be approximately 330 degrees Fahrenheit. At a depth of three miles the air pressure is estimated to be about 30 pounds to the square inch. The boiling point of water under this pressure would be 248 degrees Fahrenheit, more than 80 degrees lower than the temperature of the chamber.

From a reservoir at the surface the water would be sent down through the bent shaft and as it rushed downward it would become gradually hotter, until at a depth of about two miles, it would turn to steam, which would be forced on down into the chamber by the pressure of the water above. In the chamber the steam would be superheated and expanded and would seek an outlet through the straight shaft. Back at the surface, according to the plan, it would be distributed to power plants or establishments where needed. Engineers estimate that a steady flow of 13 cubic yards of water a second would produce steam equivalent to that derived from burning 70,000 tons of coal a day.



ONCE A HEN: NOW LOOK!

NOW comes to me the story of the hen who got tired of being a hen and became a rooster. Her motherly cluck has changed to a lusty cock-a-doodle-doo and instead of tripping about the barnyard with the gait of the perfect lady she once was, she—he, it—struts about with full masculine equipment of spurs, wattles, long tail feathers and a gaudy comb.

It's all just another example of what modern feminine restlessness can do once it gets started. This hen, so declares a recent issue of Southern Life, was as recently as 1924 just a plain home-loving hen on a farm at Candler, N. C. She laid her eggs, waited patiently while they hatched and then sallied forth clucking to her brood. She brought up two broods of fine normal chicks in 1924 and nobody questioned her right to be called "her." Then came the fall and the molting season. When she began to put out new feathers, behold! She not only grew a rooster's tail plumage, but also the other decorations of the barnyard sultan, and when the other hens went back to egg laying, she stalked about as master of the harem, challenging other cocks and crowing with a baritone voice that was entirely convincing.

Men! Here's a Contract

NEW HAIR in 30 Days Or Absolutely No Cost

Save Yourself From Baldness. Stop Falling Hair. Here Is Your Contract—Grow New Hair in 30 Days or This Trial Won't Cost You One Cent

By ALOIS MERKE
Founder of Famous Merke Institute, Fifth Avenue, New York

THAT'S clear, isn't it? I make no conditions. No matter how fast your hair is falling out, no matter how much of it is gone—this offer stands. I don't care what treatments you've tried without results—here is a scientific system that will give you a new head of hair—or I pay the whole cost of the treatment myself.

How am I able to make this amazing offer? Because the Merke System of hair growth is founded upon a recent scientific discovery. I have found during many years of experience in the Merke Institute, Fifth Avenue, N. Y. that in most cases of baldness the hair roots are NOT dead, but merely dormant—asleep!

Here's Proof!

"The condition of my hair was very bad. After six weeks treatment with the Thermocap, my head was covered with short hair and it was no longer dull and lifeless. I kept up the treatment and in return I have as good a head of hair as any one could wish."
Clarence Terpening, 158 South Cedar St., Galesburg, Ill.

"Your Thermocap has done a wonderful thing in bringing back my hair where all other things had failed. The top of my head is now entirely covered with hair after using the Thermocap for about two months and new hair seems to be coming in all the time."
Harry A. Brown, 91 Hampton Place, Utica, N. Y.

It is an absolute waste of time—and money—to try to penetrate to these dormant roots with massages and tonics, which merely treat the surface skin. You wouldn't expect to make a tree grow by rubbing "growing fluid" on bark—you'd get at the roots.

And that is just what my scientific system does. It penetrates below the surface of the scalp. It stimulates the dormant roots. It wakens them. The tiny capillaries begin to pump nature's own nourishment into them. Hair begins to grow again. And here's the wonderful thing about this system. It is simple. You use it at home—in any home that has electricity—without the slightest discomfort.

This Is Your Bona-Fide Contract

Thousands of men and women have now treated successfully at the Merke Institute. Hundreds daily are getting amazing results from this less expensive home treatment. I'm so sure that all cases of baldness are curable—that even some that nothing in the world can help—that so many men and women write in full praise of the wonderful results that I gladly make this offer. Here is your contract—try this remarkable treatment for 30 days. Then if you're not entirely delighted with the new growth of hair—tell me at once. Say that my system hasn't done what I claimed for it—and I'll see that the 30 day trial doesn't cost you one cent.

FIDDLE—The Story of a Dog

By DAVID NEWELL.

ONE of the hardest things for a hunter to do is to admit the ability of another man's dog. During the past 15 years I have owned in the neighborhood of 400 dogs. I do not mean all at once! I never allowed my stock to go over forty-six. Among these have been bird dogs of finely sensitive brains, hounds of rare speed and endurance, airedales of extraordinary grit, and a few nondescript mongrels, valuable only for their lovable qualities. Personally, I am partial to hounds, and I have owned some of the best. Nevertheless, I am compelled to admit that the best hound that I ever saw belongs to a Mormon cowpuncher in the mountains of Arizona. For two months I watched this dog work, and the more I saw, the more I marvelled.

His name was Fiddle, a name derived from his long, quavering cry. Listening to the mellow bay floating across a canyon, one was reminded of the tremolo notes of a rare old violin. Not only did Fiddle have a beautiful voice; there was something in that voice that spoke of determination, reliability and infinite patience. When Fiddle struck the trail of a bear or mountain lion, there was only one way of escape for that bear or mountain lion, which was to take wing and fly!

As long as tracks were made, Fiddle would follow them. Of course, there were times when we stopped him ourselves, for some of the trails which he wanted to work on were impracticable. When one is trailing a lion several things must be considered. The first is the age of the trail—that is, how long since it was made. The second is the course of the trail. Sometimes a mountain lion travels eighty miles straight away. In such a case, it is usually a waste of time to try to follow him, unless the track is very fresh.

Fiddle could follow the coldest trail that I have ever seen a dog handle. Several times he worked out a lion track that was three days and nights old to start with. Because a bear leaves a still stronger scent, Fiddle could unravel an even older bear track. Once having struck a track, the perseverance of this old dog was remarkable. Food, water and rest were forgotten until he had treed his game. Once, having treed a lion, he stayed at the tree ten hours alone—and kept that lion up there!

OLD JERRY, his owner, was naturally proud of him, and woe to the man who raised a finger against Fiddle! One day as we were resting after a bear chase, Fiddle walked over and lay down beside me. I spoke to him and patted his sleek, brown head. Jerry laughed.

"That's the trouble with the ol' cuss. He ain't got no more affection in him than one o' these here malapai rocks. I've raised him from a pup, but he'd take right up with anybody that'd feed him a little an' hunt him a lot."

As Jerry spoke, I happened to feel a rough scar under the hair on the dog's shoulder.

"What's this scar"—— I began.

"Yessir," interrupted the cowboy, taking no notice of my question, "that ol' pup sure ain't a one-man dog. I come mighty near losin' him one time owin' to that same quality. I was a-huntin' over in the Black Range toward New Mexico then, an' had a pretty fair pack o' dogs. Fiddle wasn't but three years old, but he was workin' right alongsides o' the old heads, and doin' his part in everythin'. I thought a heap of him. One day we got after a big ol' cinnamon bear an' I never seen a bear run so in my life. Why, that ol' son-of-a-gun got right up and quit the country. 'Course I rode like a drunken Indian tryin' to stay in the race, but the goin' was too rough—too many big canyons to cross—an' the dogs and bear got away from me. I was three days findin' the pack, an' when I rounded 'em up, ol' Fiddle was missin'. For two months I scoured the mountains lookin' for him, but without no luck. Then one day an ol' Apache stops by my camp.

"'Me savvy where dog—good dog. Catchum lion, catchum bear,' says the Indian. 'Mebbe so you buy um?'

"'What look like?'" says I.

"'All same that horse,' says the Indian, pointin' to a big blue roan.

"'Whereabouts this dog?' says I, gettin' excited.

"'Aku,' grunts the Indian, pointin' to the west, 'mebbe so fifty miles.'

"WELL, the result of it was that I hired the old Indian to go with me. I had a mighty good hunch that the dog he was talkin' about was Fiddle. We went over into New Mexico an' ended up in a little minin' town full o' Greasers an' about forty kinds o' Indians. I seen right then that I would have a hard time gettin' my dog—if it should turn out to be my dog. I figured that the Indian I had hired had stolen the dog and carried him over to this place, but I didn't dare do nothin' to him without ruinin' my chances o' findin' Fiddle. But I aimed to take my dog home with me, an' if it meant shootin' I was all set to burn as much powder as any doggone Greaser in the town.

"First thing I hunted up the sheriff. He was a sour lookin' cuss and didn't act none too friendly.

"'All right. I'll go with you,' says he. 'But I don't believe your dog's around here. How're you gonna prove it, anyway?'

"'When a feller's raised a dog from a pup, the dog's pretty apt to recognize him, ain't he?' I answers.

"Now, I'd have had cold feet if I hadn't had an ace in the hole to fall back on. I was sort of afraid that ol' Fiddle wouldn't make much fuss over me. Like I told you, he ain't never been demonstrative.

"Well, we started out, the old Indian a-leadin' the way. Finally we come to a Greaser's shack. A shifty-eyed hombre was sittin' on the front steps, an' the sheriff hollers:

"'Howdy, thar, Hozay Ramong. Que tal?'

"From the way this sheriff savvies Mex, I figure he's gonna side right in with Jose Ramon. The Greaser comes out to the gate.

"'Que quiere?' says he, lookin' at me.

"'The sheriff jabbers a lot o' Mex, and the Greaser starts to scowl. I reaches down in my pants an' hitches the butt o' my six gun around where I could git to it in a hurry. Finally the sheriff says:

"'Hozay Ramong's got a dog here like the one you're lookin' for, but he says he's raised him from a pup. I guess you're out o' luck.'

"'Let's see the dog,' says I.

"THE GREASER whistled, and out walked ol' Fiddle! He was poor as a snake, and the only bed he had was under that dirty ol' minin' shack. I felt the blood gittin' in my eyes right then. Fiddle walked up to me, sniffed my leg, an' then the ol' son-of-a-gun turned an' went back under the shack! You could have knocked me over with a feather. The Greaser laughed an' the Sheriff laughed, but the ol' Indian looked awful solemn. I seen right then that he had stole the dog all right, but he didn't dare squawk. He didn't know whether he preferred a Greaser's knife to a cowpuncher's six-shooter, an' he knew it would be one of the two if he said anything one way or the other. So he didn't say nothin'—just stood there with a face on him like a piece o' flint rock. I seen it was time to play my ace, so I says:

"'What's this Hozay Ramong's last name?'

"'Vegas,' growls the sheriff.

"'Mine's Earl,' says I, kinda short. 'Some folks spell it E-R-L.'

"'Yeh?' says the sheriff with a sneer. 'Well, Mr. E-R-L, you can pack your outfit an' head out.'

"At this, the Greaser laughs again. By this time I am red hot. For two bits, I'd have throwed down an' plugged sheriff an' Indian both. But I controls myself.

"'Ask Mr. Vegas is he got a pair o' sheep shears,' says I. 'He looks like a sheep herder to me.' The Greaser savvies this last remark an' he starts to reach in his shirt front.

"'An' tell him I actually want the shears,' says I. 'I didn't mean to insult him, but if he wants to take it that way, I'm satisfied. An' tell him he'd shore better leave that knife in his shirt, or I'll make a lead mine outta him.'

"The sheriff tells the Greaser about the shears and he goes into the house, grumblin' to himself. Finally he brings the shears.

"'Here, Fiddle!' I calls. The ol' dog come out in a lope. He thinks we is goin' huntin'. I lays him down an' goes to work with them shears. In about ten minutes I have his whole left side clipped short.

"Now it's my time to laugh. The sheriff an' the Greaser stand there with their eyes poppin'. Fiddle yawns and gets to his feet. The sun shines bright on his left side, an' under the hair three letters show real plain—a big E on his shoulder, a R on his side, an' a L on his flank!

"'I LIVE in Arizona,' says I to the sheriff, 'an' over there we don't limit our brandin' to cattle. It's kind of a good habit to git into, at that, specially with all sorts o' folks ramblin' around loose.' An' I throws a glance that would have killed a hydrophobia skunk at the Greaser an' the ol' Indian.

"'Well, I guess you don't need me no more,' says the sheriff.

"'I shore don't,' says I. 'Come on, Fiddle.' I had about forgot the Indian. He walked up an' says:

"'Mebbe so you pay me.' I grabbed a handful of forty-five cartridges out o' my pocket an' held 'em under his nose.

"'Mebbe so I'll pay you these, you dog-stealin' tripe eater,' I hollered. 'Now you vamoose or I'll start target practice. There ain't many wild Indians left, but I'll make you wild an' darn hard to catch if I ever see your hide again.'

"Then me an' Fiddle started home."

JERRY stopped and gazed across the canyon toward the setting sun.

"I was just going to ask you what the scar on his shoulder was," I laughed as I stroked the old dog's head.

POEMS OF ST. LOUIS

Byrne Marconnier.

III.—THE EXILE.

Caron ielet—Carondelet, of high romance,
A name like falling water or a firefly's dance;
The moon upon the river and the river to the sea—
Carondelet you're singing in the heart of me.

I still can hear the music of your slow sweet way,
And feel the rhytnm of the life in old Carondelet;
The bells that chimed at evening and the bells that rhymed at dawn—
All pulled by lusty whipsters that are long since gone.

I'm old myself, and ailing, and I haven't long to wait,
So let me see Carondelet before it is too late.
And where I'm steering none can tell, but this I know,
I cannot leave without goodbye, once, ere I go.

Carondelet—Carondelet—an unforgotten dream
Is lying under clover by your soft-flowing stream.
The moon is on the river and the river's on to sea,
And in my heart there is an ache that would be free.

Old visions rise like morning on the mirror of my mind.
Old dreams like flaming comets light me, old and nearly blind.
A mist is on the river, and a night bird's cry—
I'm coming back, Carondelet, I'm coming back to die.

LIVING OR DEAD

smoother instantly, and the roar of the motor began to diminish. Harry Myrick's cadaverous face come up over the windshield. Pelly, terror-stricken, was doubled over in his seat, hands still gripping the cowling. Then, suddenly, the motor was throttled, and Harry Myrick's voice boomed out resonantly:

"Joe Pelly!"

Pelly, who had not heard his own name spoken in six years, turned as though his muscles had become congealed. Face twisted, lips parted, he took in that yellowish specter drawn somehow from a grave at Penang—took it in with eyes that were round, stark, unblinking.

Harry Myrick grinned at him, and uttered a long-drawn, sepulchral, "Ha ...ha...ha"...

The plane dived, gave a sickening lurch upward, whipping Pelly forward in his seat; it lashed about, tormented, in the sky.

Somehow, Pelly's confused, battered senses came to realize that South Haven was directly beneath him. He dared to look around toward the pilot's seat once more, and found there Red Luke's unconcerned face; that black-and-white-checked helmet which he had seen launched overboard. The roar of the motor died, and the field came flooding up beneath them; then the wheels were bounding along the ground and the tail-skid was biting into the earth, dragging them to a stop.

Two men stepped up to the plane. One of them pulled back his coat and showed a police badge. "Come on, Pelly," he said. "We want you."

Pelly struggled in the belt until Red Luke unfastened the catch; then he arose and tumbled out into the arms of the two officers, babbling incoherently, pointing.

"He seemed to go kind o' nuts in the air," remarked Red. "Acted like he was seeing things. There are some people that just can't stand flying. But he'll be all right after he's been locked up a while and has a chance to think it over."

Pelly, limp, blubbering now, was pointing skyward. "Up there...up there, I tell you...Myrick...I saw him, I tell you...up there!"...

"That's all right," said one of the men. "You tell the Judge about it. Come on."

Red watched them stow him in a taxi, and remarked over the edge of the cockpit: "If you want to kiss your little playmate good-by, you better hurry."

"Nope," answered Myrick. "Me and Joe Pelly are square."

It was nearly midnight. Stuffy Johnson arose and stretched. "Where do you think that crazy little runt has gone to, Red?"

"I dunno. He's all right. He'll show up some time tonight."

"Well, I'm going to bed. G'night."

"Me, too. 'Night."

Red was awakened by Harry Myrick shaking him by the shoulder. "Wake up, Red. I got a surprise for you!" Red mumbled unintelligibly. "Wake up, you poor slabhead, an' see what I got! Come on, Dooley, get up on the bed 'n' tell him about it."

A long warm wet tongue took a swipe at Red Luke's face, and he sleepily fought it off, but the tongue was irrepressible. Red sat up to behold a reddish blackish mutt puppy facing him, tail thumping the bed.

"You remember that day at Long Beach when I told you about Pelly?" demanded Dauntless Harry Myrick. "Well, I got thinkin' about it, an' how we were sayin' that day that we wanted a dog, only we didn't have any place to carry him. Remember?"

"I didn't want any dog!" responded Red stoutly. The pup pounced upon him with fervid enthusiasm.

"Sure you did!" said Harry. "Well, today I felt so darn' good after I cooked Pelly's hash"——

"Who cooked it?"

"Well—we did. But it was my idea, anyhow. It was my imagination. So I gets thinking about it, an' I decide we got to have a dog. An' then I found out where the poundmaster lived an' I went there an' gave him twenty-five bucks to open the joint up an' let me have my pick of all the unclaimed mutts."

"You poor sap, you're always blowing your money!" observed Red, giving the dog a pat and fending off the consequent assault. "Gosh, he's got sharp teeth!"

"Sure has! Well," pursued Harry Myrick, "I'm a pretty happy mutt tonight, an' so I thought I'd make some other little mutt happy. And he sure is! Dooley is one happy mutt!"

"Dooley? That's a fine name for a dog!"

"He answers to it, anyhow," replied Myrick. "Don't you, Dooley?"

The pup's tail thumped the bed.

"Sure—he'd answer to anything. Wouldn't you, Fido?" The tail thumped in even wilder ecstasy.

"He's only a pup," protested Harry Myrick. "He'll learn that Fido ain't his name, an' that Dooley is. Give him a chance."

A half hour later, Red's voice sounded through the darkness, accompanied by Dooley's tail: "Say, Harry, let's cut a hole in the bottom of the compartment and put in a sheet of glass so Dooley can look down and see where we're going."

"Sure! He'd like that!" answered Harry Myrick. "We'll rig up the compartment tomorrow. Shut up, Dooley! G'night, Red."

"G'night, Harry."

When that Corn is gone

A corn isn't just a pain—it's a drain. A tax on the whole nervous system. A blight, not alone on the toe, but on the spirits and the disposition. . . . Doctors know that a corn can darken a man's whole viewpoint on life. Headache, fatigue, irritability and indigestion are often reflexes of a throbbing corn . . . "Pain-messages" shoot to every nerve center, when a corn starts broadcasting. . . . If you would know blissful relief, apply Blue-jay to that burning corn. In ten seconds, the world will seem a better place to live in. . . . A tiny cushion—cool as velvet—fits over the corn and stops the pain at once. You wear it two days in solid comfort. When you take it off, the corn comes with it—gently removed by the little brown disc of magic medication.

4 Men in 7 Bald at 40

—91% needlessly, by tests

Our experience shows falling hair most always due to Infected Sebum. Now quickly overcome.

Van Ess now has a delightful faint new odor

Written Guarantee to Grow Hair This New Way—or Money Refunded

This is to offer you, under absolute money-back guarantee, the new Van Ess Treatment, which, under actual tests, grew hair on 91 heads in 100.

It embodies a new principle. A principle heretofore unknown to science. Now high authorities admit baldness may be greatly diminished. For hair roots seldom die from natural causes. And this method revives them. Test it yourself at our risk. Over one million men and women are now using it.

Hair Roots Rarely Naturally Die

We estimate that 4 men in 7 are bald or partially bald, at 40. Our investigation proves this to be unnecessary. Proves only about 9 men in 100 need ever be bald!

Baldness is a symptom of a disease. Note this fact and mark it. It is most frequently a symptom of infection of the Sebum—the scalp oil.

Remove this Infected Sebum and hair will almost always grow. Under the bald scalp the hair roots are generally alive. We have demonstrated this to be true in about 91% of our cases of falling hair or baldness.

We claim this new method reaches the roots. That it makes hair grow. But the public has often been deceived. So we guarantee it. You take no chance of loss.

New Hair or No Money

We make our guarantee without reservation—without strings. It is absolute. We guarantee to stop falling hair. We guarantee to grow new hair in 90 days. Sometimes it grows much sooner. But usually this treatment requires about 3 bottles of Van Ess. If we fail, your money back without question.

Note that your own dealer gives the warrant with each 3-bottle purchase. Thus you assume no risk. Over 800,000 men have made this test. It is safe for us thus to guarantee the treatment. For experiments of years have proven it effective to us on 91 heads in 100. Foremost authorities approve it. Noted dermatologists now employ similar methods—some charge as much as $300.00 for a similar basic treatment.

We offer it in correct form for home use, at the price of an ordinary "tonic."

The Infected Sebum

We have traced about 91% of all baldness and falling hair to infection of the scalp oil (Sebum). Sebum forms at the roots of the hair. Its natural function is to lubricate the hair.

But Sebum cakes on the scalp. It forms a breeding place for bacteria. It clings to hair and destroys it. It lodges in hair follicles and plugs them. Then germs by the millions start to feed upon the hair. Loss of hair soon is marked. Then with neglect comes total baldness.

You can see this Sebum on your scalp, in the form of an oil. Or, when accumulated and dried with other ingredients, as dandruff. But it does not kill the hair roots. Hence when you remove it new hair has a chance to grow. This is a scientific fact—medical authorities will tell you so. You must remove the Infected Sebum.

Now We Remove It

For years, science has experimented to combat Infected Sebum. We found a 91% effective treatment.

Now we have embodied it in a home treatment. It is called Van Ess Liquid Scalp Massage.

It is applied in a new way—a scientific way. (Note the illustration at right.) It penetrates to the follicles of the hair. It combats the Sebum and removes it. Results are marked. They are quick. It stops falling hair. We have demonstrated that it grows new hair.

We urge you to try this new way. We know the statements we make are amazing—almost incredible, but remember, we back them with an absolute guarantee.

There is a guarantee in the top of each package. Read it first before you buy. Note its fairness. Note that we let you be the judge.

Note the results yourself. Mark the healthy condition of your scalp—the freedom from dandruff. Look in your mirror—see for yourself.

Go today to any drug or department store. Obtain the VAN ESS 3-bottle treatment. With it you will get our signed guarantee. Hence it is folly not to try it.

Costs Nothing

Unless we grow hair. The Van Ess 3-bottle treatment is absolutely guaranteed. You are the sole judge. The warrant is given by your own dealer. All we require is his signature showing you have purchased a ninety-day treatment. If it fails, we refund your money. Hence you assume no risk making this test.

Note this New Way

—It Massages the Treatment Directly to the Follicles of the Hair

This patent applicator makes hair treatment, at home, possible for the first time. Blood alone revives. Treatment must reach the infected area under the surface. We accomplish it, as the illustration above shows, with hollow nipples of scientifically perfect rubber massage-cap which comes with every bottle of Van Ess Hair Grower. The medicament is fed directly to the follicles of the hair. At the same time the flow of blood is stimulated by massage to the hair root.

"THE TEST I have given Fleischmann's Yeast has been complete and most satisfactory. About a year ago I consulted a specialist. He found my condition run down, gave me a serum to prevent colds, and advised Fleischmann's Yeast once a day. I followed directions for a month. To my delight my former vigor was restored. And my former constipation has disappeared. I am still eating Yeast. I feel fresh and vital every day."

J. Milnor Dorey, Trenton, N. J.

"TEN YEARS OF WORK as a press telegrapher, one of the most sedentary of occupations, had made me a chronic sufferer from constipation and many of its attendant evils. After a severe illness two years ago, Fleischmann's Yeast was recommended as a tonic and general body builder. Morning and night I took one cake of yeast in milk. Within a comparatively short time the constipation had disappeared, my complexion cleared, and I felt as if years had dropped from my shoulders."

Frank W. Dougherty, Erie, Pa.

And all found the Way to Health

For them fresh energy—new zest in living—through one simple food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals; on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. 789, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York.

"THIS SPRING, just recovering from a serious illness, I asked my physician if Yeast would do me any good. He said that it was very good, so I began eating it. I am no longer troubled with indigestion, headaches, or stomach troubles of any kind, nor do I any longer wish to hide my face on account of pimples. Instead of the pale sallow look, I have a good rosy complexion and a good appetite. Now I can eat a hearty meal, and enjoy it. Fleischmann's Yeast has wrought this wonderful change, for at present I use no other remedies."

Jenny Chartrand, St. Hyacinthe, Que.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—banishes constipation, skin troubles, stomach disorders. Try adding Fleischmann's Yeast to your diet for a few weeks. Eat two or three cakes regularly every day.

"SCRATCHES FESTERED, pin pricks turned to boils—I was a rival for Job's 'laurels.' I developed a morbid, craven terror of pain. A neighbor suggested yeast and, though cynical about it, I took 4 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily for one month. The incredible happened. A boil just starting dried away painlessly, minor blemishes on my back, which I had had in series for years, totally disappeared. I grew steadily stronger, and life reassumed normal perspective. Finally I, who had dragged to my housework, half fainting from the least exertion, had surplus energy and wiped dishes dancing to phonograph records!"

Mrs. R. G. Booth, Port Washington, N. Y.

11 DROWNED WHEN LAUNCH CAPSIZES ON FLORIDA COAST

Three Others Are Missing —23, Principally Kansans, Were on Craft at Time of Accident.

12-YEAR-OLD BOY RESCUES FOUR

Party on Launch Were Land Seekers and Were Guests of Real Estate Company.

By the Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, Fla., Oct. 12.—Fishermen and other volunteers today were searching the rocks and jetties for three additional bodies expected to bring to 14 the death list of the 40-foot launch, Clara B., capsized in the Atlantic at the mouth of Sebastian Inlet late yesterday with a party of 23, principally Kansans.

The 11 bodies already recovered have been identified tentatively as those of the following persons:

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Barton, Wichita, Kan.

Miss Mabel Larson, Wichita, recently of Omaha.

D. U. Ruckles, Wichita.

Miss Loretta Dreiling, Wichita.

Mrs. Locke Davidson, Melbourne formerly of Wichita.

C. E. Roach and son, Daniel, of Melbourne Fla.

Harry Coppock, Kansas City.

Frank Driscoll, Melbourne.

A. L. Wagstaff, Kansas City.

The missing are listed as John Salmans, a Mr. Husted and a Mr. Davidson, all of Wichita.

The rescued include Capt. Ed. Arnold, Malabar, Fla., owner and skipper of the boat; a Mrs. Ruckles, presumably Mrs. D. U. Ruckles, wife of the man by that name who was drowned; Mrs. and Mrs. David Barnes, Wichita; Mrs. Dickson, believed to be from Dodge City, Kan.; Mrs. Catherine Hill, Paula Valley, Ok.; a Mrs. Campbell and a Mr. Sears of Wichita, and Locke Davidson, manager of the Melbourne Farms Co., hosts to the party of junketers.

All of Rescued Bruised.

All of the rescued suffered cuts and bruises when dashed against the rocks, but the condition of only one, Mrs. Ruckles, was regarded as serious.

Passage of the inlet was made safely, but because of rough seas outside, Capt. Arnold decided to turn back. The boat failed to respond to the helm quickly enough, some of the rescued said, and was a quarter way around when a wave swept over the deck, washing several members overboard. The next wave which hit the craft turned it over.

A Vero physician called to the scene treated Sears, who said he had been caught under the boat when it turned over and that he had clung inside for more than an hour. Rescue work was hampered by heavy seas.

The majority of those on the launch were tourists from Kansas and other Western states, here as guests of the Melbourne Farms Co., which brought them to Melbourne to look over the company's properties.

The boat, chartered from Capt. Arnold by the company left here yesterday afternoon with the tourists for a sea journey.

Boy Saves Four.

The heroic efforts of James Arnold, 12-year-old son of Capt. Arnold, saved the lives of four passengers who had been thrown into the raging breakers when his father's launch turned over.

Survivors said the lad swam ashore and obtained a small boat, returned to the yacht, jumped into the water and, fighting against the high waves, succeeded in placing four persons in the boat and landing them safely.

Dan Roach, 7, went down with his father, C. E. Roach, and Loretta Dreilling, 17, who had accompanied D. U. Ruckles on the excursion, was another youthful victim.

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 12.—F. T. Barton, drowned near Melbourne, Fla., yesterday, was a Wichita contractor. Miss Mabel Larson came to Wichita a month ago from Omaha.

D. U. Ruckles, another victim, helped start the excursionists to Melbourne. Miss Loretta Dreiling, 17 years old, accompanied him.

Mrs. Locke Davidson was the wife of Locke Davidson, former Wichita banker, who left here last year to develop Florida land. C. E. Roach left Wichita last year to join Davidson manage the Florida properties.
